WEDNESDAY 16 JULY 1997

WEATHER: Cloudy with drizzle

(IR 45P) 40p

IN THE TABLOID MOTHER SIMEON,

IN THE TABLOID BRIDGET JONES: UNDRESSED FOR SUCCESS

COMMENT p15

INSIDE THE TABLOID OF OFFICE, LEGAL AND BANKING APPOINTMENTS

Murder of the King of Glitz

Phil Davison and Tamsin Blanchard Fashion Editor

Italian fashion designer Gianni Versace, the "king of glitz" whose flamboyanı styles are worn by the world's wealthiest and most glamorous stars, was shot dead on the steps of his oceanfront Miami Beach mansion yesterday morning by a young gun-man firing at point-blank range.

Despite its reputation for violence, Miami went into a state of shock on hearing that Versace, 50, had been gunned down amid passing roller-bladers and sun-worshippers in the city's renowned Ocean Drive art deco

Witnesses described the gunman as a white man, in his mid-20s, dressed in a white shirt and grey shorts and having a backpack, who walked away after shooting the designer twice in the back of the head.

Raising the theory that the worldrenowned couturier could have been a victim of organised crime or that the shooting was drug-related, Mi-ami Police Chief Richard Barreto said: "I believe that he was targeted... This was not a random act of

News of Versace's death shocked the fashion world, as the story spread from Miami to New York to Milan. Paris and London. Nobody could quite believe that the man who only last Sunday unveiled his autumn-winter couture collection would no longer be doing fittings for his jet-set clients, would not be dressing Madonna or Elton John ever again.

That collection, held before the world's press and buyers as well as Hollywood celebrities Demi Moore, Gabriel Byrne, and Leonardo Di-Caprio, was the end of an era that began with his first ready-to-wear col-lection in Milan in 1978. He was the king of frock 'n' roll, the one designer who could outglitz them all - and give star appeal, no matter who they were.

'Giorgio did it." joked fashion insiders, referring to the long-running rivalry between Versace and Armani. Armani meanwhile, issued a statement that the news had left him in shock: "Gianni was young and talented, and he worked so hard. He had overcome a very serious disease with strength and dignity, embracing life with energy and a tremendous desire to accomplish things. Gianni Versace, together with a handful of names, symbolises Italian fashion all over the world. My reaction is one found grief." Six years ago, Versace bought a rundown Mediterranean-style hotel, squeezed between the pastel-coloured art deco hotels on Ocean Drive, and renovated it using Spanish and Italian techniques. Its 75-foot frontage faces on to 11th Street, a block from the popular Clevelander bar, and its observatory tower faces

Yesterday, thousands of curious locals and tourists gathered in the park, of revolt against such an unnatural gazing across at the bloodstains and and violent death, and one of proa blue tarpaulin marking the spot where the designer, son of a seamstress from Reggio Calabria in southern Italy, fell.

Witnesses said Versace, his grey hair cut short and thinning, walked as usual from the beach's 24-hour News Cafe after having breakfast and buying Italian newspapers. But one café waitress told reporters she thought he had been acting strangethe grassy park, palm trees, jogging path and beach where the designer ly, by passing the café on the other side of the street before coming in. He later walked the four blocks to

Versace's life

Photograph: AFP

1946 Born the son of a tailor in Reggio Calabria, southern Italy. 1972 Went into business with his prother and sister

1978 Launched his label 1982 Named best fashion designer for his 1982/83 autumn/winter col-1984 Launched his fragrance Versace l'Homme.

1990 Opened his second boutique in New York and his 11th in the United States

1991 Launched fragance Versus. 1992 Opened a five storey store in Bond Street, London. 1994 Elizabeth Hurley is launched on the road to fame when she appears in that dress.

1997 Announced plans to float his his home at 1116 Ocean Drive, past the renowned Mango's Tropical Cuban café and the Clevelander, and was opening the black wrought-iron gates of his home shortly before 9am when the gunman shot him twice in the back of the head. The designer was said to be dead by the time he was taken to Jackson Memorial Hospital. From behind a cordon, reporters could see his blood staining the half-dozen steps and a stretch of the Ocean Drive

The gunman apparently fled north and may have changed his clothes in a car park on 13th Street, two blocks from the house

Friends said Versace lived in the house most of the year, when not attending fashion shows, along with two male friends called Antonio and Paul, and, occasionally, his sister Do-natella. Several members of Miami Beach's gay community were among the crowds that gathered behind a police cordon yesterday. One was briefly detained after trying to break through the cordon to toss flowers close to the spot of his death.

"He was a gentle man. I'm only trying to express my feelings for him, the young man said later.

One report said Versace had had an appointment with a personal fitness trainer at his home yesterday morning.

Friends at Miami Beach's glossy fahion magazine Ocean Drive described yesterday how Versace's arrival six years ago had boosted not only the fashion industry but Miami Beach's entire image. He was part of a movement to the resort by stars including Madonna and Sylvester Stallone.

"He was the most giving man. When we launched our first edition, he almost took over. He got us Claudia Schiffer, in a black Versace wn, for the first cover," said Ocean Drive editor Jason Binn.

Alex Penelas, mayor of Metroarea), said: "Versace embodied the energy and vibrance of South Beach. To a large extent, it was Versace's presence here that brought this community fame and fortune, that placed us on the cutting edge of fashion and entertaintment circles throughout the world. For all of that, we are eternally grateful."

Dark world behind the glamour,

Fashion, page 12 Death of an icon: Gianni Versace, gunned down in Miami yesterday

School inspectors to single out incompetent teachers by name

Education Editor

Inspectors will supply heads with individual profiles of each teacher under a controversial new grading system which will give schools more ammunition against bad teachers.

From September heads will receive confidential reports dividing each teacher's lessons into three groups: very good, satisfactory or unsatisfactory. They will then use the information along with their own evidence about individual teachers to decide what action to take. At present only the best and headteachers but Chris Woodto identify poor teachers.

FASHION VICTIM

Despite Mr Woodhead's estimate that there are 15,000 bad teachers, inspectors found only 88 poor or very poor ones in 2,000 inspections last year. The findings were based on a sevenpoint grading system for lessons. The Office for Standards in Education (Ofsted), which Mr Woodhead heads, says the new clearer picture of teachers' strengths and weaknesses. Unsatisfactory as well as poor and very poor teachers will now worst teachers are reported to appear in the bottom group. Heads will also have more head, the Chief Inspector of Schools, believes the arrange-currently report teachers to the head if the majority of lessons they are paid to do, they should-n't be in post," he said. Equally, seen are poor. However, a spokesman for Ofsted said: "We are not saying that these teachers should go. We are simply giving the heads the inspectors' observations to use as additional management informa-tion." One bad lesson would not be grounds for action, he said, but it would be seen as part of proposals will not necessarily mean that more teachers are dismissed but heads will have a Both headteachers and teachers had asked for more detailed information about individual teachers' performance, he added. Teachers would see their own profiles. Mr Woodhead told BBC Ran't be in post," he said. Equally, more teachers doing a brilliant job would get recognition.

The seven-point grading sys-tem for lessons would stay. Nigel de Gruchy, General Secretary of the National Association of Schoolmasters Union of Women Teachers, said headteachers were to blame for failing to discipline incompetent teachers. "Because heads have been unable or unwilling to act on the information they have, it is most unfair to make teachers pay the price by imposing a very crude and quite unprofessional system on them." Heads said that they had no objections in principle to the plans but were concerned that the new system might be used to manipulate statistics on poor teachers to justify Mr Woodhead's assertion that there were

15,000 incompetent teachers. David Hart, General Secretary of the National Association of Head Teachers said: "To pretend that these Ofsted reports will lead to heads taking more disciplinary action is scaremongering. Heads already monitor the quality of teaching. Any head who failed to take action would be asking for trouble."

Stephen Byers, the school standards minister, said that the plans were "entirely in line with the education White Paper published last week. It is all about being accountable and measuring effectively standards

Road schemes backed

The Government is set to anger the Governmentalists by approving the majority of road schemes in the first stage of its review of the £6bn highway-building programme.

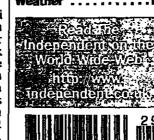

Page 4

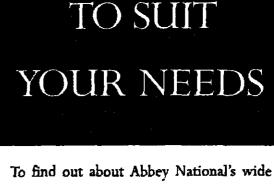

Pensions attack

The pensions industry was slammed yesterday in a hardhitting report from the Office of Fair Trading, only weeks after companies were carpeted by Treasury minister Helen Liddell. The OFT's director general, said millions of people had been sold short. Page 16

SONTENES

ing drumbarge i
Business & City16	-20
Comment	-15
Foreign News8	-10
Gazette	.11
Home News
Law Report	.11
Leading articles	.13
Oblituaries	.Ħ
Shares	.19
Sport	24
THE TABLOD
Arts	6.7
Arts reviews
Bridget Jones Feature Games Listings16
	717
Radio & TV19
Travel	.70

MORTGAGES

DESIGNED

range of mortgages, simply pop into your local branch, or call Abbey National ref. A571A/13. 0800 100 800

Direct, quoting

YOUR HOME IS AT RISK IF YOU DO NOT KEEP UP REPAYMENTS ON A MORTGAGE OR OTHER LOAN SECURED ON IT. Lines are open Monday to Friday Sam to Open and Saturday Sam to April To assist us an improving our service on the property and in the case of an endowment mortgage an endowment file policy for the amount of the advance and a charge over the policy All loans subject to mates and valuation and are not available to persons under 18 years of age. Written quotations are available on request. Abbey National ple, which is regulated by the Personal Investment Authoraty only selfs its own life assurance, pension and unit trust products. Abbey National and the Umbrella Couple symbol are trademarks of Abbey National ple, Abbey House, Baker Street, London NW1 6XL, United Kingdom,

Japanese lose their yen for Tetsu no Onna

Richard Lloyd Parry Tokyo

Long after her fall from grace at home, Baroness Thatcher of Tesse no Onna ("Woman of Iron") - remained a figure of great popularity and fascination in Japan. While British comedians were satirising her as a cruzed harridan, the ex-prime attended a meeting with the minister was making frequent and lucrative speaking tours of and gave a post-prandial Japan to adoring coverage from the local media.

One magazine was reported to have paid her £59,000 in 1991 for an interview, a formight ago, Japanese newspapers carried advertisements for high-powered seminars bearing the Thatcher countenance. But the Citizen Forum", as the event tide seems to be finally turning.

This month, a city in northern Japan is being sued by a group was called, was 17.2 million anything from the mayor. Both yen (£90,000), of which Yn15m was for Lady Thatcher's apdisclose how the huge sum was of irate citizens, after paying £79,000 for a few hours of the ex-prime minister's time. On 27 May last year Lady

Thatcher visited the city of Sendai, 300km north of Tokyo. Arriving in the late morning she mayor, a lunchtime reception, speech, followed by a question and answer session. In the afternoon, she visited a display of Burberry raincoats at a department store before being waved off on the bullet train back to Tokyo in late afternoon. The bill for the entire "Earth pearance, paid via the Dentsu broken down, so the group has advertising and public relations written to Lady Thatcher to ask

At the beginning of this month, a local volunteer organisation, Sendai Citizens Om-budsman, filed a legal action against the mayor and two of his officials, demanding that they pay back most of the money and sack four members of the city's audit committee. This is too expensive, and we asked the aucommittee for a breakdown," said Tsunesuke

Kurayama, the group's secrepayments. We haven't heard able for comment.

Denisu and the city refuse to how much she received.

A spokesman for the Sendai city office said that the Yn15m included fees for an interpreter and the PR agency. "We think that our citizens appreciated the event, and her speech was worth what we paid," she said. But a Japanese businessman who has hosted speaker meetings on Lady Thatcher's behalf called it "an absurd amount of money"

A member of Lady Thatcher's staff said yesterday that her tary-general. "Their answer was press spokesman is on holiday. that there is no problem with the and that no one else was avail-

significant shorts

Whitehall calls halt to NHS fundholder 'fast-track'

The Government today will announce the end of "fast-track" service for patients of GP fundholders with the abolition of the internal market in the National Health Service.

The move by Health ministers will make it clear to health authorities and hospital trusts that they should plan to give family doctors equal access to operations for their panents. Some doctors who ran their own budgets were given priority by hospitals, but the competition between GPs is set to end.

Frank Dobson, Secretary of State for Health, will signal plans to replace fundholding with more co-operation between GPs, fulfilling a Labour election manifesto commitment. Coin Brown

Sculptor charged over body parts

A tutor at the Prince of Wales's Institute of Architecture has been

A dutor at the Prince of Wales's Institute of Architecture has been accused of stealing human body parts for use in his sculpture exhibits, Scotland Yard revealed yesterday.

Anthony-Noel Kelly, 41, of Briston, south London, who is a cousin of the Duke of Norfolk, is charged with the theft of anatomical parts from bodies donated to the Royal College of Surgeons for medical research. The thefts are alleged to have taken place from June 1991 to November 1994. Mr Kelly and his co-accused. Niel Lindsay a 24-year-old former transaction to co-accused, Niel Lindsay, a 24-year-old former mortuary assistant at the college, will appear before Horseferry Road magistrates' court in central London on 15 August: A Metropolitan Police investigation into the sculptor's activities was launched in April after concerns were raised by Dr Laurence Martin, Her Majesty's Inspector of Anatomy. A former butcher and abattoir worker, Mr Kelly is alleged to have used the body parts to create casts for anatomically correct silver-coated models.

Strip-search review for prisoners

The strip-searching of women prisoners is to be reviewed, a Home Office minister announced last night.

Joyce Quinn (left), the Prisons minister, said in a Parliamentary written answer that she had asked the Prison Service to review its policy and to look at whether there was a need for change. The issue of whether women prisoners should be treated differently from men should be considered. she told Lynne Jones, Labour MP for Birmingham Selly Oak. Current policy states that stripsearches should be carried out by officers the same sex as the inmate, although last month a woman prisoner at Highpoint Prison in Suffolk was strip-searched by four male officers after she threatened to kill herself; an inquiry into the incident is under way.

Assassination link to strangled man

Political assassins may have killed a Colombian asylum-seeker whose body was found, wrapped in a black bin-liner, dumped in a field in Hertfordshire. Detectives are examining the possibility that Hernan Mora Aristizabal, 34, who was strangled, was murdered by hitmen. Mr Aristizabal left his home in north London on 5 July after receiving a telephone call, and his body was found at a farm near Shenley the following day. He is believed to have fled Colombia two years ago and to have claimed political asylum. Police are looking into mostly this beather was a victim of a political assessination. into reports that his brother was a victim of a political assassination in Columbia two years ago. Mr Aristizabal was married with two children, and was studying engineering in London. Jason Bennetto

News of the World' fined £50,000

The News of the World was fined £50,000 for contempt of court expose criminals at the expense of the criminal justice system.

In 1994 the newspaper ran a story under the headline "We Smash £100m Fake Cash Ring" that led to the trial being stayed of Tony Yetter Hassan and Anthony John Caldori. Lord Justice Pill, sitting with Mr Justice Astill, said the article "beyond doubt constituted a contempt of court" constituted a contempt of court".

BA fails to take off after strike

British Airways services at Heathrow will not return to normal until next Monday following last week's strike - around five days later than planned. Around 40 per cent of short-haul flights and 25 per cent of long-haul services were cancelled yesterday. Some 2,000 staff reported sick last week before the three day stoppage and vesterday around 1,500 were still off work. Airline under fire, page 16

Normal life for Siamese twins

Siamese twins who returned home this week after being separated in an operation at Great Ormand Street hospital in London, should grow up into normal healthy adults, doctors said yesterday. The twins, who have not been named, were joined at the chest and abdomen and shared only one organ - the liver. Jerenty Laurance

THE INDEPENDENT ABROAD

AustreSch40	NTands FI5.00
Setgum BFr80	Rafy (4,500
Cananes Prs300	Madees Esc325
CypnisCL1.20	Marta 43 cents
Denmark Die18	NanczyNkr20
Ireh Rep45p	Portugal Esc.325
FranceFr14	Spain Pts300
Germany DM4.5	SwedenSe21
Greece Dr550	Sentendand . Sh4.00

Lucembourg ... 1960 USA $3.00

OVERSEAS SCIENCES TROPICOS Ar mail, 13 weeks tumpe £110.76; Zone 1 (Mode East, America, Africa and India: £184 08; Jone 2 (Far East and Australana) £205,70. To order, please send 120 pp 43 Malifordious, London E14 959) or Seleptions 0171-

MACK HOSTER Husper Newspapers, telephone 01988 840370.

Return of the native as Liverpool welcomes Cherie erpool vesterday to tecame an honorary fel-lowship from John Moore's University. As she collected her award, Me Booth said she was very proud to be tronoured by an educational institution in the city where she grew up.

It is a great bonour to be accomised as a Liver-pudiant Even after 20 years in London, I remain one at heart," she said.

| Bis Booth, 42, was joined by her parents as she posed for photographs on the steps of the city's Anglican Cathedral, before joining 500 university students graduating in law and social sciences. Her mother, Gale, seld yesterday: "I am very provid of her. I think it is wonderful that she is here in Liverpoot. That is where she was brought up."

John Moore's University annually awards Honorary.

Fellowships to people from the Merseyside area "in recognition of outstanding achievements and contribution to public life". Also receiving awards this week are meraumor beriji Bainbridge, the broadcaster Pe ter Sissons, rugby league star Martin Offiah and the comedian Ken Dodd.

Ms Booth grew up in a terraced house in Ferndale

Road, Waterloo, and attended nearby Scattleid Convent School, before going on to obtain a First Class fonours degree from the London School of Economics. Now a Queen's Counsel, specialising in applepanent law, Ms Booth was clearly pleased to be among the new graduates, and told frem: "It is a very special day for you because of all the band work you because plot in he nere.

Ms Booth, daughter of the comic ecter Leng Booth, praised the spirit of the people of Liverpool, reging. As the daughter of one temous Scousing the think to tell you of the human of the Liverpool people. This are all so kind, generous and open with every Her father said, he toped the success sha achieved in the would replice all less success, and from Mersyside, but throughout Attaliene said.

The university's chancelor self the coole not us ine a petter role model for students. He sald. It is portant for us to have such a stoceast OC original from the city.

Not only is she sald the trade of the land or the sald.

Not only is she same to the the total harmshe she is a mother and does an expellent post and Old timers are past it, says

professor of pop

The Spice Girls were given acade mic respectability yesterday while

Ten albums from the last year have been shortlisted for the Mercury Music Prize, which claims to be the Booker of the music industry and includes all genres from classical, through jazz and dance music to pop. But new albums from Paul McCartney, David Bowie.

Blur and U2 were not considered

Frith, Professor of English at Strathclyde University. He defended the inclusion of the Spice Girls alongside rock bands like Radiohead and Prodigy, and classical artists Mark-Anthony Tumage and

He said: "McCartney never came through strongly enough.

Bowie was discussed for a very artist. But he was trying to use a as the Chemical Brothers, whom formthat he didn't use as skilfully

we have shortlisted." David Lister long time. He is an interesting

Chairman of the judges is Simon strong enough.

John Tavener.

popular music's old guard were given a withering brush-off.

Briton poised for space trek after colleague falls ill

As troubles on the Mir space station go from bad to worse, there is now a real possibility that the British astronaut Michael Foale (right) will be asked to embark on a hazardous repair mission into a module damaged in last month's crash with a cargo ship. Russian officials have asked Nasa whether it will allow the 40year-old astrophysicist to take the place on the mission of Mir's commander, Vasily Tsibliyev, who has been complaining of heart problems, tiredness, and overwork. The switch would mean a significant change of plan; during the operation. Dr Foale was to have manned a Soyuz escape capsule, which will be ready to launch an emergency getaway. However, Nasa said that he was fully trained to stand in for the Russian cosmonaut. "If it's necessary, we can do this," said a spokesman.

The sortie, which was yesterday postponed for up to 10 days because of the Russian's allment, requires two of the crew to enter the dark, airless, freezing and cramped Spektr module, which was punctured during the collision, the worst accident in Mir's 11-year history.

The crew has been preparing for the space trek by studying mock-ups at mission control, but their task is further complicated by uncertainty over what may be floating around inside Spekir. whose contents include laboratory equipment. There has been concem that chemicals may have escaped from their containers and may damage the cosmonauts'

Phil Reeves, Moscow

EMPLOYMENT

Men's prospects can be harmed by job programmes

Joining the wrong government jobs programme can actually harm noming the wrong government jobs programme can actually narm men's employment prospects, according to new research from the Policy Studies Institute. It reports that Work Trials, which placed 20,000 people in 199495, intreased the chance of a job by 35-40 per cent for both men and women.

However, Job Chiles increased women's chances of employment by 15 per cent, but boosted prospects for unqualified men far less, and actually reduced the prospects of a job for men with vocational and actually reduced the prospects of a job for men with vocational qualifications. The scheme, with 250,000 places in 1994/95, also reduced the earnings of the typical male participant by 7 per cent compared with what he would have earned if he had not taken part. Similarly, the 300,000 places on the Job Interview Guarantee

Scheme improved women's chances and worsened prospects for men with qualifications. Steve Lissenburgh, co-author of the report, said the positive effect of the small Work Trials scheme showed the importance of high quality placement schemes. Skilled male workers are harder to belo core that here there is to help once they have slipped into long-term unemployment.

The Impact of Public Iob Placing Programmes, Policy Studies Institute, from Grantham Distribution, 01476 541080. Diane Coyle

Exotic pets expose owners to danger

Gone are the days when a pets in the average British home were tione are the days when a pets in the average British home were limited to dogs, cats, and budgles, with the more adventurous perhaps seeking out terrapins. Now shops across the country are stocking a whole range of exotica from scorpions to crocodiles. But owning unusual pets can lead to unusual problems. And the RSPCA yesterday launched a campaign to make potential owners sware of what they are taking on.

A survey has shown that some pet shops are failing to provide customers with formation about the risks

In one case a Birmingham woman discovered that the relatively harmless" scorpic highly poisonous. The your mother had also been told wrongly by the pet shop she di not need a Dangerous Wild Animals licence to keep it. Kim Sengupta

FINANCE

Careers services not up to scratch

Contracting out careers services has cost £6m over three years, yet the service is falling well below performance targets. The National Audit Office said yesterday.

It found that introducing market forces to the service, which was previously run by local authorities, had represented "a significant and costly administrative burden".

Despite the cost, the process had failed to stimulate the creation of new private-sector providers to bid for the contracts. Instead, the vast majority of careers services were still being run by local authorities, though usually in partnership with training and enterprise councils.

The NAO also found that, though contracting out had provided competition, it had also had a damaging effect on co-operation and sharing of good practice between careers services.

The report recommends replacing the present approach with a system of licenses for careers services when current contracts expire. The DFEE should look aixin at target-setting, to establish a more flexible system while being ready to enforce sanctions, the study concludes.

TRAVEL

Beans means Benidorm ... or Brum

Britons may like travelling abroad - but they prefer to eat as if they were at home, especially at breakfast time, according to a survey published yesterday.

Faced with continental croissants and coffee, Britons abroad make sure they have all the ingredients for a good old traditional fry-up, including sausages, bacon and brewn sauce. A survey of more than 1,000 adults for credit card company Visa showed that Britons are stick-in-the muds when it comes to foreign food. Two-thirds of tourists take some food abroad, ugh the Scots are the most restrained, with 43 per cent arriving at their destinations empty-handed. Top of the edible exports British bolidaymakers take with them are tea-bags. Almost 40 per cent of Geordies take sausages, while a third of Brummies take a tin of baked beans. Although tea bags are universal favourites, regional variations show that just 1 per cent of Scots pack a jar of Marmite, compared to 25 per cent of travellers from the West Country. Other home-grown favourites taken abroad include cornflakes (packed by 27 per cent of people), brown sauce or tomato ketching

NEWSPAPERS SUPPORT RECYCLING

beinodels at a faulter

Recycled paper made up 43.6% of the raw material for UK newspapers in the first half of 1996

raded features

Graphics Card

Upsized bundle. Downsized price.

DELL DIMENSION XPS M166s INTEL PENTORMS PROCESSOR WITH TECHNOLOGY 166MITZ 3288 BISK PERFORMANCE STRAIL • STERM PRPETING BUIDST CACHE • 7.152 HARD DRIVE

COMPARE DY THE 45 XE OF COMM ATC WEM CARD WITH AND EDG YEDED MEMORY •15" COLDINE SVGA MONOTOR (13.75" YERRABLE ALEA)

3 POL 2 ISA AUG 1 PO/ISA STOLE MEICHARDS GRAAD • 12/162 (D-ROM DRIFE LANGETTO ZERVEYE) GREEC THE AIR CHEASERING MID-STEEL SECTION CHICSE MICHOES ZERNICHT LIAMZ TP EDFRO FROZONOM

FREE UPGRADE TO 200MHZ
PENTIUM PROCESSOR WITH MMX TECHNOLOGY
ONLY UNTIL 19TH JULY price by £50. Trust the

with the righ to www.dell.com call us now.

GET ONLINE TO THE NUMBER O BETWEEN SAM & SPM WEEDSTS, TORM A To order online: www.dell.com/ul

news

مكذا من الاصل

The dark world behind Versace's life of glamour

Andrew Gumbel and Steve Boggan

The brutal death of Gianni Versace yesterday brought home a unpleasant, little acknowledged truth: that the fash-ion world, for all its glamour and pretty packaging, is a far murkier, and far more dangerous, milieu than at first appears.

The warning signs have been there for years. Look at the bitter, protracted feuding within the Gucci family, leading to the break-up of the family business and the murder of its last emperor, Maurizio, two years ago, apparently at the hands of his ex-wife. Or the tax bribery scandal, still grinding its way through the courts, in which a clutch of Italy's top designers have been forced to admit having paid off the finance police to escape over-zealous investigation. Fashion has always been touted as Italian enterprise at its best, a mix of great visual flair and industrious attention to detail. Versace was in many ways the dream boy of the new gen-eration of couturiers: always challenging old orthodoxies, mother, Franca, was a dress-always mixing styles, always maker, although Gianni would adoring fans happy.

SCH

But Versace also embodied the fashion world in a far more fundamental way. He was a showman, a magician forever dazzling his audiences with bright shiny surfaces and wowing the gossip columnists with his entourage of film stars, rock idols and princesses. What lay beneath the surface, however was something he never cared to show and did his best, through the distraction of his visual fireworks, to discourage people from delving into.

He spun fantastical tales about his deprived childhood in Calabria, in the boot of the Italian peninsula. The region is known as the home of the 'Ndragheta, one of the most feared Mafia clans. Born in December 1946, his family appears to have had humble origins. Santo, his brother, was born two years earlier and Donatella, their sister, followed in

His father, Antonio, who died last year, was a coal merchant who later opened a shop selling electrical goods. His generating controversy while often say she ran the greatest keeping his core andience of conture studio in southern Italy.

Gianni moved to Milan and in 1972 began designing pret-à-porter collections for Arnaldo Girombelli, one of the most respected names in Italian fashion. After the success of these, he launched his own line in 1978, and opened his own shop in Milan. His influence grew from there until, by 1995, Versace had a turnover of $900m.

Like many poor boys made good, there was more than a hint of melodrama in his accounts - harmless perhaps, but all part of the Versace bravado. As he conquered first Milan and then the world, he liked to think of himself as an open, essentially simple man who had no secrets from anybody. He be-came the first major designer to talk openly about his homo-sexuality. He brother Santo and sister Donatello were also Versace showed off his sumptuous homes in Milan, on Lake Como, in New York and, latterly, on Miami Beach, but re-fused to talk about the profitability of the business or the role of a holding company registered in the Netherlands. He talked for years of going public on the New York Stock Exchange, but the flotation was endlessly deferred.

The fashion world, and in particular the Italian media, have responded to Versace and the other designers with their own kind of omerta, or willing silence. They are treated like royalty and, in Italy, considered an asset to their country. It just wouldn't be polite to ask how Versace lived so ostentatiously.

No doubt a lot of questions will be asked in the wake of Versace's death. Versace's own shattered: he told an Italian newspaper on the eve of his 50th birthday last December that he imagined himself dying by a tranquil lakeside, like the scion of a declining aristocratic family. His epitaph, he hoped, would say he was a man who took pleasure in breaking conventions and mixing genres, eras and social classes. It seems that, in reality, Versace dangerously overreached himself. It was difficult yesterday to loosen the normally loquacious lips of the slick men and women who people the fashion world. But when they could be persuaded, they repeatedly shaped the word "Mafia". These people are nothing if not dramatic but, this time, they believed there was good reason for their suspicion of Mob involvement. Quite simply,

In March 1995, one of Gianni Versace's most flamboyant contemporaries, Maurizio Gucci, met his death in a similar way as he left his 18th century palazzo in Milan. A lone gunman followed him for a short distance, fired two bullets into the back of his head, two into his face and then fled in a waiting green car. The subsequent police inquiry uncovered a web of intrigue, of family feuds and debts of up to £40m. Rumours persisted of a contract killing by a creditor who got tired of waiting for his money. The answer, when it comes, is based on informed suspicion. Its logic is irresistible but flawed.

"People generally feel that Gucci was killed because he hadn't paid protection money to mer wife, Patrizia Martinelli, gation, they too will be using the the Mafia," said one industry in- ' who was allegedly angry at havticularly the Italian ones, are very vulnerable. They have huge turnovers and the Mafia want some of it."

During the "clean hands" inquiries into bribery and tax evasion in the early 1990s, the fashion houses of Gianfranco Ferre, Giorgio Armani and Mariuccia Mandelli, better known as Krizia, all admitted paying bribes - under duress -to Italian tax inspectors. What, people asked, if Gucci had been paying bribes at one end to the inspectorate and protection money to the Mafia at the other? To whom could he com-

The theory fell flat, however, when, earlier this year, five people were arrested for Gucci's murder - including his for-

Glossy façade: Gianni Versace seen with models Naomi Campbell and Carla Carbruni. But the shown who dazzled his adoring fans with his designs discouraged people from delving beneath the surface Photograph: Richard Young/Rex

maintenance

So what of Versace? Already, similar rumours are circulating around the fashion houses of the world. Although his brother, Santo, and sister. Donatella, have reputations beyond reproach, enemies and friends were prepared to blacken Gianni's name as soon as his broken head hit the Miami Beach

"He was known as the launderette of the fashion business," said one City analyst, 'Not because of his clothes, but because people believed he personally laundered money for the Mafia ... where did his fantastic wealth come from?"

*Those who were jealous of his success chose to believe it came from other, darker, quarters. But there has been no evidence whatsoever to support that theory."

The police inquiry will inevitably follow similar patterns to the Gucci investigation and there are those who believe they will find that Versace was not as wealthy as his image suggested. Questions were asked over how he could afford to live in Som mansion in Miami while keeping a $7m New York town house dripping with Picassos and a Rauschenberg, and the palazzo on Lake Como. Detectives will find that there were frictions between Gianni and Santo, whom insiders say he did not treat well, and Donatella, whom he was once thought to be grooming as his

And the officers will hear rumours about Gianni's gay sex life: that there may have been jealous lovers; that he had been receiving treatment for Aids.

*He was strangely uncomfortable about his sexuality." said one friend, "He always tried to appear macho but he had a naturally feminine side. He kept his private life very much to himself."

Whatever they find, the police will find nothing simple in the life of Gianni Versace. Whether, at the end of what is likely to be a tortuous investi-

'Part of my life died with him'

Kate Watson-Smyth

Gianni Versace's flagship store in Bond Street, London, was closed yesterday as a mark of respect. Crowds gathered outside and flowers were placed in the doorway.

Some of the most influential names in fashion and showbusiness paid tribute to the designer. One of his closest friends, Elton John, said he was shattered by the news. "I am devastated to have lost one of my closest friends, who I loved so much, and who I had been so looking forward to seeing him again on holiday very soon. We were so close that it is like a large part of my life has died with him. I'm in deep shock at the news and it hasn't really sunk in yet. The world has lost a wonderful creative genius and I have lost a very dear friend."

Jeff Banks, the former host of the BBC's Clothes Show, compared Versace's death to the murder of John Lennon in 1980. "I had a shock comparable to hearing that John Lennon had died. Versace was at the height of only a gifted and talented designer who was his powers when he was shot down. He was a terrific designer who brought so many things about modern fashion to the fore.

Elizabeth Hurley, whose career took off after she wore a black Versace dress held together with safety pins to the première of Four Weddings and a Funeral, said the shooting was an appalling thing to have happened. "Gianni was a very dear friend of mine and I am going to miss him terribly. He was always very kind and lovely to me and he will be hideously missed by everyone."

Diana, Princess of Wales, who choose to wear Versace the first time she appeared in a non-British designer's outfit, said she was 'devastated" by his death.

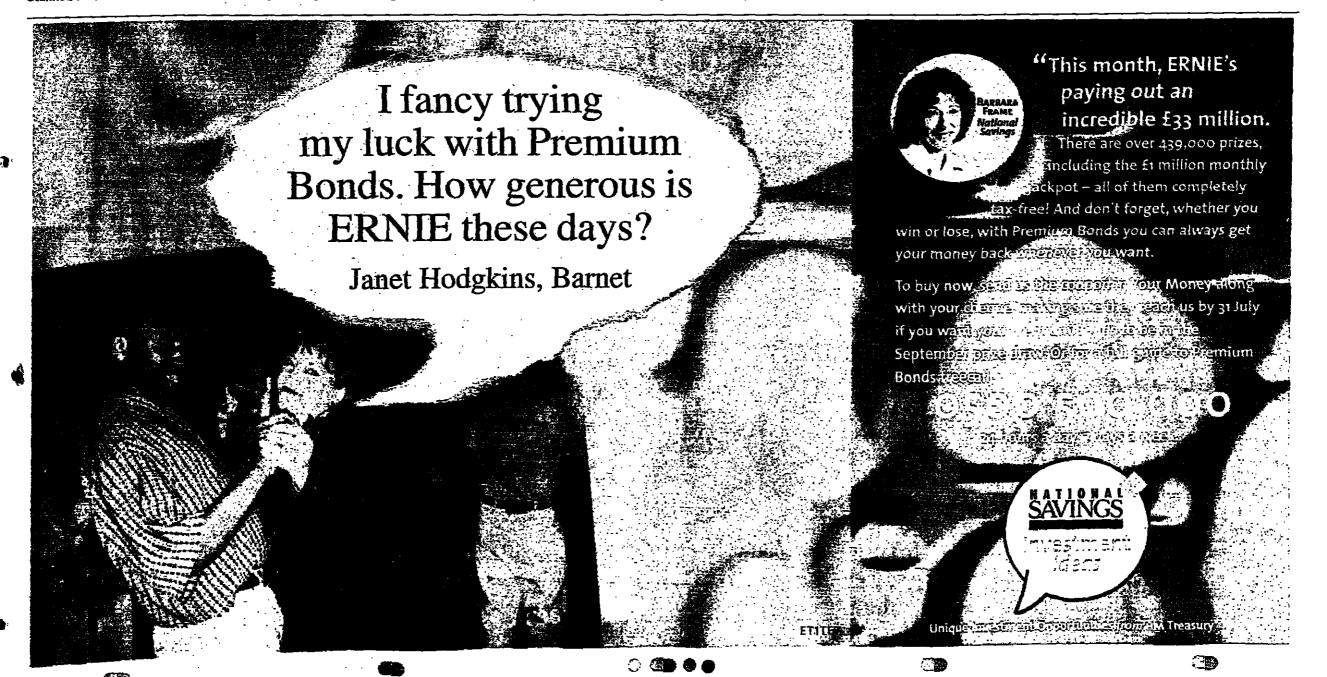

Kate Moss, the model who had worked on several advertising campaigns with Versace. said: "I am just so stunned. I am at a complete loss for words. And Claudia Schiffer, who also modelled for him, said: "Words cannot describe how much I will miss him. He was not extraordinary to work with but was also such a wonderful and caring man." The designer, Bruce Oldfield, said Versace was a master. "Gianni always went for the grand entrance. He was uncompromisingly glitzy. He was glitz, glitz, glitz. But he was a modest man and a lot of fun. He made fun of himself and he will definitely be missed. Alexandra Shulman, the editor of logue said Versace was one of the most important designers of the century. And the fashion designer, Mary Quant, said: "He was all about life. His designs were immediately recognisable as rich, glamourous and sexy. He dared to use a strong dash of vulgarity just beautifully. He was a man who everyone adored." Vivienne Westwood, who is also known for her flamboyant style, said Versace's death was a great tragedy and a great shock. "He was obviously one of the most talented and famous designers of the last few years."

Feeding of the 4,000: golden oldies take tea with The Queen

Fifty glorious years: Couples queue for The Queen's golden-wedding garden party. 'I don't think I could afford 4,000 guests on my pension.' said one guest

Michael Streeter and Lianne Kolirin

Buckingham Palace had all the ingredients one would expect from a mass celebration of Golden Wedding anniversaries yesterday, best town crier - and 50 Red Cross staff on standby for those who succumbed

The golden oldies, some from as far as Australia, proudly clutched their inof yards around the Palace, the lines almost reaching Hyde Park corner.

The mood was quiet, predictably orderly, and humorous. One pensioner remarked: "You can tell we are all from the war-generation by with several fainting in the gentle sunside the Palace itself, with suspected heart attack.

All, though, were auxious to meet The Queen and Prince Philip to share the one thing they all had in common - the year of their wedding. Mr Leow, a part-time actor who appeared in James Bond films, such

the long wait and the lengthy walk as Live and Let Die and Goldfinger

Mrs Ottilie Bishop, from Newher husband fell ill two days ago. "I hope they will let me in on my own. I am really looking forward to it, after all she won't ask me again will she?"

As they filed inside the gates, the couples praised The Queen and Prince Philip for their years of long marriage. Though many among the 4,000 felt the Royal children had let the older generation down. All had the own pet theories about the success of a long marriage. Wheel-chair bound Marjory Bushell, 70, from Portswood,

Fast forward: highways to the future

husband Harry, said: "You should never go to bed on a quarrel. It is an achievement to be married this long whether you're The Queen or Joe and Enna Turner, from Doulas, on the Isle of Mann, said it came down to determination: "Our generation worked hard at marriage, The Duke being in the public eye." Another couple standing nearby added: "The secret is a good row, good making up and getting on with it." ween the lavish Palace reception and their more modest celebrations. Mrs. Leow said: "We had a little celebration in Croydon with our children - I don't think I could afford 4,000

Green blow as road schemes get go-ahead

Randeep Ramesh Transport Correspondent

The Government is set to anger environmentalists by approving the majority of schemes in the first stage of its review of the £6ha road-building programme.

As many as eight projects out of 12 are likely to be given the green light by ministers next week, Gavin Strang, the Transport minister, will try to defuse campaigners' criticism by blaming the previous government, He will claim that ministers have been forced into "taking decisions based on the last administration's lack of a proper transport policy".

The most embarrassing decision will be to build the £300m Birmingham Northern Relief Road, Britain's first toll motorway which will cut a swathe through the city's green belt. Frank Dobson, when he was shadow transport secretary, stated it would never be Local cars will have to pay £2 to use the new motorway - which its builders say will help hold down traffic levels in the beavily congested Midlands. However, Baroness Hayman, the roads minister, admitted to Labour MPs that the Government would have to pay £30m in compensation to Midland Expressway - the private sector consortium building the road - were it to be cancelled. The M25 widening scheme around south-west London which was given the go-ahead by Tory transport ministers at a ber stamped by Dr Strang. Designed to ease congestion on the motorway's busiest stretch by widening it between junctions 12 and 15 to up to six lanes, it was attacked by Labour's shadow transport team who said it > queues within 10 years". Ministers will also proceed with a £163m widening of the M2 in Kent after officials pointed out that provision for the road was made in the Channel Tunnel Rail Link Bill - passed hy John Major's government. Two projects which will complete existing road schemes will would be "swamped with

be waived through: the final section of Manchester's ring road - known as "The Box" - and a half-mile stretch to finish the Derby Southern bypass.

Most controversially, ministers are set to approve three "private" road projects, financed under the Department of Transport's private finance scheme, because the tendering process has gone too far to be cancelled. This is despite criticism of the scheme by ministers. A £100m development link-see roads encroach into the Yorkshire Dales National Park. Another project, the Weald and Downland upgrade, which has been attacked by environmentalists but backed by East Sussex County Council, will also win approval. The £115m South Midlands Network, which consists of eight road improvement and construction projects, has found favour with DoT officials who claim no local group opposes it.

There will be some sops to ing Bradford and Cumbria will the green lobby. The Salisbury bypass, one of the prime targets of environmentalists during the past decade, will be abandoned. The 11-mile bypass, which threatened water meadows on the edge of the city, was considered the "most sensitive" in the "accelerated review" of 12 priority road schemes. Other developments being shelved are the A40 west London approach, the A13 Thames Gateway and the M62 East link road. The final decision on all 12 schemes will be made by minschools are lured back by councils

Opted-out

Lucy Ward Education Correspondent

Local government leaders are planning a diplomatic offensive to lure opted-out schools back under the wing of education au-

Labour-run councils are today receiving letters from the Local Government Association (LGA) urging them to begin enticing grant-maintained schools, which are funded centrally and run their own affairs, to return to the fold.

News of the letter, seen by The Independent, has caused consternation among heads of opted-out schools, who yesterday condemned the step as extraordinarily premature".

The campaign is being launched in advance of major changes to the state schools framework, set out in the education White Paper published last week and due to come into force in July 1998.

The Government is committed to abolishing grant-maintained status and introducing a new system under which schools will choose to adopt foundation, community or aided status.

Consultation papers on the detail of the three options are due to be published shortly, but opted-out schools are expected to incline towards foundation status, which offers the most freedom for self-government. Community schools will be closest to LEAs, while aided status will be the likely option for

In a letter to chairs of education committees, Graham Lane, LGA education chair. urges authorities to "open the diplomatic corridor" to grantmaintained schools to convince them to opt for community rather than foundation status.

 $\mathbb{M}_{L^{1}}$

ñ.

4.

الرازية في

5.5 %

Ar.

A

≅(2:}....

îc.

Mary .

Alexander and the second

gen of art. The fact of the f

Off Marian

in acquire

COMPANY OF THE PERSON NAMED IN

VOLICE

CLASSI

UN

A

Bunk tate of m

Master Line

 $\eta_{W_{\rm PCG}}$

 $c_{M_i}|_{[W_i]_{W_i}}|_{U_i},$ gar tot but

Brd July, 1

 $w_{S_{n}}$

Council officers should meet headteachers of opted-out schools with the aim of re-establishing contact and offering reassurance, he suggests. Ideas that could be explored include encouraging grant-maintained schools to buy back services from the LEA and co-ordinating admission arrangements.

By opening up old links, Mr. Lane says, "GM schools will increasingly see themselves as becoming automatically com-munity schools rather than foundation schools".

As foundation schools, the letter warns, formerly opted-out schools could become "GM schools in exile", whose powers could be increased by a future

Conservative government However, GM schools could well prove wary of LEA over-tures. Most have relished their greater autonomy since their greater autonomy since their LEA control and may be un-willing to relinquish free tions. The Government has stressed that it does not wa become embroiled in disbates over structures in schools. Under the White Paper LEAs are given an expanded role, but their mission is chiefly to raise standards while waving schools maximum freedom to ... manage themselves.

System failed architect who killed mother

Jeremy Laurance Health Editor

A successful architect who suffered a breakdown and stabbed his mother to death before killing himself was a victim of grave failings in the emergency mental health care system, an independent inquiry has found. In one of the most highly critical reports of the care of the dangerously mentally ill to appear in recent years, the inquiry says the efforts of 14 doctors, nurses and social workers over one weekend in January 1996 failed to protect Gilbert Kopernik-Steckel, 33, and his family, of South Norwood, south London, from the effects of his acute psychotic illness. Although all the professionals recognised the danger he posed there was "an overwhelming failure in com-munications" which led to the deaths, it says. A consultant psy-chiatrist who visited the family at home described the mother,

Suzanne, 57 as "a sitting duck". A separate inquiry, also pub-lished yesterday, into the death of psychiatric patient David Howell of Birmingham identi-fied similar failings in his care, although it says changes it recily prevent a similar incident in the future because of the unpredictable nature of psy-chotic illness. Unlike Mr Kopernik-Steckel, Mr Howell had been a long term mental pa-tient who had lived in a residential home since 1985 and lack of mutual respect among who was stable and compliant riorated suddenly and without warning. On 20 November last year he was shot dead by police after taking a supermarket manto his throat.

Both inquiry reports add to the litany of disasters involving the care of the mentally ill which have repeatedly high-lighted poor communication, in-the agencies involved. Mr Kopernik-Steckel's case known history of mental illness. He was a middle class profeswas unusual because he had no sional man pursuing a successwho had returned home to spend Christmas with his fam-ily when his illness struck. Over the last, fateful weekend, he twice admitted himself to the local mental hospital but twice dis-that he was to be detained which were not communicated to the nursing staff who let him go. It was the failure of the Croydon Mental Health Unit to keep him in hospital during the emergency that attracts the inquiry panel's strongest criti-cism. "We do not believe that the seriousness of this incident could have been predicted. We do, however, believe that the tragic outcome was not inadequate co-operation and a charged himself, despite evitable," the report says.

instructions from medical staff

★THE INDEPENDENT Win a Year's Travel Insurance with BUPA TravelCover

Leading travel insurer BUPA TravelCover is offering three lucky Independent readers the opportunity to win a year's complimentary insurance with a Premier Annual TravelCover policy.

Benefits include medical cover of up to £10million, cover for unlimited trips abroad (up to 183 days per year), as well as cover for baggage loss (up to £1500) and trip cancellation (up to

To enter the competition, simply dial the number, and question below, together with your name and address.

What was last year's most popular long haul destination from the UK? a) Alaska

b) Dominican Republican c) Singapore

Plus, all independent readers are eligible for a 10% discount off BUPA's Premier Amual TravelCover Policy from now until the end of August 1997. Call BUPA TravelCover on 1996. 858585, and quote " The Independent". Smart. Card.

A telephone chargecard is the smart way to manage costs on the move. Free operator assistance, no joining fee, fully itemised bills and no surcharges. All this and major savings on national and international business calls makes the WorldCom Global Telephone Chargecard Smarter.

Freephone 0800 0 18 18 18 Of tax 0171 750 3210

This little ad could make a big difference to your mortgage.

It's easy to transfer.

- Our mortgage rate is 7.04% (7.2% APR variable).

DIRECT LINE Call us now for more details. 018! 649 9099 0161 831 9099 0141 221 9099

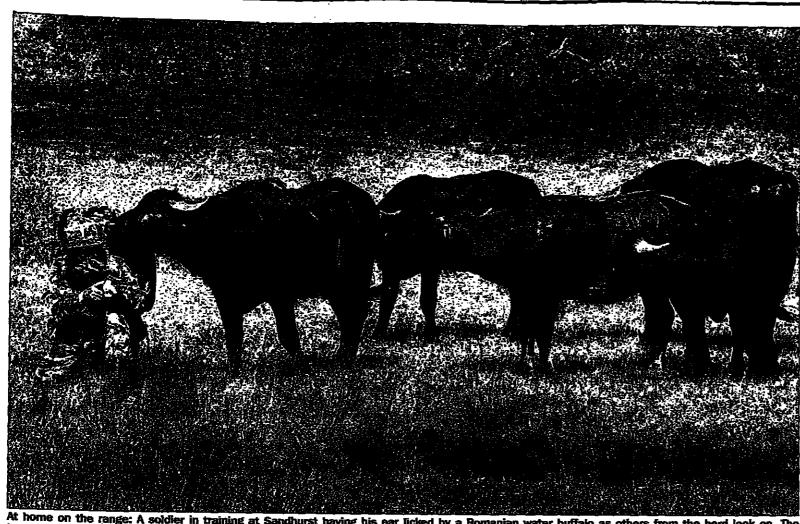

CALL ANYTIME 8am to 8pm Monday to Friday and 9am to 5pm Saturday. Please quote ref. IND129 A Royal Bank of Scotland company

Subject to restil Life Assembling to enter the long and receive required fracts correct at BYTPS. Subject to variation, W-Hous quotestions on require YOUR HOPE IS AT RESK IN YOU DO NOT KEEP UP REPAYMENTS ON A MORTGAGE OR OTHER LOAM

New from America

Nothing is proven to work better for headaches.

Legal fat cats plead their case for the cream

Patricia Wynn Davies Legal Affairs Editor

Barristers and legal aid campaigners reacted with anger vesterday after the Lord Chancellor succeeded in turning a House of Lords debate about a massive increase in court fees into an attack on "fat cat" QCs who earn a million a year. Belcaguered barristers had to concede that Lord Irvine, the Lord Chancellor, had pulled a highly effective political stroke. Robert Owen QC said: "The Bar is committed to working with others to make justice affordable, accessible and cost-

alf

acl

Ch

effective. Spiralling court fees have only one effect and that is to deny justice for people on low incomes. That is the issue that needs to be addressed and was dehate.

A Bar council spokesman said Lord Irvine's closing speech in the debate served only as a distraction from the court lees issue, pointing out, righthy that millionaire QCs work predominantly for the private sector, and for big corporate clients where money is simply no object. Lord Irvine himself was one of these before taking office as Lord Chancellor, although it is thought he was a mere half-million man.

One million a year is the kind of money that borders, in the estimation of some, on the obscene. Lord Irvine cleverly alluded to the fact that this handful of top lawyers - commercial, tax and libel specialists - earns four times as much as

But equally, fat-cat civil QCs annual fee income to £335m earn about the same as some top accountants, captains of industry, or advertising, marketing and financial high-fivers. £120 to £500 in some cases, and

Justice for the rich? Courtroom heavyweights who reap the rewards

Roy Amiot QC, 54, a heavyweight criminal silk who both prosecutes and Department says that in 1995-96 he received £450,000 to £499,000 from the criminal legal aid fund. Acted for defence in Barlow Clowes and Blue Arrow fraud cases.

Charles Grav QC. 55, has become the leading star of the libel bar. Likely to earn Educated at Winchester and Oxford, he has homes in London and Dorset. Glittering list of famous clients includes Jason Donovan, lan Botham and Jonathan Altken.

Andrew Park QC, 58, also likely to earn a million in his mainly tax practice. He former head of Nissan UK and once one of the world's richest men, when the inland Revenue issued a warrant for his arrest last year, but in general he tends to keep away from big-name clients.

Anthony Scrivener QC, 61. an all-rounder who does civil and criminal and a seas work. He also does a certain amount of pro bono work. While a thorn in the flesh of the white male legal establishment, he earns a million most years. He was chairman of the Bar in 1991.

with the apparent approval of their clients and shareholders. Such a state of affairs enabled the Lord Chancellor to declare on Monday that "fat cat lawyers railing at the inquity of court fees do not attract the sympathy of the public".

The fortunes of the £1m-ayear fat cats, however, has little to do with the crisis facing legal aid. But it is equally obvious that the hike in court fees - designed to recover an extra £50m a year, bringing the total must act as a deterrent to some would-be litigants. High Court fees have been raised from rises of between 50 and 150 per cent apply in other civil proceedings. People in the legal aid poverty trap, with sound but modest claims, are now likely to think twice before issuing proceedings with a view, for example, to persuading a recalcitrant defendant to settle a case. Those claiming benefits such as Job Seekers' Allowance, Disability Working Allowance and Pamily Credit do not automatically qualify for fee remissions or reductions, like those on Income Support, and must apply for them, not always successfully. But delay and uncertainty are the principal deterrents, along-side cost, to seeking justice. The system involves all three ills. Vicki Chapman, policy officer for the Legal Action Group (LAG), the legal aid campaigning organisation, said: "We are concerned about the impact of the increases on people on very low incomes. Lord lrvine has completely failed to answer that question. If you are seeking to suspend a warrant for possession, you haven't got time to seek a fee remission or reduction and wait for it to arrive. You have to find the fee tion does not proceed." Roger Smith, the group's director, said the Lord Chancel-and if you can't, your legal ac-operation of the new court fee lor's emphasis on Bar fat cats was designed to divert attention away from the court fees row. The number of people being put off by high fees was unquantifiable, he said, "but research suggests that large numbers of people who could litigate don't. Court fees are a part of this." Meanwhile, sums of £150,000 to £300,000 can routinely be made by leading QCs in big criminal and civil cases, partic-ularly fraud and child care. Despite the existence of set pay scales in civil cases and the introduction of graduated fees in criminal cases, a large element of discretion over payment

NOTICE OF INTEREST RATE VARIATION

CLASSIC VISA CARD/MASTERCARD®, AFFINITY MASTERCARD, UNITY FIRST MASTERCARD AND GLOBAL VISA CARD.

Bank of Scotland announces a change in the monthly rate of interest charged to our Classic Visa Card/ MasterCard, Affinity MasterCard, Unity First MasterCard and Global Visa Card Cardholders.

The monthly rate will be increased to 1.53%;

Interest will be charged at the new rate and shown on cardholders' statements issued from 22nd August, 1997, and for balances left outstanding from statements dated 23rd July, 1997 and after.

Bank of Scotland, Card Services, Dunfermline, Fife KY99 4BS. The Loan, Bank of Secularities of A Franchise Line are all registered trade marks of The Governor and Company of the Bank of Scotland.

Andrews denies vicious temper led to murder roadside murder of her france about the father of her seven-Lee Harvey was yesterday described in court as a "woman of considerable deceit".

Clutching a crumpled white tissue in her hand, Ms Andrews, 28, was accused by David Crigman QC, for the prosecu-tion, of making up a "road-rage" attack to hide her killing of the man she professed to love.

Mr Harvey, 25, had been stabbed 30 times as the couple drove home along country lanes near their home in Alvechurch, Worcestershire, in December. Ms Andrews had claimed that he had been stabbed after being chased by another car.

But the jury at Birmingham Crown Court was told that despite publicity about the murder no witness had come forward to say they had seen a pursuit between two cars. Mr Crigman accused Ms Andrews of repeatedly stabbing Mr. Harvey in the back as he tried to escape from a frenzied attack following a " blazing row". He asked her how she could explain stormy. He had been violent to-blood splashes found at the rear wards me." The case continues.

Ms Andrews denied that she Tracie Andrews, accused of the and Mr Harvey had rowed year-old daughter, or that the row had exploded into violence.

Ms Andrews said: "I am not going to admit to anything I have not done." Mr Crigman said: "Lee Harvey retreated from his attacker at the rear of the car did he not?" Ms Andrews replied: "I don't know." Asked if she was the attacker, she said: "No, I was not."

Ms Andrews admitted no one had come forward to support the crucial part of her story but blamed the police for not asking potential witnesses about a Sierra car which was allegedly pursuing the couple.

You are a woman of considerable deceit," said Mr Crigman. Ms Andrews responded: No I am not, I am trying to help the best I can, but it was hard going back along that road and I don't want to go."

Ms Andrews denied that she had exploded in a vicious temper on the journey. "The relationship was not violent but

The benefits of BusinessFirst can be realised immediately.

Now so can the rewards.

European Rewards for BusinessFirst Passengers

Each time you fly I roundtrip with Continental's BusinessFirst to the U.S.A. you may choose with our compliments one of the following rewards.

Choose to travel in style with a First Class return ticket for 1, or opt for 2 standard class return tickets on Eurostar from London to and Resorts Le Shuttle

Forte and Le Meridien Hotels Enjoy I nights stay and a buffet breakfast from a selection of unique Forte botels, the world's leading hotel group with a twork throughout 40 countries.

Brussels or Paris.

If you prefer to travel to the antinent with your own vehicle, you can use your European Rewards voucher between Folkestone Relais & Chatcaux

Chateaux properties throughout Europe, North America, Mexico and the Caribbean, Stay for I night or sample the culinary delights of a 3 course lunch or dinner for 2.

Paradores Hotels Nestled in natural settings throughout Spain, enjoy I nights stay followed by a sumptions breakfast buffet at selected

Continental's door to door service is already the envy of many competitors with chauffeur driven transfers at both ends, a First Class sleeper seat and 55" seat pitch all for a Business Class fare.

Simply enrol free to our award winning frequent flyer programme OnePass when you fly I roundtrip in BusinessFirst (in] class).

For full details call 01293 822 222.

Continental Airlines

Air Transport World's 1996 Airline of the Year

et handleur deinen transfers are mailable to full fare paying Bustinese ir et passengers if Class who originate travel and purchase tickes in the U.S., ide of Man, Jersey a Guerrasey. They are available up to a 50 mile radius.

Haughey let banker deal with finances team, including probing secret numbered bank accounts in

Alan Murdoch Dublin

Charles Haughey yesterday denied that while he was Taoiseach he knew his close friend and banker had raised £1.3m to pay off debts incurred by his regal lifestyle and that the money had been obtained from stores chief Ben Dunne. Mr Haughey, 71, who was Taoiseach four times between 1979 and 1992, amassed trappings of wealth ranging from a 300-acre estate, a private island and holiday home to racehorses, works of art and a yacht.

Mr Haughey's appearance in the witness box was the climax of a tribunal set up in February to investigate payments to politicians by Mr Dunne, the former head of Dunnes Stores. The former Fianna Fail party leader said he had only learnt of the payments from his banker, Des Traynor, in 1993, a year after he had resigned as premier. He added: "I want to say I did not have a lavish lifestyle. My work was my lifestyle." He said Mr Traynor, who died in 1994, had taken over full control of all matters concerning his personal finances around 1960 and had "complete discretion" to act on his behalf "without reference back to me".

He added: "I never had to concern myself about my personal finances. With hindsight, it is clear that I should have involved myself to a greater degree." Pressed on how he could not have known of the Dunnes funding, he said: "Des Traynor was a man of few words. He just dealt with what he had to do." He insisted that Mr Traynor had seen it as "his personal re-sponsibility to ensure that I and ability to public life and would not be distracted by nancial considerations."

Mr Haughey said Mr Dunne "did not seek, nor was he granted, any favours. Mr Dunne did it without any expectation of re-ward." He claimed that in hindsight had he known of the approach made to Mr Dunne he would not have authorised it. Asked if his earlier false bunal were "pretty economic". Mr Hanghey replied 'I hate that phrase. It has been flogged to death."

When tribunal counsel Denis McCullough, citing his eventu-al admission on 30 June that he had "probably" received the f1.3m, asked if that meant "you then had your hands up ?" Mr Haughey replied "Fully." Mr McCullough quipped: "Not quite Mr Haughey. Perhaps at shoulder height." The former premier nodded, smiling.

Explaining his earlier lack of co-operation with the tribunal, he said: "I was concerned at the effect these payments would have for me in the public mind." Mr Haughey paid ironic tribute to the "thorough and diligent" international investigation into his personal finances carried out by the tribunal foreign currencies held on his behalf, which had forced him to reverse his initial flat denial of receiving the £1.3m. The tribunal's terms of reference precluded inquires into possible payments to Mr Haughey from other business figures. It is restricted solely to payments made by Mr Dunne when head of Dunnes Stores.

Water firms pledge to offer free pipe repair

Nicholas Schoon

The Government claimed success for its water summit meeting yesterday, after all the water companies in England and Wales pledged to offer at least one free repair to any customer with a leaking supply pipe.

John Prescott, the Deputy Prime Minister, said the initiative could save over a billion litres of water each day, but only if all customers were able to detect and report every leak. "By intervening with the summit we are now starting to achieve our aims and get that better deal [for customers]," said Mr Prescott, who ordered all the water companies to attend the event two months ago.

"When necessary, tough talk-ing does work. I believe that the water companies are beginning to show vigour, imagination and enthusiasm in promoting water efficiency. They will need to keep on doing so."

However, what has been agreed differs from Labour's stance during the election campaign. It said it would insist on water companies repairing all household leaks, not just those in the supply pipe which connects them to the mains. That would have cost the companies very much more.

also lowered the political temperature of government relations with the water industry. Yesterday, Thames, the biggest company, said it could now guarantee to get through the summer without any hosepipe or sprinkler bans.

At a press conference yesterday, Mr Prescott was pleased that many water companies now offered their customers devices to reduce the flush volumes of their lavatories, free of charge. He urged them all to do so.

But the most important work on boosting water conservation and cutting leakage still re-

McDormand in Palookaville

Full Gallery Week listings in the eye

PLUS Mary Flanagan,

Joanna Briscoe

on the best Summer Fiction in thelongweekend

regulator Ofwat is drawing up leakage targets for all companies. And the Government is still consulting on standards for water-using appliances and plumbing, changing the licens-ing regime for extracting water from aquifers and rivers, and on how to charge for water.

Many groups have argued that the wider use of water meters is needed to encourage conservation, something the Government has qualms about.

Meanwhile, a watchdog organisation representing water customers demanded companies be compelled to cut their prices after the 1999 price review by Ofwat.

Jim Gardner, chairman of Ofwat's National Consumer Council, said: "Customers want to see an immediate and substantial cut in average water bills and bills thereafter kept below the rate of inflation." But he warned that the European Commission was pushing up the price of water by promoting laws which demand companies spend more to secure cleaner tapwater, rivers and beaches. The legislation, still to be approved, would raise the average UK bill of £230 a year by about £21, he said. But there was no reason why water companies could not pass on to customers amount to a 10 per cent cut.

He added that a leakage lev el from mains as high as 15 per cent might be economically justifiable, because there comes a point at which the money would be better spent on other ways of conserving water or finding

The Water Services Association, representing nine of the biggest companies, said: "Rising standards and lower prices do not sit comfortably together. Many people are constantly pressing for higher standards, they are not all in Brussels."

Loyalists welcome Blair assurances

Colin Brown Chief Political Correspondent

Loyalists last night gave a "pos-itive response" to Tony Blair at a meeting in Downing Street after he urged them to use their influence with Loyalist paramilitaries not to break their ceasefire in Northern Ireland. The Prime Minister assured the leaders of the Progressive Unionist Party (PUP) and the Ulster Democratic Party (UDP), including Gary McMichael and David Ervine, that the Government would move ahead with the cross-party talks on Ulster without Sinn Fein if the IRA did not restore its ceasefire.

He defended the contacts between Mo Mowlam, the Northern Ireland Secretary, with Sinn Fein, in spite of protests by Ian Paisley's Democratic Unionist Party that it had amounted to

Mr Blair told the Loyalists that Sinn Fein could not claim the Government had not tried to get them into the talks. "He met with a positive response," said a Downing Street spokes-

Loyalists said it was "make your mind up time" for the IRA Defending the renewal of contacts, cut off after the killing of two police officers by the IRA, the spokesman said: "If the phone rings, people pick it up. All Northern Ireland Secretary Mo [Mowlam] was doing was -and to her credit - being honest."

of clarification, then there is no reason why they should be answered. What we have made clear is the Prime Minister is not going to be strung along on this.
But he is pretty determined nobody is going to be able to say the British Government is not trying on this front," the Downing Street spokesman said.

terday met the Northern Ireland Secretary in Belfast to press for tougher conditions on the IRA ceasefire before Sinn Fein could be admitted to the talks. The Ulster Unionist Party, led by A David Trimble, objected to the promise by Mr Blair that Sinn Fein could be admitted within six weeks of an IRA ceasefire.

'Cowboy' security firms face round-up THIS SATURDAY IN * THE INDEPENDENT 700 FREE

Jason Bennetto Crime Correspondent

"Cowboy" security firms and unscrupulous wheel clamping outfits could be outlawed under proposals being considered by the Government.

Measures under examination include a statutory licensing system for security guards, with penalties for firms that take on staff with criminal records. However, any changes will not be introduced for at least another 18 months, despite Labour's pre-election pledges to introduce new laws immedi-

The decision to start a con-sultation process follows widespread concern about the standards and control of security firms, which now employ more guards than there are uniformed police officers. who besmirch the industry's Jack Straw, the Home Secretary, told the British Security Industry Association in London yesterday that the review would be extended to cover private wheelclampers.

"It is an extraordinary irony that an industry which attempts to regulate the behaviour of others is subject to no regulation itself," he said.

"The result is that ... cheats and villains are able to operate. These rogues undermine the fine reputation of the established companies who enforce effective standards and selfregulation."
He added that statutory regulation was "the best way to ensure proper standards, to protect the public and weed out good name".

In 1995 the Commons Home Affairs Select Committee heard evidence from the police that up to 2,600 crimes a year were committed by guards. In one com-pany 11 of the 26 staff had criminal convictions, ranging from rape to assault. In another case cited by the police, a security firm's managing director recommended an employee for a shotgun licence even though he knew the employee had been convicted of killing his

Securicor, the security com-pany, yesterday welcomed the announcement and called for an automatic bar on any individual with a record of dishonesty or

Brown pounces to get young working

Anthony Bevins Political Editor

The Government would only have one chance to help the young unemployed off welfare and into work, Gordon Brown, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, said last night.

He told a London dinner organised by Business in the Community and the businessbased Percent Club: "We will only have one chance.

"Indeed, if we fail the first time, disillusionment and cynicism will prevent us being able to mount this again."

Because of that imperative, the Chancellor said, the Government was prepared to consider radical solutions. Speaking to an audience that included the Prince of Wales, the pace-setting Prince's Trust Volunteers, the Chancellor said that the Government wanted to build on existing success, not start afresh.

That meant breaking down barriers between public and private provision, using private employment agencies where relevant, and allowing grassroots organisations and officials to "rewrite the rules", if that would get results.

"We make what works our guiding light," Mr Brown said.
"But we remember all the time, our goal is not just to take people off the streets for six months but to make the unemployed employable." The alternative was the threat of "exclusion for an en-who is president of Business in the Community, and founder of young people" from the 400,000 youngsters out of work.

In a direct appeal for their co-operation and support in the Welfare to Work programme, the Chancellor told his business audience: "In some of our poorest communities, one-third of all young people are doing nothing, and in some of these, there is second generation unem-ployment: the culture of work destroyed."

Mr Brown also warned that was not only a social and financial waste, but a waste of potential that required business and the community to work together to provide a solution. The business dinner was the Chancellor's first official engagement with Prince Charles, who hosted the event.

The 15 litre Grand Move+. Driver and passenger ambags + ABS + air conditioning + alloy wheels + front and rear electric windows + metallic paint + 3 years unlimited mileage werrantly all as standard = just £13,500 on the road. The Renault Megane

news

Sheppard

departs

with job

demand

The Bishop of Liverpool. scourge of successive Conservative administrations, called on the Labour government to demonstrate the political will to create policies leading to full employment.

The Right Rev David Sheppard, addressing the Church of England's General Synod for the last time before be retires in September, also warned that an emphasis on improving education was meaningless unless job opportunities were created

The Synod at York was debating an ecumenical report,

Unemployment and the Future of Work, which was published during the election campaign in April. The report, which attacked complacency about the "evil" of unemployment, was widely interpreted as a rallying cry of support for the Labour

the working party behind the re-port, said: "It has persuaded me that there can be enough good work for everyone. But there is Party by church leaders. Dr Sheppard, who chaired

Kathy Marks

Britain in plea over Caroline's murderer

Michael Streeter and Lianne Kolim

The British Government is to ask French ministers to intervene in the case of 13-year-old Caroline Dickinson, who was murdered on a school trip to Brittany a year ago.

After a 90-minute meeting they propose ter further.

with the schoolgirl's parents John and Sue Dickinson, Lady Symons, the Foreign Office minister, pledged her support for the family's efforts to step up the investigation into the murder at a youth hostel in the village of Pleine Fougeres. She said: "We will urge the French authorities to look at the way in which the murder is being investigated and to give us some clear indication of how they propose to take the mat-

At a later press conference Mr Dickinson welcomed Lady Symons's support and called for the replacement of the French examining magistrate Gerard Zaug "if necessary" to speed up the inquiry. Repeating a call for parents and children to avoid the Brittany area, where Caroline, from Launceston, Cornwall, was raped and killed a year ago this week, Mr Dickinson warned the killer could strike again.

Making clear his frustration at the lack of progress in the murder case he said: "I feel that the mentality of this individual means that he may well strike again. My only fear is that this is the only way in which he is going to be caught."

In a prepared statement from him and his estranged wife Mr Dickinson spoke mov-

One year on: John and Sue Dickinson with their local MP, Paul Tyler, centre, at yesterday's press conference ingly of the loss of their "quiet, gentle teenager" who would always be remembered with love and pride.

He said the investigation had been hampered by undue secrecy and known blunders. "A cloud of controversy, now fuelled by a lack of confidence in the competence of the investigating magistrate highlighted the differences between the British and French legal and policing

He also referred to other unsolved murders of Britons in France, highlighting the case of Joanne Parrish, who was killed are pushing for an extension of DNA testing in the area in the belief that the killer may well be local and want an appeal for new witnesses to come forward. Their French lawyer, Herve Rouzad-le-Boeuf, said one option was to meet the

French Minister of Justice in the

The family and their lawyers autumn if no progress had been made by then.

The family's local Liberal Democrat MP Paul Tyler, who was at the meeting, said the presence of two new governments in France and Britain offered the chance to make fresh progress. He welcomed Lady Symons's promise to take a "close regular personal inter-est". Mr Tyler, MP for North Cornwall, said Caroline's murder and events in the following year had highlighted the lack of a proper support system for the families of victims in the UK and indicated that the government may also take action to help set up a formal network.

a proviso, and that's that there is the political will. That's the Photograph: Kalpesh Lathigra rub, for of course there will be a cost. But we already know that there is a cost, in human despair, in the waste of God-given gifts, and in the price of benefits and ill-health and crime." Elaine Appelbee, vice-chairman of the Synod's Board of Social Responsibility, said there were as yet no signs that the Government was inclined to recommendations.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr George Carey, in his closing address, paid tribute to Dr Sheppard, the Church of England's most prominent and outspoken liberal. He said that the hishop, a former England cricketer who has served Liverpool for 22 years, was "one of the great prophets of the Church", and, "the scourge of all those who hold the comforting belief that excessive privilege and affluence are somehow an inevitable and essential part of the natural order".

Delegates approved the unemployment report almost

Hard fax about our epidemic of shyness

Glenda Cooper Social Affairs Correspondent

The electronic revolution, dominated by faxes and e-mails, has helped turn the problem of shyness into an epidemic, the world's first conference on the subject was told yesterday. The number of sufferers has risen by a fifth in the last two decades and latest research puts the number of shy people nce

esto

at 60 per cent of the population, compared with 40 per cent when studies began in 1972.

New technology and an impersonal business world, coupled with decline in social networks, have meant a loss of social skills, said Professor Philip Zimbardo, the keynote speaker at the conference in Cardiff and founder of the Shyness Institute in California. One study revealed that parents spend only six to eight minutes a day talking to their children. Shyness had been brushed off as an unimportant quality that children grow out of, but Professor Zimbardo warned that it was "potentially lethal", with criminals such as America's Unabomber - who waged a letter-bomb campaign against American universities being described as "almost pathologically shy".

"Although we think of shy people as passive and easily manipulated, at the same time there is a level of resentment, rage and hostility."

Levels of shyness varied worldwide. Data from Israel suggested that only 30 per cent of people described themselves as shy, compared with double that in Japan, This, said Professor Zimbardo, was due to how success and failure is perpraised their children's success and brushed off failure, Japanese children were made to feel responsible for lack of success. The fear of failure, of being found out, pervaded all areas of shy people's lives. "Shy people also have sex later in life, have less diverse sex and do not describe it as a pleasurable thing," said Professor Zimbardo. San Francisco streetwalkers ceived. Whereas Jewish parents described their typical client as a shy, married man.

Professor Zimbardo said life was becoming more difficult for those who had trouble com-municating. The electronic revolution of e-mails and faxes means the medium has finally become the message ... With more virtual reality overtaking real reality, ordinary skills and situations are becoming more awkward," he told delegates.

We heard you wanted...

issued by Midland Bank plc. Member HSBC *Grou*g

it's where there's an extra 10% off

all sale prices

from thursday 17th july.

it's the habitat sale.

and it ends on sunday 20th july.

free packs to help you start your business.

The Listening Bank Call 0345 40 41 42

Daytime tel no (inc. STD)

Not everyone knows enough about business practice to get their fantastic idea up and running, so Midland has put together a start-up pack which includes a 30 minute video featuring people who successfully launched their own businesses and a booklet which teaches you the basics - like writing your business proposal and calculating your finances. There's also a software package for your PC which helps you work out forecasts and projections.

If so please fill in your sort code 40 May we send you information about our products and services in future? Yes No (please tick).

Evening tel no (inc. STD)

Europe gives the green light to Baltic

Imre Karacs Tallinn

There was a time not so long ago when Tallinn lay a world away from what was described for convenience's sake as "Europe".

Even if its shops were better stocked than Moscow's, and Communist officials mouthed a slightly milder ideology, the Estonian capital was still on the dark side: a Soviet porthole with metal bars peering sur-reptitiously towards the West.

Six years after the cataclysm, fast catamarans ferry Estonians to Heisinki in an hour and a half. Tallinn's shops are packed and the democratic experience has been enriched by the peaceful collapse of six successive

The boundary between two worlds has shifted east. Along Russia's Baltic frontier, an iron curtain is descending - three rows of barbed wire made in

At least the tanks are gone, but insecurity lingers. Earlier this month, the three Baltic Republics were turned down for membership of Nato, and now ans have finally been heard.

Republic, Hungary, Slovenia and Cyprus in entry talks for the European Union's first expansion into Eastern Europe. The Commission's Agenda 2000 document, adopted at a meeting of the EU executive yesterday, will be formally presented to the European Parliament in Strasbourg today.

Europe, it appears, is ready to embrace a tiny fragment of the former USSR as its own.

Being admitted to the EU is Estonia's most important foreign objective" says Toomas Hendrik lives, the foreign minister. "We are trying to return to the development path that we were on before we were torn out ng estates, dilapidated factories

Some of those scars are visible to this day, but more noticeable now as a contrast. For since Estonia regained its independence six years ago, the country has experienced, in the words of its government, an and potholed roads.

Back in 1992, when Estonia introduced its own currency, the

For a visitor arriving in Tallinn after several years absence, the prosperity is astounding. There are fewer Ladas in the streets than in eastern Berlin, Elegantly-dressed men and women dash about in their shiny western cars, gripping the wheel in one hand and their mobile phones in the other. The Old Town has risen anew, its pastel houses and palaces restored to their pre-war splendour. The telephone system is among the most modern in the Estonians are hooked up to the and state support. To the EU's large international computer manufacturers are queuing for factory space in Tallinn. Whatever Estonia may seem from Brussels, it is certainly no basket case.

The EU might, in fact, have a different kind of problem with Europe's free market gurus. The fact that we don't have any agricultural subsidies is something some people in Europe do not like says Mr Ilves. In its "big bang" approach to the economy, the Estonian government abolished trade taniffs dangerous precedent. Nor is Tallinn's recipe for privatisation likely to be universally ac-claimed. The state has divested itself of almost all its property. Even parts of the Foreign Min-istry building are sublet to the Danish and German embassics

- a happy symbiosis with two close allies. The outcome of its sell-off is that practically all the economy is now privately owned, much of it by foreign-

Swedish and Finnish companies hold the biggest stakes, exploiting the low wages Esto-nia offers. It is no coincidence Landing on its feet: Estonia's armed forces, seen here on joint exercise with Nato, may have to wait to join the alliance, but EU membership beckons both Sweden and Finland are soaring. Those two countries, nevertheless, are keen to reintegrate Estonia and cash in on the mercantile spirit that is set to transform the Baltic into one of the most dynamic regions of the world. Where that leaves Russia is difficult to see. The winds blowing from Moscow are chilly. Estonian attempts to settle a border dispute, simmering since 1920, have been rebuffed, and Russia continues to make shrill noises about Tallinn's "human ian minority. International observers have yet to verify any of the Russian allegations, but Estonia in any case is endeavouring to improve the lot of its former colonial masters. The Russians of Estonia, about a third of the population. are rich beyond the imagination of their cousins across the fence and are not likely to cause trouble. According to a poll published last week, a higher proportion of them back Estonia's EU membership than Estonians themselves. Britain and Europe,

Rupert Cornwell Moscow

Tried and trusty themes like Nato enlargement, regional is-sues and the Middle East were naturally high on the agenda. But the spotlight during Robin Cook's talks in Moscow yesterday was on a very different topic: urgent steps to keep the ever-growing Russian Mafiya from establishing a major beachhead in Britain. The Foreign Secretary said yesterday that he had made "serious progress" on the crime issue. Thus far, the combination of geographical separation from the Continent, tight horder controls and the absence of a big emigre community has allowed Britain to escape the fate of countries like Germany, Belgium and Austria, whose local underworlds have been largely taken over by Russian gangs and a memorandum of understanding finalised this week is intended to help keep things that way.

"The Mafiya," said one senior British police officer specialising in Russian organised crime, "basically looks at Britain as a pretty nice place, where you can buy nice houses and send your son to school, a kind of sanctuary which no one wants to foul up." But the warning signs are clear. The Russian population in Britain, both legal and illegal, is growing, as an over-stretched British visa service struggles to keep up. Meanwhile, Russian vice rings, traditionally a vehicle for infiltrating and taking over local criminal organisations, have started to spring up in London

The Mafiya looks at Britain as a pretty nice place ... a kind of sanctuary which no one wants to foul up' and elsewhere. These people are exceptionally violent and once they gain a foothold, they expand incredibly fast," the officer said.

This new non-military threat from Russia is a major reason why Tony Blair wants to make the fight against international crime the main topic at next year's G-8 summit in Birming

The big dangers are drugs and money laundering, where the major Russian crime syn-dicates have set their sights on the City of London, whose big banks are a perfect "stamp of approval" for tainted funds channelled out of Russia. Under the memorandum, Britain would gain access to Russian records and intelligence data.

Some 5,000 gangs are reckoned to be operating in Russia. dominating entire sectors of the economy. Most of them, however, are purely domestic, and British intelligence focuses pri-marily on a "few dozen" major figures who have real international links.

A current squeeze on traffic through the Balkans has helped turn Russia into the main transit route for drugs into Europe. Additionally, British police say, under-used former army laboratories in St Petersburg are now a prime source of the raw chemicals needed for the designer drugs fashionable in Western Europe. Britain has already seconded Customs and Excise officer to its Moscow embassy to liaise with the local authorities. But although official Russian figures claim the crime rate declined in 1996, this probably reflects the consolidation of organised crime and its spread into "le-gitimate" businesses, rather than any successful counter-offensive by police and security forces. These latter are corrupt and acutely short of resources.

rights abuses" against the Russ-Internet than the French, and farming lobby, that is a Cook acts to counter | Modern-day silk road that could help satellite slip its handcuffs GEORGIA DAYS

Poti - Armed with nothing but a dog-eared notebook and a elephone, Igor Ignatev stands in his watch tower and scans the flat baze of the Black Sea. A fishing boat chugs out of port.

so he jots down its details. All perfectly normal behaviour for an official supervising a harbour, you might think—ex-cept for one detail: this is Georgian territory, and yet the badge on Mr Ignatev's khaki fatigues reveals that he is a Russian border guard.

At the base of his watchtower, lies the port of Pott. With its rusting cargo ships and weed-choked promenades, it looks like any other former Soviet harbour, which age is withering. But this town of 51,000 is enjoying a growth in strategic importance that others cannot boast. It is becoming the gateway for a transport corridor linking Europe with the Caspian Sea, a pathway which Georgia hopes will eventually be a modern variant of the ancient Silk Road that linked China with the Mediterranean. The catalyst for this process is neighbouring Azerbaijan. There, the international race to exploit the Caspian Sea's vast oil reserves is fast gathering pace in the capital city of Baku. Sup-plies demanded by this starburst of economic activity are travelling by rail and road.

through Georgia.

Every day, a steady flow of lorries from Poti and its neighbouring port of Batumi rumble eastwards across a pot-holed highway to feed the needs of of the world's oil gladiators; BP is in Baku; so is Amoco, Exxon, Unocal, Total and more. But at the entrance to the corridor stand the Russians. If, from his tower, Mr Ignatev spots a ship breaking the law-for instance, by trying to speak out of Poti without paying harbour fees-Russian coastguards will be dispatched to intercept il. Six years after Georgia acquired independence, Moscow's forces are still in the republic. Russia has four military bases in Georgia, its troops stand on the border with Turkey, and Russian patrol vessels continue to throw their weight around in their Black Sea waters.

The art of diplomacy is not their strongest point. In recent months, the coastguards have shot dead a Turkish fisherman, and fired across the bows of a Greek vessel. Border guards also arrested the crew of an allegedly errant Ukrainian ship and flew them back to Moscow.

the greatest violation of our sovereignty", complained Peter Mamradze, chief of staff to Georgia's president, Eduard Shevardnadze, Whilst the border guards are in Georgia on contract (filling in, while Tbilisi sets up a force of its own), there is "no legal basis for their coastguards to be in Poti, or defending the coast of Georgia".

For Georgians, all this strikes to the heart of a basic issue: is Russia trying to compromise their sovereignty? Several years ago, the geopolitical picture seemed fairly clear. Russia had supplied arms and aircraft to Abkhazians fighting for independence from Toilisi Georgia was (and still is) convinced that Moscow's security services masterminded the 1995 assassination attempt against Mr Shevardnadze. Meddling in Georgia to keep it divided and dependent seemed to be the Kremlin strategy. Now Georgians say that Moscow has become more moderate. The so-called "new pragmatists" in the Yeltsin ad-ministration talk about co-operation and sharing the spoils of the Caspian oil. Yet hardliners still lurk within Russia's foreign and defence ministries, who are itching to call the shots again.

A reminder of Russia's nastier impulses came in March, when one of Moscow's leading newspapers, Nezavisimaya Gazeta published an anonymous article warning that the oil bonanza in the Caucasus meant that it was in danger of slipping from Russia's grasp. Only "destabilisation in Georgia and Azerbaijan is capable of preventing the consolidation of state power in these republics on an anti-Russian basis", it concluded.

Complicating the issue is the suspicion that some elements in Russia want to stop Georgia being selected as the route for the main export pipeline (as opposed to two already agreed smaller pipelines) which will eventually carry the bulk of Azeri oil to western markets. Moscow wants the pipe to run through southern Russia. As the two countries struggle to define their post-Soviet relationship, the creation of a transport corridor linking Kiev with Tbilisi, Baku and Central Asia could play a critical part. Not only will it help resurrect Georgia's economy that - according to official estimates -shrank by 75 per cent during the anarchy that followed independence in 1991. It will also help make the shaky independence of this nation of 5 million people more concrete.

No one disputes that Russia will always exert a powerful influence over Georgia - geography, Christianity, a shared Soviet past, military connections, and cultural forces, make that inevitable. But a new "silk • road" that does not go through. Russia could finally loosen the handcuffs that have for centuries connected Moscow and Tbilisi. That is what the Georgians hope. Whether Moscow can stomach it remains to be seen.

Phil Reeves

Hovercraft

Only Hovercraft ensures your Summer Channel crossing really flies by.

With 12 daily crossings from 6.30am in peak season, check-in and in no time you're off - flying the Channel in just 35

With in-flight seat service all the way. And no hold-ups when you touch down either, thanks to our hassle-free unloading. So you're on your way to your holiday destination - while conventional ferries are still mid-Channel.

Call us today.

And land this Summer's best value

EASILY THE FASTEST WAY ACROSS THE CHANNEL THIS SUMMER.

0990 240 241

STILL THE FASTEST *Off peak fare. Supplements payable on peak and standard services. Prices valid until December 31st.

WAY TO FRANCE

Blair meets

Real Andersta B consulte for > peace talk! Service of the lines.

A Bulk of the State of pasara meningan berara esperance in the

the training of the second for all (i_1,\ldots,i_n) , (i_1,\ldots,i_n) Print Nove & to the Artis. Medical and a recording Spain renews Ent. Inches Michael Sandar than the orders the late of the state of the st appropriate the late to be Aggregation of the Co. all tracks to the second william (Ikara Ikara ari Milosevic ela Sanda Milion . . .

hacique in a print the բաջարբ - միկարումուր (hom what he wast to Euro MPs fl Members of the Later partitions for the tederifu "the man is a for the later time. The co damento con dans con and Rive Hitler's priv Add Hallet state of # Diges hillory ksleider i historia والته التماد المعيو

> DIRECT LINE OT TU Big

(in the Can the Gr.004 (41 944

Charles (server

Moi under siege on streets of Nairobi

لفكذا من الاعل

Kenyan students in new clashes as pressure for reform grows

Ed O'Loughlin Nairobi

Students clashed with police loyal to Daniel arap Moi, the Kenyan President, for a second straight day in Nairobi yesterday. while opposition politicians warned of further violence if the government does not agree to basic constitutional reforms.

Early yesterday students threw rocks at police who prevented them re-entering Kenya Polytechnic, which was closed by the authorities following riots on Monday. Small groups of stu-dents continued to congregate along the street throughout the day, shadowed by truck loads of police with tear gas and riot gear.

The police made occasional charges to disperse groups of students - some of whom tried to block the busy Haile Selassie Avenue with burning debris but there was no repeat of last week's heavy-handed police action, in which police killed at least nine pro-reform demonstrators, including two students, with clubs, rubber bullets and live ammunition.

A number of arrests were made over the past two days but there were no reports of deaths or serious injuries. One student told The Independent that the use of live amorunition last week made students unwilling to push confrontation too far.

I think many of us will go home," said Joram, a 24-yearold student of surveying. "The way the situation is around here, we are going to die if we do anything. You could say we are living in fear."

While many students said they were demonstrating in favour of constitutional reforms leading to greater political freedom, others said the riot was sparked when the college authorities reacted harshly to a student protest over academic grievances on Monday.

According to one Western diplomat based in Nairobi, the political atmosphere is now so liners in his own entourage. Re-

Switzerland next month.

coalition Herri Batasuna.

tense that even relatively nonpolitical disputes can quickly swell into public protests calling for the abolition of restrictions on movement, speech and political organisation.

Supporters of reform say that last week's killings prove that President Moi is bent on using repressive colonial era laws to ensure a further extension to his 19-year rule when elections are held later this year.

While opposition politicians and church leaders continue to call for constitutional reform in advance of the elections, they have so far failed to organise any mass actions or protests to build on the public fury at last week's violence.

Notoriously divided, opposition parties have failed to agree even amongst themselves on what to do next. The Forum for the Restoration of Democracy in Kenya, one of the two main opposition parties, is publicly split on whether it should resist the poll or once again accept President Moi's assurances that reform is on its way.

The reformist Safina party. founded by the paleontologist Richard Leakey, retains some credibility with ordinary Kenyans and foreign observers but is still officially illegal because Mr Moi's government refuses to register the party.

Yesterday Mr Leakey said that the reformist National Convention Executive Committee - a coalition of political parties, mainstream churches and NGOs - would launch an escalating series of mass actions if the government did not agree to constitutional reform. He identified the coastal city of Mombasa, Kenya's main tourist centre, as the next target for protest.

Conciliatory noises from President Moi, who has promised to begin a debate on the issue within his Kenyan African National Union party, have been contradicted by hardferring to a police attack on the Anglican cathedral in Nairobi last week, the Minister for Transport and Communications, Mr Wilson Ndolo Ayah, accused the Anglican church of "engaging in criminal activities by giving refuge to hooligans, thieves and other mischievous characters who were insulting and stoning fellow Kenyans in the name of calling for constitutional reforms.

The government is also under strong pressure to reform from the international community. which is concerned at the growing potential for violence and at Kenya's continuing failure to deal with rampant corruption.

Following last Monday's ful protest ". Britain, the former Kenya's continuing failure to deal with rampant corruption.

killings the United States State Department issued an unusually strong statement deploring the government's use of "strong colonial power and still the major political and economic influence in Kenya, has joined 21 other countries in calling for political dialogue on constitu-

The government in Nairobi

Body blow: A student protester is dealt with harshiy yesterday as President Moi faced new demands over constitutional reform has so far rejected the calls, but with the US and Britain at the head of 20 Western countries calling for dialogue and reform. It risks losing the aid money it needs for its day-to-day yesterday in a parliamentary session that was organised hastily - apparently to prevent the leaders of Montenegro from voting against him.

FROM CELLNET. HELP FOR PEOPLE WHO ARE ALWAYS ON THE PHONE.

Milosevic elected president Slobodan Milosevic was elected president of Yugoslavia

Spain renews fight against Eta

Spain's Interior Minister, Jaime Mayor Oreja, said yesterday that the massive protests held to condemn the slaying of a young politician by the armed group Eta had opened a new phase in the battle against the armed separatist group. Mr Oreja said his government would do all it could to isolate Eta's political arm, the Basque

significant shorts

Blair meets Klerides for peace talks on Cyprus

British officials spoke yesterday of a possible change the wind in the peace talks on Cyprus, arguing "[The negotiation) may fail again. But if it succeeds, it's the real McCoy." The talks have been part of a never-ending stalemate, since the Turkish invasion of the island in 1974. Glafkos Klerides, leader of the Greek Cypriots, yesterday met Tony Blair at Downing Street. The meeting came just three days after the conclusion of UN-brokered talks between Mr Klerides and Rauf Denktash, the Turkish Cypriot leader, in the rural resort of Troutbeck in upstate New York. A second round of talks will be held in

Euro MPs fight for allowances Members of the European Parliament saw off demands for a serious clampdown on their lavish allowances yesterday, agreeing reforms critics dismissed as cosmetic. However parliamentary chiefs announced that MEPs will for the first time be asked to furnish proof of travel before

Hitler's private secretary dies

claiming reimbursement on flights to and from Strasbourg

Katherine Butler, Strasbourg

Adolf Hitler's private secretary, Gerda Christian, has died in Düsseldorf, aged 83, Bild newspaper reported vesterday. Christian died in hospital from cancer, the newspaper said.

DIRECT LINE INSTANT ACCESS ACCOUNT Small space. Big savings rate.

41-44,999 C5,000 - £9,999 6.15% £10,000 - £24,999 £25,000 - £49,999 6.25% CS0,000 - L99,999

DIRECTLINE

0161 833 1121 MANCHESTER

CALL ANYTIME Sam to Spm Monday to Friday and Fam to Spm Set

If you depend on your mobile, you'll know that a handset is only as good as the network that supports it. So if you're a Cellnet digital customer, here are five features that will make managing your life so much easier.

CALLBACK

Cellnet users don't need to be clairvoyant to see who's trying to call. Normally, the caller's identity comes up. So if you'd prefer to talk to them later, let Callback take the message. It's easy to set up and easy to use. Just key 1750 then SEND and Callback, our answering service, will take your messages.* After that, key 901 SEND and you can listen to them. You hear a beep and usually UAITING the number of the caller who's waiting appears, so making a long call needn't mean that you miss an important one.

CELLNET

Service means Cellnet users can send one another text messages. Which means that the message appears discreetly on the display of your handset moments later.

Cellnet's Short Messaging

over 60 countries around the CELLNET ROAMING world, and if you rent or buy a compatible handset, that includes the USA and Canada. Call 0800 21 4000 for a user-guide with full information on these and many other special features. Then you'll see how Ceilnet knocks some other systems into a cocked hat.

CEPIAIN FRATURES ARE HANDSET DEPENDENT "CALLDACK IS A VALUE ADDED SEPVICE OFFERED BY CELLNET SOLUTIONS LTD OTHER MESSAGING SERVICES MAY BE AVAILABLE CALLS ID CALLBACK COST 30P A MINUTE ON CELLNES SOLUTIONS PECONHENDED TARIFF PRICES MAY YARY. CHECK WITH YOUR SERVICE PROVIDER TELECOM SECURICOD CELLULAR RADIO LTD.

Innocents facing execution on America's death rows

John Carlin

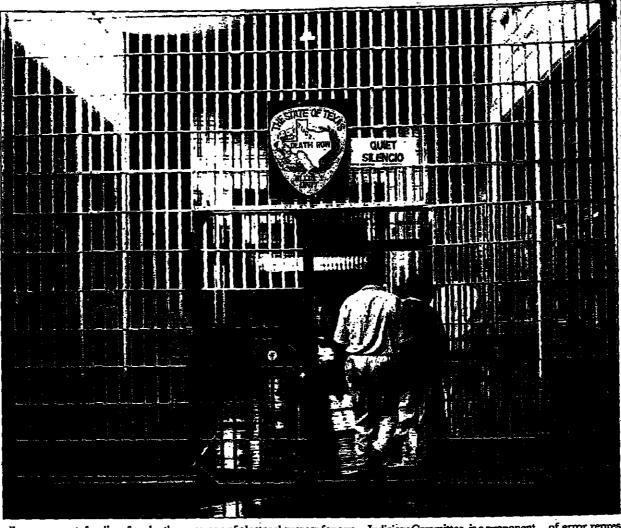

Advocates of the death penalty in the United States remained unrepentant vesterday following publication of a report revealing that 69 condemned prisoners have been released from Death Row in the United States since 1973 after evidence emerged that they had been wrongfully convicted.

The report, released yesterday by the Washington-based Death Penalty Information Centre, warns that recent legislation approved by the Congress and President Bill Clinton to expedite the appeals process of convicted inmates and to minimise their access to legal help increases the odds that innocent people will be executed. Among the many cases cited in the report one concerns two men who were released after 10 years on Death Row even though another man confessed to the crime shortly after their conviction in 1985.

In another instance of gross miscarriage of justice, a man spent 18 years awaiting death in an Illinois prison until new evidence of his innocence providentially unearthed by three journalism students secured his freedom in June last year. Some 6,000 people have been sentenced to death in the US since 1973 which translates, in the light of the report's figures, into a rate of more than one innocent death row inmate for every hundred death sentences passed. "The rate may be considerably higher," the report said, "since extraordinary efforts are generally needed to free a death row inmate, and most inmates do not have those extra resources available to them."

The statistical evidence suggests that at least 32 of the 3,200 inmates currently awaiting death by lethal injection, hanging or the electric chair are innocent. But scant reason exists to believe that legislation signed by President Clinton last year to cut off all government funding for death penalty resource centres, a system introduced under Ronald Reagan's watch to assist lawyers conduct capital appeals, will be reversed soon.

America's elected leaders, responding to the public's impatience at the typically long delays between sentencing and execution, have been sing both at state and federal level for new laws that will speed up the killing rates. Indeed, enthusiastic sup-port for the death penalty is a sine qua non of electoral success for any candidate running for the presiden-cy and most running for Congress. A poll conducted by ABC television to coincide with a broadcast on Monday night dedicated to the Death Penalty Information Centre's report found that 77 per cent of respondents continued to favour legal executions against 19 per cent who unequivocally did not.

Bill McCollum, the Republican head of the House of Representatives'

Judiciary Committee, is a proponent of capital punishment so zealous that he found motive for cheer in the report. "It shows," he said, "that the sys-tem is working quite well." In the light

Robert Fish

The Israeli-Hizbollah ceasefire

in southern Lebanon was in danger of collapsing last night after Israeli artillery fire killed

two more civilians - a Pales-and Hizbollah fired 18

tinian woman and her son

Beirut

of error represented an acceptable level of risk. Mr McCollum remains unmoved having read in the report the stories of Rolando Cruz and Alejandro Hernandez, who were sen-on borrowed time (Photograph: Gerald Davis); (above) Florida's infamous electric chair - Old Sparky The fact that Hernandez, according to the court that initially convicted them, was borderline retarded never counted as a mitigating factor. Indeed, 31 offenders found to have been mentally retarded

JVC HRI230 Long play/record facility. VideoPlus with PDC. Auto set-up. Was £249.99. In-store Price £199.99.

PRICE CHECK

'If you find the same product cheaper locally, we'll be pleased to refund the difference. Just notify us within 7 days of purchase. The product must be new, complete and available for immediate delivery. Mail order than Ever! PRICE -WE CAN'T BE BEATEN hundreds of prices in the national press to make sure that Dixons Price Checked prices can't be PRICE

SAVE # £60 INGERSOLL VX950

£124.55 old daughter was seriously LONG PLAY VIDEO WITH VIDEOPLUS AND PDC e Long play/record facility e Auto ast-us. Was £159.98. Their deaths followed a Hizboliah attack on an armoured vehicle belonging to Israel's South Lebanon Army militia allies and the Israelis later said - correctly - that they £149.55

HITACHI VTF650 HEAD NICAM STEREO VIDEO

TOSHIBA V825

The FIS leadership urged Algiers to follow Madam's release with that of his fiery deputy Ali Belhadi, jailed at the same time for 12 years, and that of "all the political prisoners". It said this was needed to prepare the climate to "allow the return of the effective sovereignty of the Algerian people". Belhadi is widely seen as a

Lebanese delegates to the ceasefire committee intend to add the names of Laiga and Ahmed Marmar to that of Ahmed Sweidan, the elderly farmer killed by Israeli fleshette shells on Saturday, when the committee meets the UN headquarters at Naqqoura today.

There are growing fears in Katyusha rockets at Israeli Laiqa Marmar and her son rockets over the border into Israel if the committee does not Ahmed, covered in blood, were unequivocally condemn Israel brought into the mortuary of for recent shelling in which at least 15 civilians have also been the Hammond hospital in Sidon within minutes of their deaths in an orchard outside the wounded - including a boy who lost his eye when Israeli artillery batteries retaliated for the Christian village of Barty, on the edge of the Israeli occupation zone. They had been killed by one of 20 shells fired by the killing of an Israeli officer 11 days ago. Three of the 18 Katyushas fell Israelis: Mrs Marmar's 18-year inside Israeli yesterday. It was in just such a way that last April's Israeli blitz on southern Lebanon - which cost the lives of almost 200 Lebanese civilians - began.

Almost equally ominously, Israel's "Voice of the South"

radio station, broadcasting from had fired into fields, not into a the occupied area, yesterday village. The terms of the April 1996 truce forbid Israelis or quoted the head of the Israeli Hizbollah to fire at each other army's northern command as saying that the Hizbollah were from, or towards, civilian areas targeting civilians while Israeli upon civilians. A similar quotation was broadcast before the April 1996 bombardment. The truth is that while the Hizboliah have wounded Lebanese civilians inside the occupation zone - another civilian was hurt in an attack on the SLA yesterday - eight of the nine deaths in southern Lebanon over the past 15 months have the south of Lebanon that the been caused by Israeli forces. But truth in souther

Lebanon is worth as little as human life and Israel's military occupation is becoming ever more tenuous as large numbers of its proxy SLA mercenaries are defecting to Beirut. In one village in the Israeli occupation zone, only six of the original 32 SLA men are still working for the Israelis: the rest have fled or been killed in Hizbollah attacks.

At night, the SLA tune in to Hizbollah's radio station in the hope that it will warn them of imminent assaults. So distrustful are the Israelis of their own SLA militiamen that they imprison their local mercenaries in a room at their gun emplacements - with a guard on the door - whenever a senior Israeli officer visits the front lines. SLA men are now paid be-But the farm on which the troops were showing the "ut-but complain that they are Marmars were working was most restraint" in not firing ten paid in forged notes. -but complain that they are of-his boss. The authorities, dur-ing their talks with the FIS lead-ers in 1994 to try to end the violence, accused him of sending a letter to guerrillas urging elections on 5 June. Hundreds of people have been killed in attacks blamed on Muslim fun-group which is doing the urban bombings like that yesterday."

Algeria frees jailed fundamentalist leader

The Armed Islamic Group

(GIA), led by Antar Zouabri,

27. is the most ruthless of the groups and is blamed by the authorities for bombings and massacres in which hundreds

On Monday, a bomb in the have died.

"And the GIA has nothing to do with the FIS and it's that them to increase attacks. Madani's release follows an upsurge of violence since Al-geria held multi-party general

Paris (Reuter) — Algeria freed radical Islamic Salvation Front (FIS) leader Abassi Madani vesterday in what diplomats termed a dramatic step but one unlikely to end violence in the North African country. The outlawed FIS leadership in Europe welcomed the move as a "positive act ... and a definite and effective contribution to solving the crisis and returning to peace and stability".

The military prosecutor's office in Blida, where Madani had been sentenced to 12 years' imprisonment in 1992,

"Ît's a dramatic move in erms of the government relationship with the opposition and FIS," said a senior diplomat in Algiers.

aid the measure was a "release

"But it is not going to stop the violence like the bomb in Baraki . or the massacres. There's no reason to think that Madani can do that now."

yesterday. Security forces said 21 died. After a weekend in which two newspapers reported the massacre of 44 people, most with their throats cut, the govern-ment paper El Moudjahid said security had worsened with another massacre - this time 15 civilians - in Medea overnight on Monday. Madani, 66, was serving a 12-

year jail term imposed in 1992 for threatening state security after a strike and riots preceded Algetia's multi-party general election Birth

Marria

¢ Dea

RIKTHS

RITHS

planned for June 1991.

In the unrest at the height of the FIS's domination of city streets in June he said: "If the army does not withdraw we will be obliged to call a jihad (holy struggle),"
Two days later, he and Belhadi were arrested. The poll was put off to December 1991. And atter the FIS took a huge lead, the authorities cancelled the results and a planned second toring. Just months later, amid growing violence, Madani and Bel-hadi were tried and sentenced by Blida military court.

Last week Abdeskader
Hachani, the man who lad the FIS in the elections, walked free from jail after being given a five;

Algiers suburb of Baraki killed year sentence, covered by his pe-26 people and wounded more riod in detention. The prosethan 80, mainly women and chilcutor asked for 10 years on dren, Algerian newspapers said charges of trying to undermine state security.

El Watan newspaper then forecast President Liamine Zeroual's government might lift the state of emergency to forge political consensus with the opposition. Legal opposition groups have long demanded the 1992 state of emergency be lifted to emble

Gianni Versace

Gianni Versace was a talented vulgarian. His clothes appealed to the type of woman - or man - who could make a Faustian deal in return for a oneway ticket to Hollywood. And Hollywood was the appropriate venue for his louche

From the mid-Eighties, in a mutually promoting symbiosis, he teamed up with the gaudier stars of film and pop music to persuade the general public that a Versace outfit automatically conveyed sexual stardom on its wearer. Could anyone - even if they had wished - have avoided seeing the catapulting into the public eye of Elizabeth Hurley in the safety-pinned dress?

Versace was the unrivalled master of sound-bite dressmaking. In an age when performers have to seize the milli-second of fame before the world's cameras at the Oscars, the Emmy or the Cannes awards, his clothes ensured they were noticed. Loudly coloured, swagged in pinchbeck - 'fool's gold' chains and medallions stamped with Medusas' heads, and cantilevered into improbable hourglass forms, the clothes yelled Versace boasted that he took inspiration from the prostitutes in the vicinity of his childhood home in Reggio di Calabria, in southern Italy. He liked to explain that he was offering "fem-ininity" back to women, but he clearly confused Availability with Allure, and the Sexual with the Sensual.

Born of humble origins in 1946, he was apprenticed at his mother's knee, for she ran up outlits for the locals. Having moved to Milan, in 1973 he began freelance designing for the prominent ready-to-wear labels Callaghan and Genny before launching his epony-mous label in 1978.

eace

An adept self-promoter, he immediately employed Richard Avedon to photo-graph Brooke Shields, Janice Dickenson, Kim Alexis, Jerry Hall and Gia – the su-permodels of their time – in an arresting advertising cam-

Mariuccia Mandelli of Krizia, Gianfranco Ferre, and the dubbed "neo-conture", for it Missonis, put Milan on the international fashion map, ren-dering Rome, the traditional centre of Italian fashion, obsolete.

This handful of designers was responsible for Italy's second post-war miracle; they built up their country's ready-towear to become its premier industry.

In collaboration with Italian textile manufacturers and Milanese fashion editors who pioneered the quid pro quo editorial pages for advertising revenue - these designers, in a mere 10 years, reached a global buying public. By under-scoring their brand with product placement in blockbuster films, their commercial success was assured.

Versace's clothes were consistently clean-cut, unromantic and sporty. Initially he restyled basic sports clothes - bomber jackets, jeans, jodphurs - in lux-urious materials, such as silk, leather and suede. These casual shapes were flatteringly cut and were well suited to the raunchier working woman who emerged from the barricades of feminism to march hand in hand with her Barbie Doll sister towards flaunted and rootless materialism. Alternatively, he offered a pastiche of Thirties and Forties dressing, epitomised by Charlotte Rampling's coldly amoral character in Luchino Visconti's film The Damned

Versace had talent. He was an adept cutter, could tailor with skill and possessed a clever and experimental sense of cloth. Keen to harness science, he was an eager exponent of the latest technology. In 1982, inspired by the aluminium chainmail gloves used in abattoirs, he introduced an aluminium mesh which he draped across the body. Its sweet liquefaction gave the appearance of mercury dripping, imperceptibly slowly, over a woman's curves. It was an exquisite use of a modern material for evening wear.

The following year, having studied laser technology in fuse rubber to pelts. This was ousted the needle and thread. The result, alternate strips of leather and rubber that had the appearance of undulating corrugated iron, was made into biker's jackets and fitted anoraks, that were hard-hitting but soft to the touch.

Versace surrounded himself with family. His brother Santo was his partner, his sister Donatella, a perma-tanned, bottle blonde, was his muse and latterly co-designer. It is common knowledge that she is principally responsible for the diffusion lines Versus and Instante which he launched in the Nineties. Donatella's profile was raised, it was said. when it was rumoured that he was HIV positive.

Visiting his headquarters in Milan reminded one of the antiseptic presentation of the classical world favoured by the Getty Museum in Los Angeles. Classical renditions of the male torso stood in frigid white alcoves, importantly lit so as to emphasise the assumed refinement and scholarship of their

Lest one failed to appreciate his grasp of art history - he loved to be referred to as a "Renaissance Man" - one was soon plied with files of "background material" on his show homes on Lake Como and in Miami, where he housed his art

A frenzy of promotional zeal announced the opening of Versace's Old Bond Street shop in London, in the middle of the recent recession. He pioneered the recent fad for fashion designers requisitioning the old noble buildings that had once housed "Old Masters", perhaps intending to underscore their assumption that they were the new masters of art. It was said the building cost £11m to "restore". If Hollywood were to make a film about Caligula, surely the setting should be this shop.

At the time his look had reached the apogee of bawdiness which was laughingly marketed as "couture" and "atelier". Lingerie lace and paign. Versace, along with his studied laser technology in satin baby-doll dresses, whose bitter rival Giorgio Armani, Japan, he used the laser to hems swung just short of lace-topped stockings, were worn with Louis-heeled mules and Louis-Quinze-style curly tresses - proof that he had a fine appreciation of French ancien régime culture.

Though the look was promoted on the backs of supermodels, it tended to be worn by those women who could afford a few thousand for these little nothings, namely ageing media tycoons. Their men were dressed like henchmen in black shirts, black boots and black suits all swagged with gilt gew-gaws. Similarly dressed, Gianni Versace and his band of cohorts hijacked Sting and Trudie Styler's country wedding in 1992.

By the Nineties Versace and his band of blackshirts were in cahoots with a triumvirate that was to dominate fashion: Richard Avedon, the image manipulator, Naomi, Christy and Claudia, the image dolls, and various glossy magazine editors, the image purveyors. They created an image that could be read at 50 paces from a news-stand or street hoarding; an image which served the industry but not the reader. When editors such as Suzy Menkes criticised, they were banned from shows.

In recent seasons, though his look softened, it could not wrench itself from the boudoir. Customers were dressed in lingerie satin and lace cut on the bias. Versace liked to claim that this was countre; it was merely a ham-fisted rerun of the refined techniques of Grès, Augustabernard and Vionnet of the 1930s.

Gianni Versace was truly a designer of his time. It is little wonder, in an age when beauty is judged by the configuration of dots on a screen and glanced fleetingly as the viewer surfs through the channels, that dayglo colours, more gold than Midas could have hoarded, and pastiches of call-girl gear, should attract both attention and custom.

Gianni Versace, fashion designer. born Reggio di Calabria, Italy 2 December 1946; died Miami Beach, Florida 15 July

fersace the 'Renaissance Man': an adept cutter and tallor with a clever sense of cloth; at Covent Garden, 1990

Duffield: 'Typical signalman. Ordered us all about. But we adored him'

Sometimes one can imagine one knows a man well, and then sector of his life. For two decades, 1962-82, I had a working and friendly relationship with Dick Duffield in his capacity as joint manager of the West Lothian Co-operative Society. Prompted only by the Falklands War, and inevitable talk of the role of submariners. did Duffield reveal that for two years he had himself been a submariner in the most perilous of conditions.

With little of the sophisticated equipment of the 1980s, Duffield and his mates had risked their lives, time and again, on active service off the Norwegian coast, and in the icy waters of the Arctic, in defence of the convoys carrying vital sup-plies to Murmansk. As he wry-ly observed to me, "Yes, life in a submarine off the North Cane in wartime conditions does out the trials and tribulations -

South Normanton in Derbyshire, into a family working in the retail trade, and attended Normanton Parish School. Volunteering for the Navy in 1941, as soon as he was eligible, he saw service in destroyers in the Mediterranean, Gibraltar, and off the West African coast, in the protection of the landings of the First Army.
Lithe and small of stature,

Duffield volunteered for the demanding and dangerous life of a submariner in the spring of 1943. He joined an old American-built submarine, H44, as signalman to the commander, Lt (now Lt-Cdr) Rawdon Ban--Martin DSC.

When Bannar-Martin was posted in June 1943, as the first captain of the newly-commissioned 545-ton HMS Viking, of his great history The War at torpedo-tubes, with 16 torpedoes in all. Commander Bannar-Martin recollects: "Dick was a damn good chap. He gave totally loyal and very efficient service in Viking from June 1943 until May 1945. Desoite severe bouts of sea-sickness, he was ever determined to receive and tap out his signals". (Charlie Askew, a fellow crew member on the Viking, said of him; "Typical signalman. Ordered us all around.

But we adored him.") Bannar-Martin told me that commander and signalman had a special relationship in submarines of that era, since one opened the hatch, and the other immediately followed.

The naval historian Captain S.W. Roskill in the third volume built by Vickers Armstrong at Sea (1961), records that on 14 lawful. A general policy of real though they are - of man- Barrow, he asked for Duffield October 1943, Viking sank a aging branches of the Co-op- to go with him. The "V" class 1,300-ton ship (The Standard) erative Wholesale Society into submarines were 200 feet by 16 in a convoy which she encoun-Dick Duffield was born in three-inch "pop" gun, and four but in the Arctic Circle. Three years earlier, it was up the Bodo fjord that the 30,600-ton battleship Warspue had gone

Dick Duffield

Narvik. Conscious that the German escorts might well have sunk Viking with depth-charges, Duffield remained full of compassion for any sailor, German or of other nationality, catapulted into the sea.

during the evacuation from

During a brief stay at the Campbelltown base in Argylishire in December 1943, Duffield married Wren Jenny McNish, who was based in Machrihanish at the time; they were to be extremely happily married and supportive to one another for 54 years.

While Duffield recovered from a motor-bike accident shortly after being demobbed, she returned to service on the Keir estate at Thornhill, Dumfriesshire.

with the Co-o ing promoted to Thomas Carlyle's village at Ecclefechan, and then the highest village in Scotland, Warnlockhead, with its unique (and well-preserved) lead-miners' library.

Duffield steeped himself in local history, wherever he worked, and like many dedicated people in the Co-op Movement of the day, he was widely and well read. Promoted as manager in Carstairs, he came to Broxburn, the heart of the shaleoil industry, in 1962, Working in harmonious tandem with the late George Brown, manager of the Bathgate Co-op Society, I witnessed at first hand how Duffield and his partner revived an ailing organisation, and enthused a down-hearted staff. He led by example of hard work and care for the customer. Such dedication is a massive service to a communi-Recovered, Duffield got a job ty such as West Lothian.

voted much time to helping organise the Submariner and Comrades Association. One of his last successes was to see a stone memorial erected, and a joint service held in memory of HMS Untamed, built in 1942 by Vickers Armstrong on the Tyne, as P58, and sunk while on trials with all hands (later salved and renamed Vitality); and HMS Vandal, ex P64, sister-ship of 1 iking, wrecked mysteriously in the Firth of Clyde in 1943.

Tam Dalyell

Richard Arthur Duffield, submariner signalman, grocer: horn South Normanton, Derbyshire 21 October 1923: joint manager. West Lathian Co-operative Society 1963-88; married 1943 Janet McNish (two sons, two daughters); died Livingston, West Lothian 20 June 1997.

Births, Marriages & Deaths

BIRTHS

WEIR: Ruchel, Andrew and Jemima are delighted to announce the birth of Renjamin Andrew on Wednesday 9 July 1997.

WELLS: Tom, Jake, Charlie and Dad are over the moon at the arrival of Harry Arthur, on 14 July, completing the five-a-side line-up. Played, Muml

LITTHAUER: Ernst Karl, OBE, Died 10 July 1997, in his sleep, aged S1, after a long illness bravely borne. Will ter a long illness bravely borne. Will be sadly missed by his family and his mony triends. Funeral to take place on Wednesday 23 July at Lodge Hill Crematorium. Burmingham, at 2 Julym. No flowers please, donations to 5t Mary 4 Hospite. 176 Raddlebarn Road. Selly Park. Birmingham 124 7DA.

WADSWORTH: Jane Wadsworth, died peracrfully at home, on 12 July, after a brave struggle against illness. She is greath mused by a wide community of relations, friends and collectures in medical research. A much-loved daughter, mother and grandmother, she leaves Emma and Harry, her children, Barbara Arnott, her mother, and John McEwan, her her mather, and John McEwan, her partner for six years of prace and happartner for an years of prace and hap-piness. No flowers please, but dona-listic for career research or cancer care charities. Family funeral on 18 July and valedictory gathering in early Autumn.

Announcements for Gazette BIRTHS, VIARRIAGES & DEATHS should be sent in writing to the Gazette Editor,
The Independent I Canada Square, Camary Wharf, Loudon E14 5DL, teleplanted to 0.171-293 2012 or fineed to planted to 0.171-293 2012 or fineed to planted to 0.171-293 2012 or fineed to planted to 0.171-293 2018, and are charged at $6.50 a line (VAT extra). OTHER Gazette astomographics make be submitted in writlang last faveth and are charged at £10 a line, VAT extra.

Forthcoming marriages

Mr D. J. Cockshott and Miss G. A. Ellis

The engagement is announced be-tween David, son of Mr and Mrs Douglas Cockshott, of Broadstairs. Kent, and Gillian, twin daughter of the late Mr Richard Ellis and of Mrs Ellis, of Brecon, Powys.

Birthdays

Professor Anita Brookner, art histurian and novelist, 59; Mr Alan Campbell-Johnson, public relations consultant, 84; Mr Phillip Carrick. cricketer, 45; Mrs Margaret Court, tennis player, 55; Mr Alan Donnel-MEP, 40; Mr Frank Field MP, Minister for Social Security and Welfare Reform, 55; Professor Sir Hugh Ford, mechanical engineer, 84; Sir John Freeland QC, former legal adviser. Foreign and Commonwealth Office, 70; Sir Charles Graham Bt. former Lord-Lieutenant of Cambria, 78; Mr Brian Howard, former deputy chairman, Marks & Spencer, 71; Miss Shirley Hughes, author and illustrator. 70; Baroness Llewelyn-Davies of Hastoe, Deputy Speaker, House of Lords, 82; The Ven Dr Harold Lockley, former Archdeacon of Loughborough, 81; Mr Thomas Mcgahy, MEP, 68; Mr Edward Miller, former Moster of Fitzwilliam College, Cambridge, 82: Sir Michael Morland, High Court judge, 68; Lord Prentice, former government minister, 74; Professor Sir Philip

Randle, biochemist, 71; General Bernard Rogers, former Supreme Al-lied Commander, Europe, 76; Mr Tom Rosenthal, publisher, 62; Mr

John Wart, former president, MCC, 70, Miss Diana Warwick, trade union leader, 52; Sir George Young MP, for mer Transport Secretary, 56; Mr Pinchas Zukerman, violinist, 49.

Anniversaries

Rirths: Andrea del Sarto (Andrea Domenico d'Agnolò di Francesco), painter, 1486; Sir Joshua Reynolds, painter, 1723; Mary Baker Eddy, founder of the Church of Christ, Sci-entist, 1821; Roald Amundsen, Polar explorer, 1872; Ginger Rogers (Virginia Katherine McMath), actress and dancer, 1911. Deaths: Anne of Cleves, fourth wife of Henry VIII, 1557; Josiah Spode, potter, 1827; Ed-mond-Louis Antoine Huot de Goncourt, novelist, 1896; Joseph Hilaire Belloc, author, 1953. On this day: the Muslim Era began when Muhammad began his flight from Mecca to Medina (The Helira), 622; the Tsar of Russia (Nicholas II) and all his family were murdered by Bolsheviks at Ekaterinburg, 1918; the world's first parking meters were installed, in Oklahoma City, 1935; the first atomic test bomb was exploded at Los Alamos, New Mexico, 1945; the Bill to abolish the Greater London Council received Royal Assent, 1985. Theay is the Feast Day of St Athenogenes, St Eustathius of Antioch, St Fulrad, St Helier, St Mary

Magdalen Postel, St Reineldis

Highgrow House, Tethury, Gloocestershire. The Princess Royal, Patron, SENSE – The National Doublind and Rubella Asteciation, waits Group House, Northfield, Bormsphant; and as Prendent, Save the Children Fund, waits Wood End Family Project, Cowards, and opens the new offices of Central Talevation Studies. Banasagham. Princess Margares attends a garden party to extend to the Studies and Studies. Banasagham of the Central Talevation Studies. Banasagham Princess Margares attends a garden party to extend to the Studies of the Regist Section of Scottand, at the Palace of Holymodiciae. The Dundess of Giocontes; Deputy President, with the East of England Agricultural Society Stow, Pe-

Lectures

National Gallery, James Heard, "In the Family (iii): Edouard Manet and Berthe Morisot"; Tamar Garb, "Scurat: powder and paint", 6.30pm (tickets required). Victoria and Albert Museum: Caroline Rimell, "Blue and White Ceramics (ii)", 2.30pm.

Tate Gallery: Rachel Barnes, "Henry Tate's Gift", 1pm.

Brifish Museum: Beth McKillop, "Korean Books and manuscr

Luncheons

Glovers' Company Mr Michael Down, Master, Wordon, presided at a hmcheon held yesterday at Grocers' Hall, London EC2. Baroness Thatcher, accompa-

of Medicine Sir Christopher Paine, President, Royal Society of Medicine, present-ed Diplomas of Honorary Fellowship to Lady Justice Butler-Sloss, Sir Kenneth Calman, Mr M.A.R. Free-man, Professor I. Isherwood and Professor L. Symon at a ceremony held yesterday at the Royal Society of Medicine, London WL The society's Gold Medal was presented to Professor Sir Richard Doll. A reception

Changing of the Guard
The Househald Cavalry Monated Regiment
mounts the Queen's Life Guards at Horse Guards, Hang, let Bettalfon Scots Guards notcurs the Queen's Guard, at Backingham Palace, 11.30am, band provided by the Coldstream Guards.

Police entitled to warn about paedophiles North Wales Police and ors, ex parte AB and anor; Queen's presence of convicted paedophiles on his site was not unshipful Company of Glovers of Lonnied by Sir Denis Thatcher Bt, was

Royal Society

and dinner were held afterwards.

LAW REPORT

16 July 1997

Bench Divisional Court (Lord Bingham, Lord Chief Justice and Mr Justice Buxton) 19 July 1997 A police policy under which information was disclosed to a caravan site owner about the disclosure could not, however be justified.

The Divisional Court dis-NACRO. missed the application of AB and his wife CD for judicial re-view of the policy of the North Wales Police ("NWP") in re-lation to the release of infor-Lord Bingham CJ said that mation about paedophiles in their area, and of the decision of the Wrexham police on 27 March 1997 to inform the owner of a local caravan site of the applicants' presence at the The applicants had been released from prison in July It was important to record 1996 after serving sentences for sexual offences involving chilportant factual statements in dren. They had attempted to settle in Northumberland and in Colwyn Bay, but had been forced to leave both areas after adverse publicity in local newspapers and angry responses from neighbours. They bought a caravan and moved on to a site near Wrexham in

October 1996.

plicants to leave. Stephen Solley QC and Jonathan Crystal (Michael Pundon, Newcastleupon-Tyne) for the applicants; Presiley Baxendale QC and Pushpinder Saini (Police Solicitor) for NWP; James Eadie (Treasury Solicitor) for the Secretary, Michael Douglas QC (Eversheds, Birminghani) for in January 1997 the NWP had received a copy of a report from the Northumbria Police, the purpose of which was to alert recipients to the danger which the applicants were thought to present to children and vulnerable adults within the community where they settled, whom it was thought they would target and procure for sexual abuse. that the applicants strongly challenged a number of im-the report. A member of the NWP Child Protection Team was concerned at the risk the applicants might present if they remained at the caravan site during the Easter holidays when a large number of young children were expected to be owner of the site told the ap- formed of the applicants' background. There had been serious concern in North Wales since the end of 1995 at the risk of reoffending by convicted pae-dophiles following release from prison, and a policy was formulated to deal with its response to such a situation. The policy provided for disclosure, on a need to know basis, of information which was believed to be necessary for the protection of potential victims of crime. Most of the policy was directed to the release of information to schools and education authorities.

The present case illustrated. in an acute way, the tension which might arise between the interests of a former sex offender and the interests of the community.

It was submitted for the respondents that a policy adopted by the police to guide its conduct when problems arose on the release of a convicted paedophile into the community should observe three important principles; there was a general principle that information should not be disclosed; there was a strong public interest in ensuring that police were able to disclose information about In March 1977, having been informed of the applicants' history by the local police, the the site owner should be in-

must be considered carefully on its particular facts.

Those principles seemed to be consistent with the statutory policy expressed in section 28(1) of the Data Protection Act 1984 and with the policy recognised by the court in R v Brown (Gregory) [1994] QB 547 and Hellewell v Chief Constable of Derbyshire [1995] 1 WLR 804. Judged against those tests, the policy adopted by the NWP was not open to legal challenge.

Although the policy and conduct of the NWP in the present case fell well within the bounds of legality, the applicants had drawn attention to a pressing social problem. It was not acceptable that those who had undergone the lawful punishment imposed by the courts sould be the subject of intimidation and private vengeance, harried from parish to parish like paupers under the old Poor Law, It was not only in their interest but in the interest of society as a whole that they should be enabled to live normal lives. While the risk of repeat ofending might in some circumstances justify a very limited measure of official disclosure, a general policy of disclosure could never be justified, and the media should be slow to obstruct the rehabilitation of ex-offenders who had not offended again and were seriously bent on reform.

Kate O'Hanlon, Barrister

Versace: very sexy

The essence of many great designers can be captured in one word: 'elegant' for example, or 'radical' or 'startling'. In the case of Gianni Versace the word is 'sexy' — not subtly sexy or surprisingly sexy but blatantly, gloriously, ravishingly sexy. Only an Italian could have done it.

By Tamsin Blanchard

ithout Gianni Versace, fashion as we know it would be very different. His clothes, and who was wearing them, made news. More than his contributions to the wardrobe of Elizabeth Hurley, what the King of Glitz did for fashion is weld together high fashion with the very fabric of popular culture.

He is responsible for the dressing of Hollywood stars at the Academy awards, of rock stars on tour, of cul-tivating the public Hello! lifestyle of the rich and famous and inviting his friends, be they David Bowie and Iman, his star photographer, Richard Avedon, Elton, Sting or Madonna to spend time with him on vacation at his Miami home.

Without Versace, we would not have the cult of the supermodel, the Eighties catwalk stars who became celebrity clothes horses photographed wherever they went in the unmistakeable siren dresses that were the designer's trademark. It is impossible to imagine a fashion world without Versace. Over the past 20 years, he has been a dynamo in contemporary fashion. You either hated his clothes or you loved them. Whether you wore the safety-pinned dress, sat on the Medusa head printed cushions or wore the rip-off Versace sunglasses, or bought the jeans, you know the designer's look with your eyes closed. Ironically, the Eighties, which were Versace's shining years, are now in vogue again. How were we to know that last Sunday's haute conture show for autumn/winter 98 in the Ritz was to be his last? The reactions to the collection were mixed. He had made a statement as only Versace can, that razer-sharp shoulders, thigh-high skirts and hard-edged power-dressing were The Look again. His vision of couture was at times vulgar, and always in your face.

Versace traded on sex, and made no bones about it. The women who wore his dresses looked instantly fabulous, as though they were the life and soul of the party. And usu-ally, wherever there was Versace in person or frock, there was champagne, caviar, gloss and glamour. While designers have long looked to the street for inspiration, Versace delved deeper, into the murky depths of the streetwalker herself. Divine Brown and her hooker friends were closer to Versace than the closeted world of Elizabeth Hurley. His mother made him cover his eyes as a child when he passed by the local brothel, and it only served to whet his appetite. Richard Martin, curator of the Costume Institute at the Metropolitan Museum in New York, who worked with Versace on his book Without Ties, said last night: "Sexiness is key in Versace's work. He took déclassé pornography and turned it into high style. His sexuality was com-pletely unabashed. He's a great figure in fashion."

Versace was born in 51 years ago in Reggio-Calabria. His family has always been as tightly knit as his business, with brother Santo and sister Donatella in close caboots. His first perfume, launched in 1981, was named Donna, after his sister. She now designs the diffusion label, Versus, which shows in New York in the true spirit of Versace, with a whole host of celebrities and music stars in tow.

In 1972, Gianni began designing and Callaghan. He set up his own label in 1978, ready and raring to go for the high-powered glamour years of the Eighties. Along with Mugler and Montana in Paris, Versace rejuvenated the Italian fashion scene of the late Seventies. He will be most remembered for the signature clashing prints and psychedelic patterns that used baroque imagery from South Beach to the Italian Renaissance and were copied from Bangkok to Top Shop. Then there was the recurring theme of bondage that manifested itself in leather bustiers, tiny buckles, and dresses that can only be described as deeply kinky. There was the chain mail, used in metallic pastels that acted like living, moving disco balls, just perfect for the Euro trash and their etset lifestyles. It was not until spring/summer 1990 that Versace showed his first haute couture collection. Whether or not it was couture in the real sense of the word was always up for debate. He caused controversy by using PVC to make shower-curtain ballgowns and by introducing decidedly un-couture fabrics like denim to his Atelier line. But it rejuvenated haute couture as much as Galliano and McQueen have done now. He brought to Paris a younger, hipper client, and the paparazzi were always guaranteed a star entrance to the venue at the Riz Hotel, Prince, Hurley, Elton, Jon Bon Jovi, Sylvester Stallone. In the early Nineties in particular, the front row and the party afterwards would be solid with celebrities.

Photographs: Chris Moore, Richard Avedon (courtesy of Versace),

Rex Features, Mario Testino

Love his style or hate it, Versace's death marks the end of a unique style. At times, Versace has dominated world fashion, from high fashion to high street. As news spread around the fashion world yesterday, the most common life without the Italian maestro. At British Vogue, editors were shocked. Lisa Armstrong, fashion features director, said, "he was one of the top five designers of the world. It's lost of ger ptenting it patient

Markette, and the asale in the Market Property Become with process.

Market Company Established and the con-Bulletin in the state of Mark to Company of the co dapatte mirane Marie with his con-Mad I than the sta distriction, and reserve town of a game of the Postaville, 1: 1: 1: 1: 1: Danger from a Residential programmes and

Stange stand in tit. me less and programme gelanged all helf and adefinate denotics but the second for the minute ille Capital e some cach they figurate feet alter . . . alda make from the Spille Colonie of C. 1 Beautiful The Ment les in three in the Hall Markey trep

Mical benefit and Care. Bentur and self our Ramming ration (1963) Manut 1 of at 11 of to sene palent just i premium les d'in min the locar to fair i Burtalu He de de incepter due p teller which will all. Media german dine $M^{1/2}$ income, MA Routing Civilia County Application benefit constant if their Melling of the other

Palent at a China

Dresser of the stars his front row picture only tells half of the story. Hugh Grant, Elizabeth Hurley, Patsy Kensit and Meg Matthews stare in raptures as the most outrageous of supermodels, Naomi Campbell, struts her stuff at Gianni Versace's readyto-wear show in March. That Versace could Nottingham Castle attract superstars and celebrities was one his Auseum & Art Gallery greatest coups: his clothes intentionally A major exhibition exploring recked of sex, power, money, and glamour the development of an in equal, not ascending, order and have done since the mid-Eighties when dressing for success was as important as breathing. international fasition business and a unique British style. If Elizabeth Hurley had not worn That Dress, would she be the star she is today? Open daily 10am - 5pm Adults £3.50, Concs. £2.50 Everyone knew where the dress had come Gelephone 0115 915 3700 from at first sight, but they still had to ask, "Who's that girl?" This speaks for itself. Versace knew how to make women feel like stars, and men like studs. He described his clothes as Star Clothes. They said "Look at me. Lust after me." Needless to say, everything the Versace family did seemed not only covered in gilt, but it created a golden lifestyle around the brand and the people

Yorkshire Bank

Who else other than Versace could have encouraged Elton John to pose in a lacy negligee dress (hairy legs and all) to be photographed by Richard Avedon. And no other designer could have feasibly encouraged Madonna. Prince and Jon Bon Jovi to model in his hefty seasonal catalogues. Other fans included the Princess of Wales, Joan Collins, Ivana Trump, Sting and Trudi Styler (for whom Versace designed matching wedding clothes), Bruce Springsteen and Elizabeth Taylor. And let's not forget the girls. As well as his mature dientele, the top models were among his biggest fans. Versace turned them into everything from overgrown school pupils to brazen sirens, gladiators and strumpets, and they loved him for it (much better than having to look grumpy and minimalist at the next show). The same can be said for the younger generation of celebs, such as Donovan Leitch, Thri Spelling, and Ivanka Trump, who were Versus, a line conceived by Gianni and run. by his sister Donatella.

Surprisingly, Versace launched his hante conture, an exercise which is both a creation for and haven of celebrities, in 1990, 12 years after launching his ready-towear line. One wonders what took him so long. Sadly for Elton John, a great friend and loyal fan, he missed Versace's last conture, but Demi Moore, Leonardo DiCaprio, Rupert Everett and Gabriel Byrne had the pleasure.

Melanie Rickey

Britain's chance to be at the heart of a new Europe

the expansion of the European unature of the EU and the constellation of interests within it. good for the applicant countries. If the Treaty of Rome was, symbolically, the real end of the Second World War then the opening of negotiations between the EU and Poland, the Czech Republic and other eastern countries will represent the culmination of the Versailles Conference at the end of the First World War, offering them the chance to join the western world and grow in peace and prosperity as full nations. One of the beauties and paradoxes of European union is that it is a means of realising nationhood: for Poland and others, joining Europe could be a way of peacefully realising national aspirations suppressed for so long by Soviet occupation.

The Agenda 2000 document expected from the European Commission today is barely even the first shot in what necessarily will be a lengthy campaign. The first tranche of applicants has to be approved at the summit in Luxemburg at the end of the year. After that, how long will it take to settle terms and revamp the governance of the EU? Yet already the process of admitting new members has forced the anti-expansionists to show their hand. For this is not just an exercise in assessing the openness of Polish markets or the liberalisation of Hungarian financial institutions, important though those are; it inevitably addresses the very in and the CAP be removed.

That is why the bid by the Poles, Slovenes, Czechs, Hungarians, Estonians and (Greek) Cypriots is, in princi-ple, so welcome. It forces us to exam-ine the architecture of this organisation - the capacity of the Commission, the nature of voting in a ministerial coun-cil expanding from a membership of 15 to 21, the problem of language and, especially, the question of European democracy.

The Common Agricultural Policy was created in the 1950s, a set of tradeoffs between manufacturing and agricultural interests in France and Germany. That it has survived the expansion of the community created by the Treaty of Rome in 1956 is a tribute to inertia, also to the weakness of the British bargaining position in the 1970s. That it has preserved a French landscape that delights foreign tourists and has improved the general temperament of our island neighbours by making many Irish farmers rich are incidental benefits - which do not at all excuse its system of subsidies. That the Americans, for all their claims to be holier than thou in market matters, also subsidise their farmers is neither here nor there. The CAP is an affront. There is no possibility that its benefits could be extended to Polish agriculture (to do so would wreck EU budgets for decades). Let the Poles

ONE CANADA SQUARE CANARY WHARF LONDON £14 5DL TELEPHONE 0171-298 2000 / 0171-345 2000 FAX 0171-298 3405 / 0171-345 2435

Chancellor Kohl, speaking for the forward Europeans, has argued that it is possible to have both integration and expansion - he sent a message the other day to the French Prime Minister Lionel Jospin encouraging him to "deepen European integration". But this won't wash. A union of 21 might work as a loose and rather baggy free trading area within which certain directives sought to establish reasonable equivalences in terms of work practices and the environment (and how long would it take to get to today's position with the 15, in a union of 21?) But a union of 21 integrated in the way

Chancellor Kohl envisages is not within the realm of practical politics for at least the first three decades of the new century. For British consumers to have access to Estonian timber without tariffs and for British banks to set up shop in Tallinn sounds like a way of enhancing well-being on both sides. But for British and Estonian MEPs to go to Strasbourg and pretend they are part of a single political community, its legitimacy willed by voters in the respective countries - that day is necessarily a long

The enthusiasm of the applicant countries is a recognition that they have no destiny other than to embed their democracies within an essentially "western" framework. But goodwill is no substitute for institutional re-engineering. One of the risks of this process of application and negotiation is that expectations are raised high. It may be a long time before, say, the Czechs are able to accept the directives affecting the environment. The height of the barriers to entry is a practical matter, but it is also bound up with the question of whether the EU is a fixed, juridical thing, or an entity in a constant state of negotiation and renegotiation. The creation of a common currency suggests the former. Can, then, the EU move forward as a plural association, with one group closely bound together, sharing the same money, while another group (including Britain?) jogs along

In an ideal world all these questions would receive cut and dried answers before the next stage was broached -the Commission would set out a blueprint for institutional reform before negotiations with the aspirants began. But one of the virtues of the European Community/Union has been its empirical nature, the way it has grown like Topsy. Confronting the former Soviet satellites and Cyprus will be another occasion for the EU to refine and redefine itself in situ. But that will not happen without positive statesmanship from existing members. In present political circumstances that does not look likely to come from the French and the Germans, wedded as they are to the project of monetary union and what increasingly looks like an anachronistic vision of Europe's coming together. Not for the first time, an opportunity presents itself for the British to be at Europe's heart.

The cap that fits Labour

The new intake of Labour MPs, the most chaperoned, monitored, instructed and badgered bunch of House of Commons recruits ever, have now been given advice by party apparatchiks on conducting garden parties, as a way of ingratiating themselves with supporters in their constituencies. Most of it is common sense, though Millbank neglects the crucial topic of what you do with a garden full of guests if it starts to pour - which, given what happened vesterday, St Swithin's day, it may well do. And what should women guests wear on their heads? Attending a do on the invitation of HM the Queen, there is no doubt that something big, vellow and trimmed is in order. Perhaps these days a "Labour" logo baseball cap would be appropriate, rather than a bright red beret and bandanna.

• LETTERS TO THE EDITOR •

Cost of gene patenting will hit patients

Sir: Alastair Kent (letter, 15 July) states that the EU directive on gene patenting "is a significant clarification over the present position". The tabled directive, although stating in paragraph one that the simple discovery of a gene is not patentable, also states that technical processes that isolate the gene may constitute a patentable invention. This amounts to the fact that genes are patentable.

Actual genes or gene sequences in isolation will probably never be used in therapy. However, work with identified genes will lead to the design and production of new small molecules which will be useful therapies. These in themselves would be patentable. If a gene is to be delivered to the body, a delivery system or vector needs to be developed. As these also would be patentable inventions, why patent the gene

If a biotech company creates a new molecule it does not gain any reward from it until it can demonstrate a use for it. There is, therefore, real incentive to develop a treatment, as the molecule itself has no value without it. A gene, however, can be tested for, and as such the discovery of a gene immediately gives it a value. If a company can earn money from a discovery, is there a real incentive to develop a therapy?

As things stand in the directive, licence fees and royalties will have to be paid on all patented genes. In the future genetic tests for heart disease and breast cancer may involve the testing of 15 or more genes each. This will mean 15 separate royalties to be paid, and thus make genetic testing much more expensive and inaccessible. The economic and patient benefits of targeting preventive and screening strategies on those really at high risk will be less attainable. The NHS will also have to pay out for the administrative cosis of negotiating a separate deal with every gene patent holder, as well as the legal costs of any patent challenge. Biomedical companies do need to be encouraged to invest in genetic research, but let us get the directive right. We don't need a broadly interpretable patent directive which will allow effective monopoly of research on particular genes and cost the NHS unnecessary money. Why not get the wording right to mean that companies can benefit from gene discoveries only if they make a tuly inventive step such as the uevelopment of a therapy (which will incur real development costs). Let us hope that MEPs vote for amendments which really tighten up the interpretation of this directive.

Dr GARETH EVANS Consultant in Medical Genetics Central Manchester Healthcare

Sir: Adam Hedgecoe's assertion (letter, 15 July) that gene patents cover "just chemicals" is like saying that Shakespeare is "just letters". Rather it is the information (the "sequence") carried within these genes that is actually being patented. We all carry this information, and it is part of what we are as living organisms. PHILLIP LORD

National debate

on defence policy

Sir: In a commendable effort to create a national consensus on defence and security policies, the Government has launched what Polly Toynbee accurately describes as a remarkable exercise in open government". But it is difficult not to despair when a journalist as gifted as Ms Toynbee contributes to this exercise an article as prejudiced as "A Boy Scout motto:

prepared for what?" (14 July). Ms Toynbee's views on the priorities to be accorded to defence on the one hand, and social security, the NHS and education on the other, are well known. Those views may perhaps be correct – although I do not think so. But the point of the Government's national debate is to try to establish the balance of opinion on these priorities. It is disingenuous to pretend that expenditure on the realities as presented "in a magistrates' court" or during an Ofsted inspection self-evidently ought to enjoy greater public support than expenditure on the armed forces or other capabilities which may enable the UK to continue to play an effective international role.

What is worse about Ms Toynbee's article is the impression conveyed that the whole defence policy exercise is a Yes, Minister farce. It would be difficult to guess from Ms Toynbee that the debate at last Friday's seminar lasted sixand-a-half hours; that the great majority of participants were drawn from university faculties and institutions such as the Oxford Research Group and the Disarmament Intelligence Review; or that of some 40 substantive interventions, fewer than 10 were from official spokesmen. Sir MICHAEL ALEXANDER Chairman, Strategic Defence Review

Seminar Centre for Defence Studies King's College University of London

Sir: Polly Toynbee states that there has not been any doglighting in aerial combat since the Battle of Britain. The Fleet Air Arm Sea Harriers "mixed it' with Argentine aircraft during the Falklands conflict. Sidewinders were used, but often British pilots had to get in close for a kill using cannons. In the Gulf, the RAF Tornado F3s were withdrawn from direct air support over the battlefield because they where not agile enough to take on Iraqi MiG-29s.

The current generation of Russian-built aircraft (which are being exported to anyone who can pay) are extremely capable dogfight aircraft. The RAF needs Eurofighter, because it is affordable (especially when compared to the US F-22) and capable of meeting this threat, wherever it may be met. If Eurofighter were to be scrapped, what would we replace it with, and where would the money come nom? The media attacks on Eurolighter remind me of the illinformed campaign that killed the last truly great British aircraft project, the TSR-2. TEX BENNETT Earls Coine, Essex

A millennium stuck in the past

Sir: The fault with the millennium exhibition is that the whole idea of the grand exhibition of technology is an anachronism. When the Great Exhibition was held the Industrial Revolution was still young. Most people had not previously ventured as far as the metropolis, and the sights to be seen in the Crystal Palace were truly wondrous.

Many comparable exhibitions have been held since, all over the world, but they are all essentially the same thing, a demonstration of the latest achievements of human technological mastery over nature. There is no longer anything wondrous about this. Most people have themselves travelled at speeds approaching that of sound, and rison by machine above 30,000 feet in the air. We can all see moving colour images from all over the world at the touch of a button in our own homes. After millennia of struggling against nature in a battle for survival it was only natural that the latest power of human achievement should be a cause of wonder and excitement. But that struggle is over. The struggle now is against our own profligacy; the powers of nature are tamed. The grand exposition is faintly ridiculous, rather like the local Bijou cinema in the age of television.

A far more appropriate way of celebrating the millennium, if we must celebrate an arbitrary date, would be in taking a grand step

Post letters to Letters to the Editor, and include a daytime telephone number. Fax: 0171-293 2056;

e-mail: letters@independent.co.uk. E-mail correspondents are asked to give a postal address. Letters may be edited for length and clarity. We regret we are unable to acknowledge unpublished letters.

towards conserving what is left of the natural world - creating a true, properly funded, national park perhaps. KHAGGETT Sheffield

Legal trap for the speedy

Sir: Miles Kington ("Trying to pull a fast one are we, sir?", 10 July) asks on what charge the police could get him if he stood by the road with a large sign warning speeding motorists of a police speed trap ahead. The answer is, obstructing a constable in the execution of his duty, contrary to section 89(2) of the Police Act 1996, an offence punishable with one month's imprisonment and/or a fine of up to £1,000. The High Court so held in 1909 when upholding the conviction of an AA patrolman who warned motorists exceeding the then speed limit of 20 mph: Betts v tevens [1910] 1 KB 1. If Mr Kington were to protest that his warning was given only with the laudable objective of preventing the commission of a crime - the argument which prevailed'in the earlier case of Bastable v Little [1907] 1 KB 59 ne should be told that the Divisional Court in Green v Moore 1982] 2 WLR 671 were not impressed with this distinction. Donaldson LJ commenting: "We cannot see any distinction between a warning given in order that the commission of a crime may be suspended whilst there is a danger of detection, which is an offence, and one which is given in order that the commission of a crime may be postponed until passed."

Secret swoop on accused Serbs

DAVID LAMMING

Groton, Suffolk

after the danger of detection has

Sir. Bill Woodger (letters, 14 July)

obviously does not understand the complexities of arresting alleged war criminals if he is questioning the need for secrecy of indictments issued against Bosnian Serbs. The arrest of Kovacevic might well not have been possible had it not been for the sealed indictment.

Sadly, the chances of the "big fish" being arrested are very slim, despite Nato getting its act together. The chances of arresting Karadzic and Mladic are not helped by the publicised warrants for their arrest, as is the case with another 70 or so. By issuing secret indictments there is less chance of the suspects surrounding themselves with hundreds of bodyguards, thus preventing any kind of arrest - as Karadzic has

As regards SAS tactics, it would not have mattered who went to arrest Drijaca: it could have been the Metropolitan Police firearms unit: the result would have been the same. Or does Mr Woodger think it acceptable for a person nearly to kill another for simply issuing a verbal challenge? JAMES VELUŠIE

Afraid to talk about cannabis

Sir: A university student who, with his family, is a member of our congregation, has been sent to prison for six months for dealing in marijuana. The boy bought a few grams for himself and some friends. Apart from the savagery of the sentence for such a trivial offence -an offence which is shared by half the students in our universities - it highlights once again the desperate need for the Government to discuss our society's policy towards soft drugs. Smoking or otherwise consuming marijuana is a regular part of the life of a huge number of British people from all generations. A law which is so widely disregarded has to be questioned. With the honourable exception of the admirable Clarc Short, why are our politicians so afraid to talk

What purpose can possibly be served by sending our young friend to a violent – he has already been attacked once - and overcrowded available?

The Rev NEIL DAWSON St Paul's Knightsbridge London SWI

Deaf drivers face ageist slur

Sir: What justification has Madeleine Neave (letter, 12 July) for her suggestion that hard of hearing people should be debarred from driving cars? I have known several profoundly deaf people who were safe and excellent

Most drivers with poor hearing are the more observant and quick to act on the evidence of their eyes and consequently among the safest on the roads. This is confirmed by my own insurers.

Let not this ageism deny us the right to drive while our eyes can be relied upon. Test eyes when need arises, but careless youth, not experienced age, is the major cause of road accidents - and hearing has nothing to do with it.

JACK PENYCATE Guildford

Clean rockets

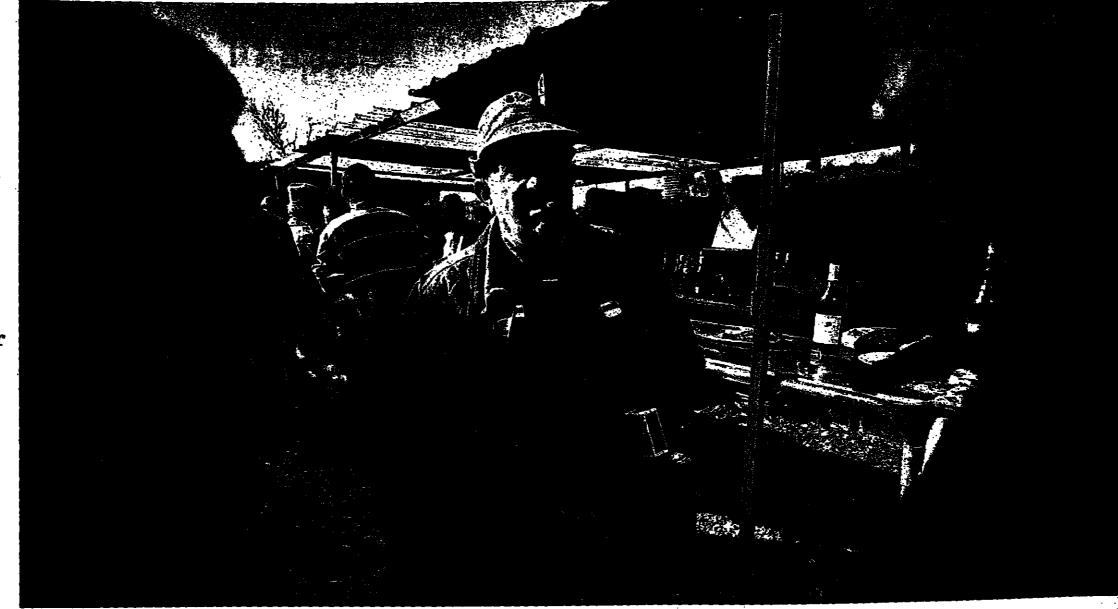

Sir: No, it is Mr Clarke (Letters, 14 July) who is not elever enough. when he suggests that the manufacture of hydrogen rocket fuel entails greenhouse gas production.

Hydrogen can be produced by electrolysis, using electricity that can be generated by solar, wind and various other means (including nuclear) that do not generate carbon dioxide.
JIM MANGLES Norfolk

Payment deferred Sir: Your correspondents Mervyn Benford (letter, 9 July) and MA

Qavi (14 July) are fortunate I recently paid into a building society (not yet a bank) a substantial cheque from an insurance company of good standing. With a short and. I hope, somewhat embarrassed pause, the employee dealing with it told me there would be a 10-day clearance RAFAELA MOTTRAM farmers have grown rich on subsidies under the Common Agricultural Policy. On the eve of its reform, Nicholas Schoon says it's about time we got our £30bn worth

For years

Fattened up, now for the kill oday, with Britain's cereal harvest about to begin, the European Commission will spell out its latest proposed reform for Europe's greatest, longest-running scandal - the Common Agricultural Policy. What Brussels advocates is a lurch towards a freer market, with cuts in guaranteed minimum prices for cereals, beef and dairy products. Farmers will be compensated with direct annual payments running into thousands - and for some hundreds of thousands of pounds. These will continue indefinitely.

Food should become cheaper for consumers, but the overall £30bn-a-year cost of the CAP for Europe's taxpayers is expected to rise by a few billion pounds a year.

The Commission wants us to pay farmers a straight subsidy, simply because they are A Good tinue to be, by international standards, massively overmanned, though employment in it will keep on falling fast. That overmanning is also seen as desirable, because we want a thriving, populated countryside which continues to look as we expect it to. Sort of traditional. It must seem grotesquely unfair to the tens of thousands of European coal and steel workers who have lost their jobs because of the massive withdrawal of state subsidies in these industries. But you have to admire the sheer lobbying muscle of those farmers. The CAP costs the average Briton £3 in higher food prices and £1 in taxes each week.

Total cost to UK taxpayers - about £3bn. If we are to have these direct payments to farmers replacing artificially high prices for their

£45.410.00

£68.12_{p.m}

£112.50 pm

£165.62pm

£220,83pm

will get you

£10,000

£5,000

£7,500

12 get you £3,000

₩ 941 you £2,000

produce they ought to have strings attached. But before going into that we should welcome the good in this reform. It is absolutely right that Europe should reduce guaranteed, "interven-tion" prices further and move closer to world market prices. Guaranteed high prices encouraged farmers to grow vastly more than consumers inside and outside Europe demanded. Mountains of cereals, skimmed milk powder and beef, and lakes of wine had to be stored and eventually dumped on world markets at sub-sidised, cheap prices. So European consumers had to pay unfairly high food prices within the Union, while outside, farmers in Third World countries struggled to compete with the cheap imports which harmed the chances of poor countries becoming self-sufficient in food.

Guaranteed high prices were an insane way of subsidising European agriculture, and the recent freeing up and tariff-busting in interna-tional trade - the Uruguay Round of the GATT - forced the European Union to start abandoning them. A 1992 reform of the CAP began the process. The single most important element was a 35 per cent cut in guaranteed minimum cereal prices, phased in gradually. To compensate, Europe's grain farmers were given a direct payment for each hectare of cereal they planted. The only string attached was that the continent's larger farms (which meant virtually all of Britain's) would have to stop growing cereal on part of their land (up to 15 per cent). They got an even larger payment for each hectare of this set-uside land. The idea was to grow less and cut surpluses by taking land out of production.

But then something strange happened. The internationally traded, world price of cereals began to rise much more rapidly than had been envisaged, thanks to a combination of bad harvests, soaring demand from fast-growing nations such as China and measures to cut overproduction introduced by big exporters such as Europe. Instead of dumping exports at sub-sidised prices, the European Union actually imposed an export tax to try to keep its grain within its borders.

Parmers no longer needed to worry about the decline in the guaranteed minimum price - what they were getting was way above it. They no longer needed the direct payments in compensation, but they still got them. The mid-1990s were marvellous times for the "barley barons" of East Anglia. Fortunately this absurd situation could not last; more cereal was grown worldwide, international markets readjusted and the world price came down. Now the European Commission is forecasting that farms will again produce mountains of beef, cereal and dairy products. Why? Because if farmers get a good, reliable price for their crops, they will inevitably grow more and more. Individuals improve their skills and find more land, while farming technology always improves and crop yields rise.

o another reform is needed to tackle these. surpluses, but there are two other power-Iful incentives for Europe to go back on CAP once more. The amount of surplus food the Union can dump on world markets at cheap prices has been strictly limited under GATT any breach would trigger a trade war. The next round of world trade negotiations is expected to curb this dumping still further. The accession of Eastern European states into the EU will also make the costs of the CAP to consumers and taxpayers very much higher.

Faced with these factors, there are really only two options for reform. Make Europe's agriculture run on world market prices or set quotas which ensure the continents' farmers do not keep growing more food. Quotas are by far the worse option, because they are more bureau-cratic and keep prices artificially high.

The proposals to be unveiled by the Commission today include both. The aim is to cut guaranteed cereal prices down to world market programmes, and people have been speculating about chop. I refuse to take part in which ones are due for the such idle gossip. I prefer to would deal with the matter.

Bragg: So what you're saying is that we are genetically speculate about how the programmes themselves

These, for instance ..

From "Start the Week".

predisposed to do less

10 in the morning?

up the wrong tree?

Geneticist: Yes.

thinking between nine and

Brase: And any programme that sets out to have a good intellectual discussion about the origin of consciousness between 9 and 10 is barking

a Monday morning. It's the worst possible time for it.

Brage: That's tosh. Monday morning between nine and and thrust of debate. This programme does it all the better it would do it if we were all awake and not

Bragg: That's tosh.

rush hour.

10 is a great time for the cut

Geneticist: Think how much

frazzled by Monday morning

Geneticist: Yes. Especially on more gradually - and compensating farmers with direct payments. A 10 per cent cut in the sup-port prices for butter and skimmed milk powder is proposed, leaving them above world prices. Furthermore, the system of milk quotas for individual farmers is to continue beyond 2000, when had been due to be reviewed.

Something roughly along these lines will eventually be agreed after about two years of intense argument between the EU member states. In the process, the governments and ministers of most nations – Britan and one or two others possibly excepted – will not question the need for continuing, massive subsidies for facurers. They will use the same instriction for CAP as they have for decades, that it preserves small farms, and therefore rural commisses, and conserves traditional farmland landscapes.

But it doesn't. Farming will employ fewer and fewer people as it becomes more efficient. Our EU partners are far more worried about rural depopulation than we in Britain. Their employment in agriculture has been dropping at a faster rate than ours and is forecast to continue. Our farms are, on average, five times as large as the rest of Europe's and a much smaller proportion of our workforce is on the land.

Intensification, too, is bound to continue. In the process the landscapes and wildlife we love are destroyed. Hedges are grubbed out to make bigger, more efficient fields, meadows and pastures rich in wildflowers and insects are ploughed up, while the wetlands which support so much of our flora and fauna are drained. You can slow the rate at which farming modernises with generous, unconditional subsidies. But you cannot stop it, and you are just as likely to speed it up. That is what happened in Britain and elsewhere, such as the cereal plains of the Paris basin which are just as productive as anything in prairie like East Auglia.

The right way forward for the CAP has to be a combination of world market prices and conditionality. If we subsidise farmers they must give us something agreed upon in return, and if they fail their grants must be whipped away from them. What do we want from our European farms? A diversity of native wildlife, attractive landscapes, safe food, minimum use of pesticides and fertiliser, humane treatment of farm ani-

must be conditional on farmers giving us these Farmers at things. If they want to opt out, and make a liv- a cattle ing solely by selling their products at an unsubsidised price then let them. But hopefully, the majority would want to opt in.

There are all sorts of pitfalls. Take animal welfare, for example. The two factory-farmed creatures we are most worried about are hattery and broiler chickens and pigs. Both are outside the CAP's subsidy regime. If you had a mixed farm with cereal and beef as well as pigs and chickens, you could end the farmer's direct payments for beef and cereal if he refused to treat his pigs more humanely. But the farmer would be just as likely to respond by stopping beef and cereal farming and stepping up pig farming.

that nations, regions and local governments should be given as much say as possible in deciding what they want from farming in their own area. If continental Europe wants to focus much of the subsidy on maintaining raral economies and populations, fine, but this is not a priority in Britain. Here people are, by and large, moving out from the city into the countryside and the rural economy is doing better than the urban one. Our priorities, at least in lowland England, are to have more woodlands, ponds and wetlands, conserve what little remains of semi-natural habitats and expand organic or low-intensity agriculture. The other principle is that subsidies should be in return for stopping the negative trends getting worse, and starting to make things better. If rural decline - of whatever kind - continues then the conditionality approach will have failed, just as the old ways failed before it. There also has to be scope for flexibility and imagination. We don't want a chocolate-box countryside. It may sound like a waste of money to give £3bn a year in subsidies for conserving British wildlife and landscapes. Think about what that could buy in terms of improved schools and public transport. But what is the alternative? Political realities dictate that European agriculture will continue to be massively subsidised. Britain. a net contributor to the CAP, must ensure that it gets its fair share of those subsidies (which will be around £3bn). Better to ensure they are used to give us the countryside we want rather than auction Calvinet in Auvergne the French want subsidies to help to.

ing Million

2 3 C 35 3

Baseling of Prints

Since July

San san til er been been

Stil Berofessin er

Mestern Bur

والمراجعة والمسترقعة

Diameter (Co.)

The College Control

preserve the rural way of life, but the opposite i Photograph,

£4,000 mals, long-term conservation of key resources and a living for rural people. Continued subsidy simply give them to our farmers unconditionally. levels at a stroke, while reducing beef prices Changing Radio 4? Over to you, John ments guaranteed not to rise for the entire term of your loan's Borrow any emount from $2,000 up to £15,000 - for nimost ames Boyle, boss of birthdays in the last year or Miller: Did I hear someone Radio 4, is rumoured to be axing some of the channel's best-loved mention the word From "Medium Wave".

"microneurosurgery"?
From the "Today" programme

John Humphrys: A decision is likely to be reached soon about whether Today should proud of.

rubbish!

Producer: Today gets more than 2 million listeners. In barely 200,000. We must be the evening the Radio 4 audience has shrunk to doing something right.

and the benefits of dealing direct - speed, comenience nd lower interest rates. One free phone call gets it all Remember, this is an exclusive offer not available through any Royal Bank of Scuttand branch A ST, MA Com

49 Monarty Payments
100 66
C200.69
£187.42
£194.27 M The Royal Bank

month will get you

UNSECURED PERSONAL LOANS

APR 13.7% R 22 AND HAVE AN INCOME OF $10,000 OR MORE CALL FREE ON

ENTES OFFICE DEMPORAL MEETED AND SAME TO SAME
PLEASE QUOTE CODE D48 WHEN CALLING
Or complete the enformation below and sand to. The Royal Bank of Sculland pic. FRESPOST, 101 Princess Street, Manchester M1 80P (no stamp required). Code D48 Sumanne (Michilary Nelssa Nick) Ficse Mannes for Null)
Address
Postcude
Tel. ClayTel. Eventog

be extended or curtailed. Some say it is the foremost channel of morning news. Others say it is a crude pantomime of confrontation and disagreement which enlightens nobody. In the studio we have the producer of Today and in the radio car we have Ridley Pallister, radio critic. Now, John, you've been producing Today for how long? Producer: Five years. And it is a five years I am very Humphrys: Pallister? Pallister. The last five years have seen the decline of Today from a thoughtful good slot news programme into a worthless shouting match. Producer: That's absolute Pallister: No, it's not. And discussion, but alas... everyone knows it but you From "Midweek", and James Boylel

Miles Kington

Pallister: You've got the right slot, that's all. Most people automatically switch on radios for the news early in the morning as they get up and move around the house. Whatever programme was on then would get a good audience. It doesn't mean it's a good programme. Just a Producer: That's rubbish! Humphrys: I wish we had more time for this fascinating Libby Purves: And today's special birthday guest is a man who has listened to every edition of Midweek since it started! But first let's go round our guests and see how many of them have had been the story in several of the broadsheets that Medium Wave may be waving goodbye. This poses the question: should the radio be reviewing the press and media at all? If not, where will I be getting the chance to chair another programme? Simon? Hoggart: Can't help you there, Vincent. Hanna: Cecil Parkinson? Parkinson: Hello, everyone! Nice to be back! Hanna: And so goes this medium week. See you soon, or not, as the case may be. From "Loose Ends". Sherrin: And the mystery poise was, of course, the sound of the axe falling on The Afternoon Shift. (Hysterical laughter from guests.) Right then, let me see, ah yes, Jenny Constable, you're appearing in a revival of The First Noel, the Sheridan Morley musical about Noel Coward... Constable: That's right, the Domino Theatre, from Friday. Sherrin: Very good, got the plug in, now do tell us, have you got any funny stories

Hanna: It's been a medium sort of week for Medium

Wave. Lots of big stories, but the biggest of all for us has about this programme which would help to keep it on the airwaves? Constable: No, but I was once in a lift with Laurence Olivier, and I said to him: "Are you going up of down?" and he said, "Actually, at my age there isn't really a lot of difference!" (More hysterical laughter.) , From The Moral Maze Buerk: Michael Mansfield, were you impressed by any of the witnesses who wanted The Moral Maze exed? Mansfield: I rather agreed with the man who said that this wasn't a discussion. programme at all, but a soup opera with rather crudely drawn stereotypes as characters. David Starkey: Oh, that's just so stupid and anti-intellectual Give me an example! Mansfield: Certainly, There used to be a character called Edward Pearce who was with written out after classes with

Starkey: That's preposterous! We aren't stereotypes! Buerle Oh, shut up, you from a jumped-up near Etc., etc. Full transcrip programmes ou reque decay helped to produce an ever more hysterical language of jour-nalistic and political criticism of ministers, which ended up alien-ating people from politics entirely. We need a more mod-erate and calibrated style of crit-icism for the new administration:

not every delay is betrayal, nor every amendment a sell-out.

All that said, these are still uneasy times for reformers. At times this seems a government intoxicated by the strength of its own pragmatism. People are the answer to problems, not structures: bring in a Branson, pick up a Puttnam, take away a Taylor. There is a lot of truth in that -

Blair is surrounding himself with experience and talent that, frankly, Labour has lacked and needs in power.

But the demolition of ideology and the reliance on "good chaps" isn't value free. It is centralist and, in the longer term, conservative too. The chaps, however good, are picked from a small group of successful metropolitan net-workers. That keeps the circle of advice small and relatively homogeneous. As time goes on, and the pressures of government increase, the convenience of tired

ministers ensures that debates

Now Blair must go out and sell his vision of reform hat has happened to "the constitutional question"? Has it been lost? Has the Lord Chancellor made off with it to his Argylishire fastness, hoping to frame it while no one was looking? After all, we made told the constitution was were told the constitution was going to be a great political cause for the new government; and so far, nary a cheep.

In fact, the bird is just about to crow. Political reform in general, and devolution in particular, has been the subject of a ferociously hard and at times tough battle inside government. Finally, a week tomorrow, the White Paper on South and Welsh devolution will be published - the fruit of many intense hours of cabinet committee struggle, which ended yesterday morning. That will begin a huge political debate which will engulf those countries and much of England too. Already there have been lurid stories of ferocious rows over whether the Scots should control their own abortion laws or not, and which building is right for the new parliament, and whether the Scots and Welsh should have their funding cut as a punishment for greater freedom.

Donald Dewar, the Scottish Secretary, has tussled mightily with the Lord Chancellor, now married to his former wife, and Jack Straw, the enthusiastically English Home Secretary, among others. Dewar has had a particularly tough job. He is partly there to hold a straining Union together. He is assailed by the Scots in general and The Scots man in particular for every species of betrayal, while his English MPs sometimes seem to regard him as a nationalist interloper. Yet, as the smoke from cabinet-ministerial battle clears, Dewar, a very shrewd operator indeed, will emerge pretty well. The big questions about cutting the number of Scottish MPs and cutting public spending in Scotland and Wales have been put off. There is strong English talk about returning to those issues - the new Boundary Commission will look again at Scottish over-representation at Westminster, for instance. But that is fair enough. What matters is that Dewar has delivered on the central promise of producing a package of important devolved powers, with Scotland i control over the olg domestic st cation, health, housing, law reform. If the Scot-tish parliament is established, doing its job well and becoming popular, it will accrue more powers in time. If not, not.

The question of who is sovereign - the people or the Westminster parliament - has been sensibly side-stepped. The view in government is that the people of Scotland are sovereign in the sense of being able to choose their own destiny; but while they remain in the British Union, Westminster remains the supreme constitutional power. Overall, a process of deciding who should do what, which dragged on end-lessly through the last Labour administration, has been efficiently telescoped into a few intense, difficult but successful weeks. That, at least, is the view of civil servants involved. Now the job of selling begins - not only to the people of Scotland and Wales, but to Middle England too. That cannot be untied from the wider constitutional agenda, the promise of a new settlement between voters and government that was made before the election. We have heard very little about that. A rather fishy silence, it seemed to me. I remain suspicious about whether a proper Freedom of Information Bill will arrive in the next parliamentary

Andrew Marr

We have heard little about the promise of a new settlement between voters and government.

A rather fishy silence, it seems to me which ought to happen out in the open take place privately between a few chums. By contrast, the case for constitutional reform is unavoidably ideological. We cannot pretend it is a thoroughly pragmatic, common-sense thing. It is in fact the unfinished work of the Enlightenment, a political response to an unre-formed and centralised state. It takes for granted that the more involved people are in big decisions, at least in giving their assent, the bet-ter. The caricature reformer is instinctively wary of power, just as the caricature New Labourite is hopelessly, dizzyingly in love with it.

And yet I think Blair himself, for all his centralist grabbing, is at least partly a genuine reformer. He is a man with his eye on history, who wants to change the country. He is already iii(ea io pi which compares to the programmes of Gladstone or Lloyd George: his success or failure in that will partly determine his reputation. On the edge of the third millennium, Tony Blair is fated to be either a great reforming prime minister, or a failed one; just as I think he is fated to be Britain's first (at least mildly) environmentalist prime minister.

What we need is a great political offensive by the Prime Minister, to explain and sell his vision for a reformed, sleaze-free and more democratic nation. He needs to set out the more general case for reform - a new deal between the voters and government. He needs, in short, to define the terms by which he expects history to judge him.

And, I think, he needs to start doing it quite soon, certainly by the end of this year. Any later and the tone of his government will be set – a tone that seems, just at the moment, a little too clubby and centralised for its own longer-term good. From Scotland to Southend, and from the House of Lords to the parish council, this is a nation that needs a vigorous blast of political reform, not just a new party acting in the old way. Tony Blair has it in him to be a great leader. On the constitution, it is time for him to lead.

New York? London? We're all on the move move abroad, but she has the choice. So, too, will more and more of so, too, win more and more or us. If she does go, she will be joining a new, still-exclusive but rapidly growing community: the global citizens.

These are the people who think of themselves as international, rather than national; who can choose to live any-where in the world; whose main base is simply a matter of convenience (and sometimes tax) and can be changed at will; and to whom countries, even medium-sized ones such as the UK, seem provincial and small.

Of course, Princess Di is also a star: she is a top-of-therange global celeb. Royalty have in any case always been international, witness the family links between the European royal families of the last century. Countries would "out-source" their royal families from the global pool of suitable persons. But until now the possibility of being a global citizen has been limited to a tiny minority who have made, inherited or married fortunes, or have had one of those rare trades - such as writing - that can be carried out anywhere. Now that has changed. As the cost of telecommunications has plunged and the capability has soared, anyone who works on screen can - in theory, at least - live anywhere. For the first time in history, people do not need to live in the country in which they work.

The result is that instead of there being only a tiny minority of rich people who have real freedom of location, and who can therefore think of themselves as being beyond the clutches of a nation state - perhaps a few hundred thousand. world-wide - there will be millions. It was once just the nobility; now it is the mobility.

As people become more mobile, just as companies have done, some tough questions arise. One obvious one is: how will countries continue to raise as firms, can move away? We are used to the idea of governments bribing foreign countries to set up local plants; and international competition is holding down company tax rates, as Gordon Brown acknowledged in his Budget. But we are seeing only the very early stages of this process as far as individuals are concerned. Expect to see more and more governments pitching their personal taxation at levels that are attractive to the new

Behind that, though, is a deeper set of questions. What is the glue? What will hold people to countries, hold societies together? If an increasing proportion of people are able to base themselves anywhere, what will stop choice of location becoming a mere con-venience? Will loyalties become increasingly horizontal -

Hostone 90 Post Office 20 HOXTON S

g Old Street gunderpround

Princess Diana on a visit to New York City. Could we afford to lose her?

Princess Diana could live anywhere but in practice she needs to be near the people who 'market' her services to other people in similar occu-pations elsewhere in the globe, rather like the loyalties of the European royal families in the second half of the last century? Or will they remain to a large extent vertical - to their neighbours and compatriots?

There are, I think, at least two sorts of glue, both of which governments would be wise to try to strengthen. One is proessional; the other is social.

People have to work somewhere, and while the telecommunications revolution will liberate many workers from the daily trek to the office, there will still be reasons why people will be limited to specific locations. One is the phenomenon of skill clusters. In theory, software writers could be anywhere; in practice they cluster

In the Ditch

Shoreditch underground

& SPITALFIELDS

in places such as Silicon Valley, for there seems to be an added dimension in the performance they achieve if they live in reasonably close proximity to each other. Anything that can be done to strengthen skill clusters (such as Bill Gates's support for boosting software skills in Cambridge) will help bolt a control of her own distribution: potentially mobile business to a brilliant product, but one a particular country. Good physical communic ations are also important. Paradoxically, the more people work on screen, the more they also need to be near an airport. For while their main work can be carried out anywhere, they will from time to time need to meet other people in their business - and, of course, the people who market their

You can even see this professional glue in the case of Princess Diana. She could live anywhere, but in practice she needs to be reasonably near the people who "market" her services: the media. (Seen in commercial terms, her problem is that she does not have a brilliant product, but one that is haphazardly and even destructively marketed.) The media will go down to St Tropez for a good story, but if she is to continue her serious work, she probably has either to remain in the UK, or, perhaps, move to the US. She would not be able to attract appropriate publicity were she to move to, say, Switzerland or

The other sort of glue is social: people will chose a par-ticular location because it offers the right mix of social characteristics. Why do many rich people live in the middle of giant cities, where they pay more for space, and suffer con-gestion and noise, when they could objectively have a better quality of life in a mediumsized country town? Answer: because mega-cities offer social and cultural attractions which even decent-sized provincial towns cannot match. But if the disadvantages of cities become too great, and the medium-sized towns are clever in creating social and cultural events, then they can attract mobile people. If you want to revive a run-down city. make sure you build an art gallery, as well as new office his matters for countries. too. Social and cultural events not only make them more attractive for the mobile. They also act as a glue binding different groups of people who are not potential migrants. While it is inevitable that many people will identify more with their peers in sim-ilar professions in other countries, that does not mean they will necessarily want to cut themselves off from different people within their own. Not many people would want to live in a gated community - or. rather, live in a society that makes gated communities

Britain has been extraordinarily successful in attracting people who see themselves as global citizens. That has something to do with taxation. residents, but it surely has more to do with professional clusters (as in financial services), and social and cultural attractions. This enriches the place, not just financially, but culturally, too. We should therefore worry if our own home-grown members of the new mobility feel uncomfortable here. If Princess Di is indeed thinking about moving, we should try to persuade

Courses, Diplomas and an MSc in Environmental Decision Making

What part do you play in environmental decision making? What part could you play? The Open University's new programme on 'Environmental Decision Making' is designed to help you develop your skills and become more actively involved in decisions in your community and in your workplace and professional life, from the local to the international level.

6 month courses or an MSc

Environmental Decision Making: a systems approach is one of a number of individual 6 month courses you can take on a one-off basis which can be put together to build a diploma or an MSc in Environmental Decision Making.

Subjects currently available include:

◆ Environmental Ethics ◆ Enterprise and the Environmental · Environmental Decision Making: a systems approach + Integrated Safety Health and Environmental Manage

OU supported open learning

Our unique method of teaching lets you study wherever you like and in your own time. The Open University comes to you with specially written texts, audio and video cassettes, TV and radio programmes. You also receive support from your personal tutor and Regional Centre.

For further information about the programme please fill in the coupon below, or telephone 01908 858884, quoting ref MED7H.

	ersity, PO Box 625, Milton Keynes MR(7 6AA
Please send me	further information on:
	vironmental Decision Making programme
📗 🖫 Higher	Degrees from the Open University 1997/1998
Name	M	ED7H
L E Address
]
Postcode	Tel
U.	iversity education and training open to all adults
T	01908 858884

My lofty life amid the poor in the Ditch developers and those buildings not falling to a shadowy mafia from Stam-ford Hill are snapped up before the boards are in place, amid rumours of unusual deals with Iraqi banks, Gordon,

Carole Hayman

This is the cash and carry world. The cash changes hands in the pub and the carrying is done under cover of darkness rite about the poor," I was told. "This loft living sounds perfectly Hogarthian." The glue-sniffing derelict who regularly kips in my doorway would totally endorse this description. "Pancy a shag darlin"?" he whimpered hopelessly at my kneecaps, as I tottered in from a trendy artisan bar last night. I slammed the door on his rake's rass. He slammed the door on his rake's rags. He was once a City-boy dealer in futures. Pity he couldn't foresee his own.

A more rascal-ridden, geezerish, mafia-warring, cell-phoned, ethnically melted, square mile than Shoreditch would indeed be hard to find. Not so much as a kitchen sink is missing from this urban trifle. As I exited my fashionable and filthy galvanised steel dungeon on to the filthier High Street this morning, there was one standing proud on the cracked and crazy pavement.

No one in the Ditch seems to have noticed that these last few months have seen momentous changes in our island's status quo. Elections are as irrelevant here as council tax and gardens. Anyone who believes in politicians is a mug. just as is anyone who pays the asking price for anything. This is the cash-andcarry world. The cash changes hands in the pub and the carrying is done under cover of darkness. Ditch dwellers rightly believe no government could better manage the economy.

Syd, the local psycho (he once dropped six tabs of acid in one go, no one noticed) can lay his hands on most things. "I've got this mate Keith in Transco, know wha' I'm sayin' ... "There's a stretch of the High Street where no business is transacted without his say-so. From a concrete blaster to a line of coke you call Keith on live/work spaces for photographers and artists but, in fact, it's City-boy bonuses that snaffle up these jewels at exorbitant prices. Villainous 'hood estate agents Shaft and Gazump have made sure of that. This particular roof has an area of potted geraniums, climbers and Astroturf, all doing remarkably well despite the smoggy furnes that rise even this far from the traffic-choked High Street. Conan, Syd's dog - a mogrelish boxer with pugnacious tendencies and a permanently dribbling nose, not unlike Syd himself - scampers across the asphalted surface to lay a turd in the Astroturf. He is followed at a trot by Yasmin, Syd's consort, in bicycle shorts and improbably stacked heels. "Want any trainers?" she yodels. She is lugging a Prada suitcase which she opens to display a jumble of brand new Nikes and Adidases. "Size seven." she adds mysteriously. I explain to Yasmin that at the moment I have no money for any sort of shoe except the kind you boil and eat. She gives me an old-fashioned look. People in the Ditch may be poverty trapped but they can always get hold of

Monday morning. The queue of claimant desperadoes goes round the block. Many appear to be Bosnian. Two have a bike they want to sell. They demonstrate its versatility, spinning the front wheel, balancing on the back one. Perhaps they were trick cyclists in the old country? The octogenarian leaning on her zimmer frame isn't impressed, nor is the harassed mother with three children under five in a push-chair, but the teenager sheltering from the slanting rain under a bit of card reading thank you" exhibits mild curiosity. money. the ubiquitous Shaft and Gazump a few Carole Hayman's novel 'Missing' will be pangs in the pocket. For they too are published by Gollancz next March.

SHOREDITCH

bizarrely harmonious. There is St Leonards and a sweep across gothic Spitalfields to the hi-tech of the City. In the "homeless and hopeless, please help. othr direction is beaming Canary Wharf.

Swathes of Eastern Europeans have penetrated the area, appearing with ghetto-blasters and obscure electrical goods in the local markets; giving even screenplays tucked into their Puffa jack-ets. While I sit here chewing my pen ... Syd's looking out for a state-of-the-art laptop for me ... an industrial sander is working over the other side of the rustic fence and the sound of roadworks and diamond-bit drilling is deafening. When I said I was moving from Highgate to an East End loft my "Ham and High friends were mystified. Why would I want to trade in my delightful house with terrace and garden for grim Dickensian squalor? I have to admit I've wondered myself whilst wrestling with the Laocoon electrics and Heath Robinson plumbing. Yet the view across the rooftops is

After the post office, I visit the chemist, who takes it for granted I won't be paying for my prescription, scout the market for bargains and having pounced on one or two spend the cash saved on a lottery ticket. Next to football and booze the lottery is the Ditch-dweller's

Back to the roof. Must get on with the novel. In the Brickies last night was spurred on by three young men with are you listening?

greatest leisure interest.

Besides, it's an adventure ... in the Ditch vou never know what will happen next. Oh, excuse me my celiphone is ringing.

business & city Financial Journal OF THE YEAR

BUSINESS & CITY EDITOR: JEREMY WARNER

Managers and OFT report attacks 'inefficient and expensive' pension schemes played down the severity of the OFT criticism. A spokesman for the Association of British Inconsumers were being let down and Clifford German

The pensions industry was slammed yesterday in a hard hitting report from the Office of Fair Trading that came only weeks after companies were carpeted by Treasury minister Helen Liddell. John Bridgeman, the OFT's director-general, said millions of people had been sold short by unnecessarily complex products sold on the back of "insubstantial and illu-

Mr Bridgeman slated existing pension provision, which he said failed to meet consumers' needs. He said: "Action has been taken to root out and deal with recent pension scandals, but our investigation shows that existing pension products are still failing to meet consumers' needs.

Launching the three-volume report, he said: "I hope we can all recognise we can do better and the time has come to do better. The time has now come to take the UK a major step forward and to lead with the best pensions which money can buy." The OFT recommended a new kind of retirement savings scheme, called a Designated Pension Plan (DPP), which would dispense with costly investment managers and invest pension contributions in tracker funds, which match the movements of the stock market.

According to Mr Bridgeman. the new schemes would be an alternative to the current defined benefit occupational schemes linked to final salaries

Ayling under fire

from BA investors

One shareholder said that in the days of Lord King the airline had a programme called

Putting People First. The initials were still in use today but now they stood for Putting Profits

First. Warming to his theme, the shareholder said that BA's staff were now so "alienated and de-moralised" that the ailrine could go the way of PanAm, the US carrier that collapsed in the Lord King, who is being given the honary title of president emeritus to coincide with his 80th birthday, accepted the plaudits but took no pleasure in the attacks on his successors.

Mr Ayling responded by in-sisting that if shareholders wanted BA to remain one of the world's most profitable airlines,

then it had to strive to improve efficiency. The cabin crew dispute was not about union bashing and BA had no plans, repeat said the embattled chief executive. People who feared BA was being turned into a "virtu-al airline" were living on a different plant, he said but it had to change to prosper. "Radical and thorough-going change cause upset. The one thing people do not like is change.

Last week's strike was a manidoused one fire of shareholder

But as soon as Mr Ayling had festation of that."

plans, to de-unionise BA.

late 1980s.

and the defined contribution, or money purchase, schemes that form the basis of personal

Both types of scheme were unsatisfactory, the OFT report concluded. Defined benefit schemes penalised all but the small minority of workers who stayed with one employer for the whole of a 40-year career. Defined contribution schemes, which were apparently more flexible, paid the price through inefficient and expensive distribution, failure to achieve economies of scale and expensive fund management". According to the report the worst defined contribution schemes ate up almost 30 per cent of pension contributions in commission and other charges.

scheme, hitting hard anyone who was unable to maintain Key features of the proposed

DPP, include: □ Passive fund management. Mr

Bridgeman said tracker funds that attempted no more than matching stock market indices delivered better and cheaper financial performance than traditional actively managed funds which were unable to consistently beat the market. □ Systematic reduction of investment risk. The proposed funds would safeguard pensions by reducing the exposure to equities over a consumer's working life. Eventually funds would be wholly invested in risk free assets such as index linked gilts.

chased on the open market, with no penalties for shifting to a new provider. Men and women would receive equal annuity

□ Fixed expenses with no hidden element. Unlike current pension products, charges would not be oaded towards the early years of a plan. This would avoid penalising anyone who failed to maintain contributions over the whole period of the plan. □ Obligatory employers' contributions. Anyone who wanted a DPP rather than an occupational pension scheme would be entitled to contributions from their employer.

Mr Bridgeman was speaking at the end of a nine-month investigation by the OFT into pension provision, which had been set up to identify areas where by the current system.

He added: "Many personal plans are poor value and benefits are frequently eroded by the high cost of marketing and fund management. These expenses are often loaded on to the early years of the plan and they bear disproportionately on people who discontinue the pension because of changes in personal circumstances.

The most contentious part of the report in the City was its claim that expensive fund managers were not earning their keep: "There is no convincing evidence that fund managers can consistently outperform the market over the period of a pension plan, although the industry does not like to face up to this."

the fund management industry, active managers do consistently that performance can last for exsurers said the proposal had much in common with its own proposals for increasing the flexibility of pension plans. Defending the performance of Julian Samways, head of mar-keting at Schroder Investment Management, said: There is evidence that a proportion of outperform indices." He said that pension funds that choose the outperformers benefit and tended periods. The report was welcomed by the Government, which is expected to announce tomorrow its own review of pensions provision.

ing evidence that fund managers can consistently outperform the market over the period of a pen sion plan although the industry does not like to face up to this." John Bridgeman, OFT.

the market

This is another body blow to the financial services establishment." Tony Wood, Virgin Direct

It's a sweeping generalisation. I'm surprised at the OFT Steven Cameron,

Scottish Equitable There is evidence: that a proportion of active managers do consistently outperform indices. Julian Samways, Schroder Investment Management

'On aggregate, activ managers don't real produce the sort of paying for.' Alastair MacDougall, WM Company...

'i wouldn't like to count how many fund managers I've put out of business over the last 10 years. James Woodlock, Bardays Global investors

The bulk of these charges were An index-linked annuity, pur-Debate on investment strategies reactivated surprised at the Office for Fair

Percentage of fund value represented by charges 25 yrs 6.0 Best fund 12.6 9.2 Best fund 20.1 Worst fund £10,000 single premium 16.2 11.8 Best fund 15.2 22.6 17.0 Industry average 32.2 Worst fund

Bob Ayling, chief executive of British Airways, came under sustained attack from shareholders yesterday over his handling of the cabin crew dispute, the airline's change of corporate identity. and its £1bn business crammed into the Barbican Centre in London for the company's annual meeting and, with the strike providing a stark reminder that BA was not everyone's favourite airline, the vast bulk of the questioning was hostile.

One shareholder, Peter Page, accused Mr Ayling of being the most divisive chief executive in BA's history and said that he and the board lacked integrity: "It is seeping like a stench through the management culture and it emanates from the very top," he

Mr Ayling to task over his £64,000 pay rise last year, contrasting it with the pay freeze and pay cuts that staff had been forced to accept as part of BA's efficiency plans. Yet another shareholder who was also an employee with 28 wars' service said that morale was the lowest he had ever known.

Mr Ayling was frequently addressed as Bob - a reference to his closeness to Prime Minister

Tony Blair, who also favours first-name terms - but the ques-

Statistics as of 15 July

Another shareholder took

More than 900 shareholders efficiency plan.

John Bridgeman's swipe at the pation of a market crash has pensions industry has repened a heated debate in the City over the relative merits of traditional active fund management and the so-called tracker or index funds that limit their ambitions to matching a market benchmark such as the FTSE 100 index, writes Tom Stevenson. The argument has been highlighted recently by several high rofile and costly misreadings of the stock market by wellknown fund managers and a steady encroachment by passive funds which now account for about a third of all assets under management in the US and a growing proportion of British pension funds. Best known of the active man agers who have got it expensively wrong has been Tony Dye at

PDFM, whose move out of shares and into cash in antici-

it henceforth be run by accoun-tants, asked one shareholder.

"Which would you prefer, a meal prepared by a chef or a meal pre-

A chef, replied the BA chairman Sir Colin Marshall, coming to Mr Ayling's defence. But the fusillade continued. Why was BA having tailfins on its aircraft painted with world designs at a cost of £60m and what evidence did BA have that customers preferred an airline that had abandoned its national identity, shareholders demanded to know.

Mr Ayling sought to explain how careful research had shown that BA's very Britishness was standing in the way of its development abroad. There are aspects of the way we are which are not always helpful, we seem to be aloof," he explained helpfully. Why not jettison the name altogether then, asked one shareholder, while another suggested BA be renamed er suggested DA be retrained British Ethnic Airways. Mr Ayling kept retreating. The competition was getting tougher, he insisted. Who would have thought you could have flown Edinburgh to London for £29? It's cheaper than the bus."

But there was no escape. Who would have thought it would cost £450 to fly down from the Outer Hebrides to attend BA's agm, said one shareholder, now that BA had abandoned services to the Highlands and Islands and franpared by an accountant?"

meant his clients have missed out on the late stages of one the most prolonged bull markets ever. He has crashed down the league tables of the City's highly paid fund managers and suffered a damaging blow to his reputation.

By contrast fund managers such as Barciays Global Investors, the asset manage arm of the high street bank, are enjoying strong demand for their low cost, predictable service. BGI claims to be the biggest fund manager in the world with £225bn of funds

According to James Woodlock, managing director of BGI: "The advantages are low cost and certainty. I wouldn't like to count how many active fund managers I've put out of business over the last 10 years." He said active funds charged netween three and four times as

The alliance between British

Airways and American Airlines is facing a further delay of up to one year, shareholders were warned yesterday, writes

Michael Harrison.

Bob Ayling told the annual

BA meeting that the alliance was unlikely to be operational until pext summer even if it finally obtained approval from UK, US and European regulators.

If the start-up is delayed until next summer it will mean that it will have taken BA and AA

two years to get the alliance off the ground.

When the alliance was un-

much in annual manage fees on a typical pension fund as their passive rivals.

The passive fund managers, backed yesterday by Mr Bridgeman, claim that in the long run it is impossible for active managers to consistently outperform the market by share picking. WM Company, the performance measures cialist, provides statistical evidence to back that claim.

According to WM, a study of nore than £200bn of pension funds showed that between 1986 and 1995 actively mana funds returned 14.7 per cent a year compared to 15.1 per cent from passive funds. The All Share index during that period averaged 15.2 per cent a year. According to WM's Alastair

McDongall: "There will always be active funds that do spe tacularly well but there will albe funds that do

Bob Ayling (left) and Sir Colin Marshall at the BA meeting Photograph: Kalpesh Lathigra

Alliance with American faces delay until next summer

veiled in June last year the intention was to launch com-bined transatiantic services by spring this year. Regulatory hurdles subsequently forced the two airlines to delay the launch until this November.

Now it appears unlikely that the alliance will formally commence until the 1998 summer timetable is introduced next

May.
Mr Ayling said he was disappointed that approval had particularly badly. The whole point about the index approach is that it gives you a defined return relative to a given index." Index-linked portfolios, cany of which only change as underlying index does. have far less turnover than active portfolios, with turnover in all index-type funds about 15 percent annually, according to WM Company. This compares to turnover of between 50-80 per cent in active portfolios.

Active managers hotly dispute the claims of their passive rivals, with a spokesman for Mercury Asset Management saying yesterday: "The average actively managed fund does tend to outperform but the best can be expected to substantially outperform over time." Steven Cameron, director of rensions development at Scottish Equitable agreed: "Its a sweeping generalisation. I'm ing has called on BA and AA to give up 168 runway slots equivalent to 12 round trips a week - in return for approving the alliance. But US regulators have recommended that the two airlines be required to relinquish double that number of slots. The European Competition Commissioner Karel Van

Miert is thought to have pressed

Mr Ayling said that 168 slots was a large number and if BA for a similar concession.

Trading suggesting that we limit consumer choice. Julian Samways, head of mar-keting at Schroder Investment Management, added: "There is evidence that a proportion of active managers do consistently outperform indices. He cautioned that an overreliance on index funds can lead to distortions in the market, as the proportion of freely traded shares diminishes.

where the guy with the one freely traded share of Boots is able to move the market." Currently, most British pension funds use active manager for their equity portfolios, with only around 15 per cent in passive funds. A wholesale move to index trackers along the American lines could mean

"You could get a situation

Bank nets soar: Diane Covle

 $[\Phi_{m,n}^{(i)}(t)]_{n=0} = 0$ pacific and

#DM seg-

H x.

Should in the content

deposits the first transfer

Walter of growing in និការពៀត (ស្រក្កាក 🤻 (ស្រក្

de withing a few con-

with sent the least the second ell actions and process

unguora: Erro

Subs Blank Conference of

prices print and a printing

Credit Hank, As a first of mbilion, program

Dardly de Harry 11

galler of the think

An agreement of the fact

District School

2000 the boots on grades. ting DM (No. 3, No. 443) Ծաֆիոլուսը այրագր (Վ.— WENTER'S LINE COMES Water Bright Street Commencer stantial job losses in the fund management industry.

Government abandons BT golden share

Michael Harrison

The Government yesterday removed one of the obstacles to British Telecom's $20bn (£12bn) merger with MCI by abandoning its golden share in BT which protected the company from takeover.

The announcement, on the eve of BT's annual shareholders meeting in Edinburgh today, will ease the path for regulatory approval of the deal in the US. But the merger is still hanging by a thread following MCI's shock profits warning late last week which has forced BT to choose between renegotiating the terms of the deal or pulling out altogether.

BT is set to receive a rough ride today from shareholders demanding to know why the profits warning emerged after both sets of investors had approved the merger.

MCI president Timothy Rice, one of the executives blamed for the profit warning, said in Washington yesterday that it was "going straight ahead" with the merger despite facing losses of $800m this year and $1bn next vear on its attempt to break into the US local telephone market.

He declined to say whether the merger would have to be restructured because of the losses. He also responded to changes to the company's arti-

him removed from MCI because of the profit warning by saying he expected to be run-ning MCI for a "long" time. The decision by Margaret Beckett, President of the Board of Trade to and the solden of Trade to end the golden share was welcomed by BT. The "golden share" prevented any single shareholder from owning more than 15 per cent. of BT, thus making it bid-proof. BT's competitors in the US argued that this left the UK telecoms market less open and therefore US regulators had to block the MCI deal. "We are extremely pleased with the Government decision and the speed with which they've acted," a BT spokes woman said. She said negotiations initiated with the previous government had been resumed with the Labour administration soon after the election. She said the Government's action "makes it clear to other operators and foreign governments that BT operates in a nor: mal competitive environment and has disengaged itself from the last trace of formal government control".

The redemption means that the ban on BT having a foreign lifted and the Government to longer has power to veto 257 suggestions that BT wanted cles of association.

UK drinks pair reject LVMH proposals

Grand Metropolitan and Guin- Moët Hennessy's finance di French luxury goods group's opposition to the UK drinks groups' £23bn merger, writes Andrew Yates The proposed deal involved

LVHM, headed by Bernard Arnault, splitting its Moet Hennessy subsidiary into two - a champagne group and a cognac business. LVHM would have sold its 66 per cent stake in Hennessy to Guinness in exchange for its 34 per cent stake in Moet. We had three-way talks with ness yesterday rejected the latest proposals from LVHM that up of the business. We have were designed to overcome the studied these outline proposals. but they do not appear to be in our shareholders interests," spokesman for GrandMet said. was Guinness and GreatMet that had suggested the deal and

However, LVMH claimed it that there was no question of it going ahead. Instead, I White was planning to outline alternative proposals as early as today for it merger of United Districts and IDV, the drinks divisions of Guinness and Grandwick 189 resentment, another sprang up.

Why was BA's long-haul catering arm being sold off and would tioning was rarely chummy. STOCK MARKETS Bay's change Change (%) 1996/97 ligh 1996/97 Lear Vield (%) 4056.60 3.36 4386.20 3.75 2374.20 2178.29 3.21 +107 +00 FTSE SmallCap 2205.43

chised out the route. INTEREST RATES 7.12 7.97 7,44 6.54 5,94 0.72 0.50

and AA gave up that many it would make the alliance diffitaken so long but was still hopeful of reaching an acceptable cult to proceed with from a comdeal with regulators. mercial standpoint. The UK's Office of Fair Trad-CURRENCIES estación Champs Vencilen $ (London) 1,5883 -0,63c 1,5557

Lang Stead (20) New Age Print (s) Charge (s) % Charge 158.5 8.9 5.3 136.5 6 4.2 216 8.5 3.8 Smith(David S.)Hit182.5 15 9.0 Thorn reported Chem Inds 880 69.5

17.86 -0.2 19.94 320.75 +0.5 383.20

complete and in the contract in ment and a contract of the The many where the appended the of the land Perfect 10 Production and will pain in a state gelöpi Bildanista and

Pifer than latter in the control of the control of

Before the sources. the company of the blish of the fuched introducers

March Charles

position of federal

Company of the first state of the contract of the wind i

David With

from piles there

COMMENT

'It is true that the average actively managed fund does tend to underperform the index. However, the best substantially outperform, even over the long haul. An outperformance of only 1 per cent per annum over 40 years would yield an extra 25 per cent pension'

Bridgeman's pension plan has its own problems

This was the not altogether surprising conclusion of the Office of Fair Trading's inquiry into the pensions industry, which is found to be riddled with consumer problems of one sort or another. Rather more contentious is John Bridgeman's 10-point plan for reform. Among some perfectly reasonable and sensible suggestions for improving the lot of those trying to save through pension products, the director general of fair trading makes some highly debatable assertions. The most inflammatory of these is that "tracker funds deliver better and cheaper financial performance than actively managed funds, as fund managers cannot consistently beat the market with active fund management". Well now, Mr Bridgeman. Have you ever met the formidable Carol Galley, vice chairman of Mercury Asset Management? She'd be prepared to give you a lecture or

Certainly it is true that the average actively managed fund does tend to underperform the index. However, the best substantially outperform, even over the long haul. An outperformance of only 1 per cent per annum over 40 years would yield an extra 25 per cent pension in payment.

Furthermore, the observation that passively managed funds do just as well if not better than actively managed ones is really only applicable in rising markets. Since this is what equity markets have been doing for | proposes some reasonable and long overdue

Shock, horror, hold the front page and all the past 10 years, the observation seems to reforms which the Government should have been supported by the evidence. But undoubtedly build into its review of pensions, have been supported by the evidence. But in fact, actively managed funds nearly all do better in falling markets.

The other obvious point to be made here is that the cost of fund management is not in any case the chief villain of the piece. Asset management, whether active or passive, only accounts for a small proportion of costs. It is in the marketing and selling of pension products that the big costs are run up and the true damage to savings is done. Plainly this is a much more difficult area of vested interest to attack. When everyone in the insurance and pensions industry is doing so well out of the present set-up, there is no market incentive to change it. Why would the industry want to give up highly profitable personal pension and money-purchase chemes in favour of the much less profitable "designated personal pension" suggested by Mr Bridgeman?

In these circumstances, the OFT suggests. the Government should step in and force the industry into change by banning certain obvi-ous abuses and seeking to standardise fees at a fixed proportion of the capital sum accumulated. Rather more contentious are the suggested changes to the tax system to penalise employers that contribute little or nothing to defined contribution schemes. That looks too much like imposing Continental style social obligations on companies.

All the same, on balance Mr Bridgeman undoubtedly build into its review of pensions expected to be announced later this week. This is an industry that has lamentably failed to provide value to a very significant proportion of its customers. If the market is too entrenched to provide customers with a solution, then the Government most step in and shake things up.

Ignore this moaning about the strong pound

Not a day goes by without an industry lobby group or a troop of City economists meaning that the strong pound will cost jobs and plunge the economy into recession and this as new official figures show that the profitability of UK companies has returned to its 1985 and 1988 peaks.

This is one of those times when British industry seems far more efficient at lobbying than it is at manufacturing. Without downplaying the fact that an exchange rate so high makes life difficult for exporters, it is worth remembering with each complaint about unbalanced economic growth that the economy is fundamentally unbalanced already. Manufacturing accounts for only a fifth of output and jobs in the UK. No amount of fiddling about with the exchange rate is going to halt its long-term decline.

The other point to be kept in mind here is that the pound's surge in the currency markets is not caused by rising UK interest rates alone. It is typically insular to think that the dignitaries on the Bank of England's Mon-etary Policy Committee and the Chancellor alone bear the blame for the strong pound. In fact, sterling's appreciation is only the flip side of the weak German mark.

There could be nothing more symbolic of this than the fact that the Bank of Italy has had to intervene to prop up the mark and prevent the Italian lira from climbing any further. This apparently ludicrous state of affairs stems in large part from the fact that we are in the middle of one of those periodic episodes of turbulence in currency markets which is washing the globe.

In setting policy, the authorities would therefore be wise to ignore those who say something must be done about the strength of the pound. Even assuming they could do something, it is by no means certain what purpose would be served by doing so.

Water troubles ahead for Prescott

Politics is about the art of the possible and, when it comes to improving the lot of water customers, the Deputy Prime Minister John Prescott is fast discovering that it is easier to deliver rhetoric than results.

Two months ago Mr Prescott convened his grand Water Summit - an opportunity simultaneously to humiliate the privatised water companies in public and demonstrate that

New Labour was serious about doing some-thing to improve the situation. Yesterday we had the results of the Water Summit Challenge - the water industry's response to the Deputy PM's 10-point action plan. The good news is that they have all fallen into line under Mr Prescott's mixture of exhortation and admonition. "Government unites water companies in providing better service," trills the press releas The reality is a bit less exciting. Many companies were already offering free leakage and repair services on domestic premises. Now it is universal. The compensation schemes for drought-related interruptions that all companies will now sign up to are academic since they have all agreed that droughts are a thing of the past. As for saving on toilet flushing. Mr Prescott would not have been able to brandish a hippo at his water summit had they not already been widely available. Where Mr Prescott is less forthcoming is in the tougher areas such as mandatory leak targets. Despite the Ofwat National Customer Council's call for "an immediate and substantial cut" in water bills, there is no firm indication of how this will be achieved when new environmental directives are piling up in Brussels. The bathing water directive alone could cost £5bn to implement.

Implausible as it may seem, Mr Prescott has made friends with the water industry. But delivering cleaner drinking and bathing water at the same time as lower bills will prove a much biggest test of his ability.

Bank of England nets £1bn from soaring sterling

The rise in the pound has generated profits of around film for the Bank of England, thanks to the increasing value of the sterling held in its reserves.

As the round has soared past its old level in the exchange rate mechanism, it has eliminated the losses the Bank made when it tried and failed to support the currency by buying it on the foreign exchanges in the autumn of 1992, in the run-up to "Black" Wednesday". The Bank is thought to have spent about £10bn on that intervention, making a paper loss of up to £2bn.

he losses on the intervention, which failed to keep sterling in the ERM, have now turned into a profit of around £1bn due to the appreciation of the pound and interest earnings during the past five years.

The pound's exchange rate against the German mark fell from DM2.78 in September 1992 to a low of DM2.18 in November 1995. Last night it stood near its highest for seven years at DM3.02.

yesterday of massive job losses in manufacturing. There were also warnings from currency traders that the Bank of England would soon have to intervene to the London Business School, speaking to the Foundation for Manufacturing and Industry last night, said the current strength of the exchange rate threat-ened the loss of 100,000 jobs in manufacturing.

"We have not seen anything like an appreciation on this scale in one year before," he said. He predicted that the shakeout in industry would not ap-proach the early 1980s recession in its scale, but there would nevertheless be big job cuts.

"Manufacturing is not grinding into reverse, but this estimate of potential job losses is quite conservative." Gloom about industry's prospects if the exchange rate stays strong enough to bite into exports is spreading.

Kenneth Clarke, former Chancellor of the Exchequer, said yesterday: "If we are not careful, this will wipe out our manufacturing industry."

The alarm was not universal. Kevin Gardiner, UK economist at investment bank Morgan Stanley, said: "The strong pound is as much an effect as a cause. However, the pound's The home market, which is still strength on the foreign exchanges led to fresh predictions enough for manufacturing to continue to grow."

However, the mood in the foreign currency markets was becoming a matter for concern, some analysts said. Michael

Professor Andrew Sentance of matter of time before the Bank of England had to sell pounds to control the exchange rate.

"It is becoming increasingly disorderly, and a lot of hot money is going into sterling. The markets will continue to test the resolve of the central banks," he

The excitement is not confined to the pound, but rather reflects the general weakness of the German currency. The Bank of Italy yesterday intervened in the markets on a small scale to sell lire and buy marks.

Meanwhile, the dollar has been strengthening against a range of other currencies, particularly the mark and yen. The health of the US economy was confirmed by new figures yesterday showing that retail sales increased by 0.5 per cent, more than expected, in June.

The currency markets have become convinced that there is nothing to lose from bidding up the pound and dollar and bidding down the mark. The Bank of England and Federal Reserve are expected to raise interest rates during the next few months, while the Bundesbank is thought unlikely to increase key interest rates until the German economy shows more signs of life.

The pound ended yesterday almost unchanged at DM3.02. Its index against a range of other currencies was down 0.4 at 105.1.

sell sterling and prevent the pound from rising any further.

Lewis at Deutsche Morgan It has risen by 24 per cent in value during the past 12 months.

Eddle George, Governor of the Bank of England: The Bank's losses on intervention in the post five years run-up to 'Black Wednesday' have turned into a profit of around £1bn in the past five years

IN BRIEF

Brussels still against Boeing merger

The European Commission said it could not approve the $15bn (£9bn) takeover by Boeing of the rival McDonnell Douglas aircraft builder in its current form, despite reports that Boeing had put forward new proposals to clear the logiam. The announce-ment came in a statement following the commission's weekly meet-ing in Strasbourg, where competition commissioner Karel van Miert's stance on the merger was said to be fully supported by the other 19 commissioners.

"Unless the legitimate competition concerns of the commission can be met and genuine choice maintained for purchasers of aircraft worldwide, the commission could not approve the merger," the statement read. "Boeing has so far not agreed to measures which would meet these concerns and achieve that objective." Boeing was earlier reported to have tabled new proposals to get round commission concerns, but sources at the commission said its proposed remedies satisfied only one of the three problem areas identified. They also made clear that the commission was not prepared to negotiate beyond a deadline of yesterday.

Nomura's £2bn payment broke the law

Nomura Securities broke the law when it paid £2m to a gangster, Japanese financial regulators said, following a 10-month investigation of Japan's largest brokerage. The Securities and Exchange Surveillance Commission alleged that executives in several departments at Nomura co-operated in making the payments.

The payments broke Japanese commercial laws against loss compensation and trading on a customer's account without permission, the commission said. The next step is for the Ministry of Finance to decide a punishment for Nomura based on the commission's findings. Finance Minister Hiroshi Mitsuzuka said after the commission's report that he would severely punish Nomura.

Minister warms on dubious investments

Nigel Griffiths, the Competition and Consumer Affairs Minister, warned that the Department of Trade and Industry would come down hard on dubious investment schemes. Penalties resulting from a DTI investigation could range from shutting down the company and disqualifying directors to a prison sentence. "The message I have for the fledgling investor is that there is no such thing as easy money. The greater the promised returns, the greater the risk that you will lose your money," Mr Griffiths said.
His comments came as the DTI announced that it completed

221 company investigations last year, 11 more than the previous year, while insider dealing probes rose by eight to 21 after the Stock Exchange changed its policy on referrals. The department mounted 317 prosecutions, involving 353 defendants, of whom 320 were convicted. Seventy-nine of the defendants went to prison.

WH Smith wins Hong Kong concession

WH Smith has won the concession to operate five stores in the new Hong Kong airport, due to open next summer. The retailer will open four branches of Waterstone's and one WH Smith. The sions will run for five years. The company already has a branch of Waterstone's in Singapore airport. It will look at opening other branches in new airports due to open in Seoul and Kuala Lumpur.

Sainsbury director sells shares

Sir Tim Sainsbury, a director of J Sainsbury, has sold over a million shares in the supermarket group, raising a total of £4.53m. He sold 1.05 million shares on Friday at 431.5p. Sainsbury's said the shares were part of the non-beneficial interest held on behalf of various trusts. His personal holding of 13.4 million shares remains unchanged.

P&O still benefiting from tunnel fire

The continuing restrictions on Eurotunnel operations in the wake of last year's fire is continuing to boost P&O's cross-channel ferry business. The group said passenger carryings were up 9 per cent in the three months to June, while tourist vehicles were 12 per cent ahead and freight soared by 57 per cent over the same period. The total short-sea market for tourist vehicle traffic grew by 10 per cent, with freight traffic up by 8 per cent, in the first half of 1997, P&O said. It added that a decision on the plan to merge its short-sea crossing business with Stena Line is expected from the European Commission and the UK government soon.

Centrica to supply Dutch project

Centrica has agreed a contract with fuel purchasers for the Elsta co-generation project in the Netherlands for gas deliveries through the UK-Continent Interconnector pipeline. It is the first agreement Centrica has signed to supply a big Continental end-user directly, rather than through a gas trading/transmission company, and the first UK gas export sale to a power project, the company said. Under the agreement, Centrica, through its subsidiary British Gas Trading will sall to Interconnection in Europe 19 to 19 Trading, will sell to Inkoopcombinatie Elsta VOF around 1 billion cubic metres per annum over a period of eight years.

Merrill Lynch earnings at a record

Merrill Lynch, the US investment bank which acquired British securities group Smith New Court two years ago, yesterday announced record second-quarter earnings of $481m (£287m), a rise of 11 per cent on the comparable period. The jump beat expectations and comes after Donaldson Lufkin & Jenrette and Paine Webber also reported profits ahead of forecasts. Analysts had expected a slump in second quarter results, after weak underwrit-

Citicorp ahead despite credit card losses

Citicorp, the second-largest bank in the US, unveiled an 8 per cent rise in second-quarter earnings to $1.02bn (£608m) as higher profits from corporate banking offset rising credit card losses. Although the bank continued to produce good results. Citicorp Chairman John Reed said the bank still had to overcome challenges presented by the shrinking profits in its credit card business.

SBC to take £340m stake in Japanese bank

Financial Editor

Swiss Bank Corporation is to inject £340m into Japan's eighth largest bank, the Long Term Credit Bank, as a first step in an ambitious move into that country's rapidly deregulating financial services market.

The move, which gives SBC an important toe-hold in Tokyo ahead of Japan's Big Bang programme of financial reforms, helps LTCB recapitalise itself and will pair it with a heavyweight international investment banking partner. LTCB has one of the heaviest bad loan burdens of any Japanese bank, so was illequipped to take on the challenges of Big Bang on its own. SBC and LTCB plan to merge their domestic Japanese securities operations into a company with capital of 60bn yen (£311m), with the banks taking 3 per cent cross-shareholdings in each other. They also agreed to establish a joint-venture investment advisory company as well as fund management and private banking operations for

SBC Warburg's chairman, Hans de Gier, said the group intended to form the most creative, dynamic and clientfocused team in Japan

Luquan Arnold, SBC Warburg's Asia/Pacific chairman. added: "We are very serious about becoming a major do-mestic presence in Japan because we are really convinced that this Big Bang is for real.
"Building SBC's own business is not a realistic option if one introducing more competition.

The new venture will be wants to be a major player dur-ing and after the Big Bang." The Big Bang is Prime Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto's pro- LTCB SBC Brinson, and gramme to make Japanese markets "free, fair and global" by breaking down walls among banks, brokers and insurers and responsible for the Japanese investment banking of both companies world-wide, combining LTCB Securities with SBC's existing Japanese equity, interest rate, foreign exchange, derivatives and corporate fi-

LTCB and SBC will also set up an asset management firm,

Japan's first-ever private bank. The financial side foresees LTCB raising about ¥200bn in capital. Of this, ¥130bn would be raised through preference shares and ¥70bn through subordinated debt. SBC Warburg will help LTCB raise the funds and SBC will hold about 50 per cent of the new LTCB preferred stock in its investment portfolio.

Among Swiss banks, SBC already has one of the best Japanese market positions, following its 1995 purchase of SG Warburg, which had a long-standing

It is expected the tie-up will be the first of many before the distinctions between banks and brokers are eliminated by 2000. Broking commissions are due to be liberalised in two stages from presence there. The move now

John Leonard of Salomon

Brothers said: "This makes a lot of sense. SBC Warburg has global strengths and wants to get into Japan. LTCB doesn't have the skills or the capital to compete globally but wants to stay in these business areas."

consolidates that position.

Pifco bid expected as talks | Anite reveals £600,000 pay-off with Kenwood break down

Sameena Ahmad

Pifco may launch a hostile takeover bid for Kenwood after merger talks between the two electrical appliance groups broke down yesterday, according to City sources.

The company is believed to have had an offer that was pitched substantially above Kenwood's 118p current share price rejected. Michael Webber. "moving the company forward" chairman of Pifco, refused to comment on whether the company, which has been courting Kenwood for two years, would now make an aggressive strike.

Kenwood, said the company "has never received a firm offer from Pifco." though it did con-reported a collapse in undersider a proposal which it did not lying profits from £16m to £4m

therefore, have been terminated and as a result Kenwood is no longer in an offer period". Colin Gordon, the group's new chief executive, and Mr

Nash said Pifco's approaches had been a "distraction" and the Kenwood, which has seen its shares slump from almost 400p three years ago, has been under pressure from dissident shareholders, which led to the de-David Nash, chairman of parture of Tim Beech as chief executive in February. Kenwood, which yesterday believe "would lead to a satis-factory offer that could be put to shareholders. Discussions, structuring provision. This will include cutting more than 16,000 product lines to 2,000, shifting manufacturing overseas and further, unspecified redundancies. No final dividend is being paid.

Responses to Kenwood's

plans were mixed. Julian Treger of UK Active Value Fund, Kenwood's second largest shareholder, said he had been "impressed by the new management" and indicated that UKAV was considering increasing its 12 per cent stake. However, Patrick Orr analyst at Panmure Gordon, was sceptical: This is a one brand company. It's basically going to be a very long haul for shareholders."

payments if he had not found saleable. This has been an oner-long haul for shareholders."

payments if he had not found ous burden, said Mr Hunt.

as its pre-tax losses triple

Sameena Ahmad Anite, the data communications and software group, yesterday reported a near tripling of pretax losses to £50.4m in the year to end-April after taking a £32.2m hit on surplus proper-ties. Despite last year's profits warning and this property legacy, Anite disclosed that Jon Richards, who resigned as chief executive in March, could be paid up to £600,000 in compensation - more than twice his salary of £250,000 last year.

Simon Hunt, finance director of Anite said the provision covered sale and leaseback and other rental obligations struck under the previous manage-ment on 34 buildings in the According to Anite, formerly known as Cray Electronics, Mr South of England. "Some of Richards agreed to resign on these property deals were done condition he would receive to raise money. Some buildings £267,000 up front and further were kept to make businesses year. Anite has short-listed two candidates to replace Mr pact on cash would diminish. Post Richards, both from the inforthe charge, rent and occupancy mation technology sector, and costs will reduce from £5.6m in 1997/8 to £3m the following year expects to make an announceand £2m the year after. ment in the next few weeks. Analysts said the size of the Alec Daly, chairman, said un-property provision was a surprise. Ross Jobber at UBS certainty over the group's fi-nancial position had lost orders said: "They've got some pretty in Anite's core software systems horrendous lease obligations." business, which reported flat sales in the year to April at £77m, with profits ahead 28 per cent to £6m. Mr Daly said: "Over the last couple of years we've not been the best home in the world for our customers."

However, he said that things had "materially changed" since the full year. "We've got the best order book we've had for some time - up 10 per cent which is in line with the market.

AIM to profit among high flyers Now is not a bad time to be involved in the aerospace industry. The output of the big industry. The output of the big three aeroplane makers, Boeing, three aeropiane and Airbus, is McDonnell Douglas and Airbus, is McDonnell Douglas and Airbus, is forecast to soar from 463 aircraft in gether account for roughly £10m of slightly from 78.6 per cent to 77.3 per cent in the 13 weeks to 29 June, the sales. Profits could come in at around sales. Profits could come in a taround average room rate jumped to £53.21 1996 to 800 or more next year, as the airline industry makes up for the £7.4m this year, putting the shares on dearth of recent investment and prepares for the expected upswing in air travel into the next century. Small companies with a focus on this business should be particularly highly geared into this boom, but such investments are few and far between, which explains why shares in AIM have surged from 120p three years ago to 555p, down 15p yesterday.

Despite its name, AIM is a fully listed aerospace group, which, along with two US competitors, dominates the manufacture of aircraft interiors. Given the market background, it is perhaps hardly surprising that the company should yesterday report pre-tax profits up by three-quarters to £6.22m for the ar to April, even after an £850,000 hit for a property revaluation. But the figures also demonstrate just how volume-sensitive this business is.

It was only two or three years ago that AIM suffered a profits collapse after delays to a big contract with Saab, the Swedish aircraft maker, meant it had difficulty covering its high fixed costs. Now AIM has demonstrated the reverse of that process, turning in a 75 per cent rise in profits on a mere 10 per cent uptick in sales.

The reason for the higher volumes was the record $90m contract to refurbish the interiors of Northwest Airlines' fleet of DC-9s, which saw 90 units completed last year. Although that deal is now nearly complete, AIM has already gone a long way to replacing it with refurbishment work valued at around $12m for part of KLM's fleet of Boeing 747s and a contract with Air Canada and Aero Mexico for their DC-9 and MD-88 aircraft put at roughly $10m. Most of that should fall in the current financial period and AIM's chairman, Jeff Smith, is forecasting a similar level of group turnover for this year.

But the feast should be far from over even then. AIM is also involved in a £20m contract as part of the Nimrod 2000 programme to upgrade the UK's main reconnaissance aircraft and in the EH101 helicopter programme. Enquiries are running at record levels and, although he is making no forecasts, Mr Smith says the company could handle £100m of sales without too much trouble, which would feed through to profits of well over £10m. given the jump in margins from 7.9 to 9.6 per cent last year.

He remains sanguine about the strength of the pound, pointing out that many of its parts are manufactured in the US, and about the merger talks currently under way between Boeing and McDonnell Douglas, which to-

> 166 MMX 32Mb

3.2Gb

THE SECOND

to £41.16.

average room rate jumped to £53.21

from £46.85. This boosted the net yield per room by almost 12 per cent

The Metropole Hotels, which were bought from Lourho last year for £327m, continue to improve, with both occupancy and room rates showing healthy increases of 8.5 per cent and 12.2 per cent respectively. The figures have been boosted by the introduction of special corporate rates and weekend

The only slight disappointment was in Stakis's casinos division, where the average spend per head fell, hit in part by an increase in lower spending the 1990s have been rewarded by a five-fold increase in the share price over the Stakis shareholders who have stuck

the company since the dark days of

Given these robust third-quarter figures, there seems no reason to sell out now. While the sector will remain troubled by currency concerns, the strength of the dollar should limit the damage.

Stakis says it is the American visitors

1996

1997

740

Buy With

Confidence

From Time

break programmes.

last five years.

a forward price/earnings ratio of 16. That is still reasonable value, while small acquisitions could add spice.

Stakis benefits from US bookings

Totel shares have had a pretty rough time of late. Hit by concerns over the impact of the strong pound on the level of overseas visitors, the sector has fallen sharply and last year's euphoria which spawned a long list of new issues, has evaporated.

Some of the new crop, including Jarvis Hotels and Thistle Hotels, are languishing below their issue price. while others, such as Millennium & Copthorne and Macdonald, have also been badly affected.

Given all this turbulence, Stakis, the Scottish hotels and casinos group, has held up quite well. Its third-quarter figures announced yesterday showed that, while occupancy rates fell

Five year record

Tornover (2111)

though Stakis says it has noticed no downturn yet.

NatWest Securities is forecasting full-year profits of £58.5m, putting the shares, up 3p at 107p, on a forward rating of 15, falling to 14. That suggests they are still worth holding.

Inn Business now needs returns nn Business has made an art out of buying pubs that nobody wants at a knockdown price. They have had no shortage of offers. Big brewers like Whitbread, where Inn Business chairman Alan Jackson learned his trade, are content to pump huge sums of money into their fancy themed pubs, but cannot be bothered to give the same attention to some of their sadly neglected tenanted estate. So Inn Business has been able to go on a furious buying spree, almost quad-rupling its estate to 500 tenanted and

27 managed pubs in the last few years. Now, however, Inn Business has to prove it can actually make some decent money out of its new estate by jazzing up its outlets. The game plan is to create "The Local's Local" pub. In other words, it is not going the whole hog by rebuilding the pubs, changing their character and names in the process. Instead it is sprucing up the tattiest part of its estate - adding a lick of paint or building new loos - and providing a more extensive pub grub

It is also seeking to gradually build up its managed estate and roll out Hooden Horse, the eight-strong branded chain it bought earlier this year, across the South-east. As part of this shake-up, at least 50 or so less wellfavoured pubs inherited from its buy-ing spree will be sold off, including the -strong Welsh estate.

So far the plan is working, Ignoring acquisitions, operating profits for the six months to May jumped to £2.68m (£1.54m), leaping from £386,000 to £2.92m at the pre-tax level. House brokers Peel Hunt are forecasting current year pre-tax profits of £6.45m, putting the shares, which edged up 1.5p to 66.5p yesterday, on a prospective p/e ratio of under 10.

On the face of it, that looks an unjustifiably wide discount to the sector which is trading on a prospective p/e ratio of more than 15. But Inn Business cannot afford to make another acquisition without issuing paper. Until it can prove it can make a good and sustainable return from its investment programme, the shares are no more than a hold.

Airtours chief tops the entrepreneurial charts

David Crossland, chairman of Airtours, is the UK's top entrepreneur, according to the first annual survey by Enterprise magazine. The mag under its new editor, Richard Shackleton, has compiled a list of the UK's top 100 entrepreneurs by ranking them in terms of personal wealth and business acumen, based on sales growth and increase in employment over five years.

With the greatest of respect to Mr Crossland and the other enterprising types on the list, surely it runs the risk of emulating the Guardian Young Businessman of the Year, an annual award which turned into a kiss of death. Winners in the 1980s included John Ascheroft of Coloroll, John Gunn of British & Commonwealth and George Davies, head of Next - all of whom came down with a bump.

Alistair Ross Goobey, then with the broker James Capel, analysed the Guardian winners in the nine years to 1988. While shares in all but two of the last nine winners boomed in the three years before the award, all but two lost heavily in relative terms in the period between winning and the Goobey probe.

On the other hand, I'm sure Enterprise will do better. After all, it's got Lloyds Bank Commercial Service sponsoring it.

Anyone got a job for Ken Clarke? The former inmate of Number 11 told fellow diners yesterday that he was looking for a job in business: "I always thought of myself as a pro-business Chancellor," declared the brown-shoed member for Nottingham Rushcliffe. Now I would like to run a business.

Our Ken says he's "got feelers out", but there have been no takers yet. He adds that he has not been asked to be chairman of his home football team, Nottingham Forest, contrary to some press reports. The pint'n panatellawielding politician insists he likes going to watch football, but that's as far as it goes.

Book your tickets now - Cambridge Mineral Resources says it has "completed a heavy mineral survey on the Inishowen licence group in County Donegal in Ireland, confirming its initial findings of diamond, kimberlite and lamproite indicator minerals and small blue sapphires present in the stream samples." What this means in plain English, says Cambridge's managing director, David Brambill, is that they've found some "candy pink sapphires" and other mineral deposits which strongly suggest that diamonds are present.

Mr Bramhill and a handful of other investors formed Cambridge last year and floated it on AIM in March, in order to prospect for gernstones in Ireland, Sweden and Spain. His theory is that there is a global band of sapphires stretching from Archangel in Russia, through the Western Isles of Scotland all the way to Montana in the USwith Inishowen somewhere in the middle.
That said, he's keen not to over-egg the pudding. "We don't want everyone turning up panning for stuff in the rivers."

Congratulations to Richard Dixon, who is retiring as head of investor relations at Storehouse on Friday after eight years in the job. He had a drinks do for analysts on Monday

PEOPLE & BUSINESS

David Crossland: Heads a ranking based on personal wealth and business acumen evening, and is described by colleagues as "very highly regarded. To paraphrase Harold Wilson, eight years is certainly a long time in business. Mr Dixon was originally asked to help out two days a week at Storehouse by its then chairman, Terence Conran, along with former chief executive Michael Julien, both long departed from the group. "I always meant it to be part-time, but I'm still here," Mr Dixon said yesterday.

His career has included a long spell as ITN's industrial correspondent, then information director at the CBI, and stints at Imperial Group and Eurotunnel. It was in 1989 that he retired to write a book about transport, but only got two-thirds of the way transport, out only got two trained of the way through it before he got the call from Storehouse. "It's still waiting to be finished," he says, in a way that suggests it never will be.

While the proposed merger between BT and MCI to create a company called Concert has entered choppy waters, the BT-sponsored sailing boat Concert has become becalmed in the middle of the Atlantic. This has left one of the boat's crew, Dr Alan Rudge, BT's deputy chief executive, with a tricky problem. Will he make the agm in Edinburgh today? Dr Rudge has helped crew Concern throughout the year-long, around-the-world Global Challenge, and his boat was expected to enter Southampton in the early hours of this morning. Then, according to a BT spokeswoman yesterday, he would be whisked up to Edinburgh by the quickest means available for the 10.30 start. Whatever happens, Dr Rudge can take pride in Concert's performance in coming third. Whether the other Concert will ever make it down the slipway remains to be seen.

*INDEPENDENT

John Willcock

ling Construction

30.7 17.9 Earnings per share (p) 9.0 4.5 4.5 Dividends per share (p) Share price Net debt 600 550 500

The UK's Best MMX Bonday

multimedia PC for home and business users. It comes complete with Intel®s best selling 166MHz Pentium* processor with MMX technology, a massive 32Mb of RAM memory and an enormous 320Mb hard date. Order early and receive a FREE 33.6 modern and a FREE messive pre-loaded software bundle.

Compare the specification of our 166 MMX Multimedia Special with any other high street PC, we are confident that you will agree that at the new lower price of just $369+VAT, this is by far the UK's best 168 MMX PC offer.

AIM Group: At a glance

Market value: £81.0m, share price 555p (-15p)

1993

1994

3.92 0.03 1.01 Pre-tax profits (£m)

FREE: Thai food dish up to the value of £8

pendent on Sunday are giv-ing you the opportunity to claim a free That food dish up to the value of £8 at a selection of Thai restaurants.

By using the voucher (previously 1 tsp/Sml printed on July 12th, 13th and 14th 6 oz/180g a further voucher will be printed in The Independent on Friday 18th July) you can claim your Free Thai food dish, per table reservation from the main mentiup 15 to the value of £8 at one of 41 par-ticipating restaurants. The list of participating restaurants previously published in The Independent and Independent on Sunday on July12th and 13th, will be printed again in The Independent on Friday 18th July. All the participating restaurants are mem-bers of the Thai Restaurant Association (UK).

HOW TO BOOK

Firstly, phone up the restaurant of your choice from the list published and identify yourself as an Independent diner. You will need to check with the individual restaurants for their opening times and pre-booking is essential. Then simply cut out the voucher and take it to the restaurant of your choice and present it at the time of order, indicating either a starter or a main dish from the full priced menu that you wish to claim as your free dish. The vouchers can be used until 31st August 1997. So, why not bring a spot of Thailand to your palate, whether it's dumplings, intensely flavoured soups, pad Thai, salay, spicy salads, mouthwatering currys or sweet sticky rice! The choice is yours. Correction: The Thai Thank restaurant, Streatham, SWI6 was printed with the incurrect phone rumber. The currect GAENG KIOW WAN (Green Beef Curry)

4 fl oz/125mi - Coconut cream Cooking oil 2 tbsp/30ml Garlic (finely chopped) 1 Clave Green curry pasts 1 tbsp/15ml

2 tbsp/30ml Fish sauce Sugar Diced Lean Beef Best stock or water 4 ft oz/125mi Lime Leaves (chopped)

Small green aubergines/eggplant, quartered (available in oriental stores, otherwise cut purple aubergines into large. chunks, leaving the skin on) Holy basil leaves (available in oriental stores)

1. In a small pain, gently heat the coconut cream. Do not boil
2. In a frying pan or wok, heat the oil until a light haze appears. Add the chopped garlic and fry until golden brown. Add the curry paste and stirfiv for a few seconds.
3. Add the warmed coconut cream and stir until it curdles and thickens in the oil. Add the fish sauce and the sugar and stir.

4.Add the beef and turn in the mixture until its red colour disappears. Add the stock or water, stir and simmer for 3 - 4 minutes, stirring occasionally. 5.Add the lime leaves, stir, then add the aubergines and basil leaves. Stir and cook for 1 minute and then turn into a serving dish.

This is a main dish which should be prepared as part of a meal for 4 people at which 4 different dishes are served with Thai fragrant rice.

The Taste of Thailand by Vatcharin Bhumichitr published by Pavilion

3. Venchers will say be accepted without a prior reservation and ours be used everyday between tith sky and.

31st August 1967.

4. The weather is wild against any one storter or main dish from the individually priorel cloims. Extend on the mains up in the white of CD. Severagion are excluded from this offer. S. The venctor created to used in part progress' against either a set learns or est closure. S. The toucher holder much northwale the dish against which the vencher lake interested to be used out and present to the time of order. Only one wancher can be used part into reservation in interested to be used out and present to the time of order. Only one wancher can be used part into reservation into the selected dish coins to be interested to be used to be used out to be used to be used. S. The other against to the used to be used to

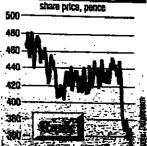

You Will Not Find A Better PC Deal! 166 MMX™ Multimedia Special J32Mb 32Mb ETO RAM - 3L2Gb EDE herd del · 16 MAX CD-ROW dive 64-bit (supplies using upto 25th system RAM 14" SYGA NI 0.263p scroon (15" optional extra) Stores 16-bit yound and specialist J3.2Gb MIPEG Facility for MFEO movies on welco FREE Lotus SourcSuite 97 and other spitester firmled offer All Standard Features 1 4446 toppy days, 105 reer model: 529-VAT E.C.a (28) 05 int. VAT) Product code
1440 Epison Styles Colour bibliot Printer $100-VAT Extra market report/shares

Data Bank FISE 100 4899.3 +41.9 FTSE 250 4451.5 +27.6 FTSE 350

2344,9 +19.0 SEAQ VOLUME 939.5m shares

53,574 bargains Gilts Index 96.61 -0.05 Share spotlight

Footsie continues to defy gravity as foreigners pile in managers, surged above 4,900 points for the first time. At one stage it was riding at 4,903.2. A weak Wall Street blue chips in this bull run. prompted a little top slicing and at the close the index was resting at 4,899.3. Blue chips' seeming ability to defy gravity is mystifying many observers and no doubt causing considerable embarrassment to the army of fund managers who have been attempting to talk the stock market down. There is, of course, no doubt that on most historic measurements blue chips are look-

Footsie, despite the chorus of encouraging foreigners to pile caution from pension fund into London.

The growing overseas in-terest is one explanation for the dramatic outperformance of It was again very much a leaders party yesterday with the FTSE SmallCap index actually surrendering ground. Top financials made much of the running. HSBC surged 85.5p to 2,086p and Lloyds TSB added 22.5p to 697.5p. Dresdner Kleinwort Benson and Lehman Brothers provided the lyrical background. Lehman

MARKET REPORT

DEREK PAIN stock market reporter of the year circulation.

its more cheerful message in

Great Universal Stores

edged forward 7p to 624.5p. It is holding what is probably its heard at First Leisure Corpo- US soft drinks market but it ration with Rank, off 17p at 350.5p, named as a possible could be faring better than the market thinks and wants to get 350.5p, named as a possible bidder. Bass, 22p higher at 850p, was also in the frame. Scottish & Newcastle, helped by Crédit Lyonnais Laing, and Whitbread were strong.

Cable & Wireless, 11p put a 2,200p valuation on HSBC with DKB going for 2,400p. DKB's other banking target prices were thought to be firmer at 596.5p, enjoyed Panyear, can roll over into the new issue. J Sainsbury gained 9p to 433p (director Sir Timothy Sainsbury sold just over 1 million shares at 431.5p raising more than £4.5m) and Tesco put on 3p to 432p. Some second-line chemicals were firm, largely reflecting the Ellis & Everard results. Ellis rose 10p to 250p pulling British Vita 8.5p higher to 209p. Im-perial Chemical Industries edged ahead 8p to 888p. Centrica, which signed its first deal to supply gas to the Continent, softened to 79.75p. first-ever analyst and fund managers investment excur-sions. Yesterday analysts went to Nottingham to see the operations of Experian, its con-

latory soaking with Thames up of its dive, recovering 6p from their 12-month peak, a reits year's low to 222p; it is building a £35m electricity generator station at Fort Dunlop, near try. The action is thought to tor station at Fort Dunlop, near Birmingham.

Smith & Nephew, the health-care group, jumped 7.25p to 171.75p as Salomon Brothers put a 200p price tag on the shares. Siebe, the engineer, firmed 9p to 1,011.5p after meeting analysts. FKI hardened 3.5p to 153p as Brinson Partners. JIS find manager, desert JIS find manager, des ners, US fund manager, declared a 3.06 per cent stake.

Cambridge Mineral Resources, traded on AIM slipped bathroom products group.

Waters were happy to shrug off the latest watchdog reguafoot at Jefferson Smurfit, the big Irish paper and pack-11p to 771.5p.
Rolls-Royce at last pulled out 187.5p, are a shade below involve one of Smurfit's US operations, possibly an associated company.

The shares are 76p.

	440 420 400 386 387	sirements blue chips are look- ing increasingly expensive. But London, argue Goldman Sachs, is still relatively under- priced compared with other European markets. The still favourable outlook for the British economy and the nation's long-term political stability are other influences	target prices were thought to be 1,350p for Barclays (1,252.5p); 830p for Lloyds and 1,050p for Standard Chartered (1,000.5p). But SBC Warburg ensured National Westminster, off 5.5p to 853p) missed the fun, reducing it from buy to hold. Takeover talk was again	target price on the shares. Cadbury Schweppes hardened 14.5p to 591p. There is talk its interim figures have been pulled forward to early next month. Usually the soft drinks to sweets group reports in September. Many believe it is under intense pressure in the	is the turn of fund managers. Superstores made headway as BZW issued its fourth "troi- ley" covered warrants on the sector. Idea is holders of the third batch, up 160 per cent	Centrica's old partner, 1905, flared 14p to 241.5p. Newcomer Delcam, a computer software group, closed at 267.5p from a 260p placing; another debutant, Hitachi Credit, controlled by the Japanese giant, moved from a 135p placing to 144.5p.	sources, traded on AIM slipped 0.5p to 11.5p as it confirmed it could be near a diamond strike in Ireland. On Ofex, Display IT had another lively session; BII man Bill Murphy quit as a director, leaving the shares 25p lower at 240p.	held at 9p. The shares were hit by a fire at its Barustaple factory. Its insurance should make sure profits do not suffer; around £1.1m is expected this year against last time's £12.7m loss.
		1987 Shook Price Chg	1897 Stock Price Chg 16d PREDode Indian Indian	1997 Strack Price Chg 1d PESCORE 25" 25" Alban 122" 13 15 25" 25" Alban 122" 13 15 25" 25" Alban 123" 13 15 25" 25" Alban 15" 15" 15 25" 25" Alban 15" 15 15 25" 25" Strack 15" 15" 15" 25" 25" Campan 15" 15" 15" 15" 25"	6 447 353 December 440 11 464	7 30 5 Stanfor No. 2 20 2 20 2 5 5 5 6 6 7 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10	Prices are in sterling except where stated, as 20 per cant, as a percentage of the share price divided by leaf year's earnings per so other details: r Ex rights x Ex-dividend a La part of the index allows you to access real-air Exchange. Simply dail 0891 123 335, and prinsed next to sech share. To access the yone of the two-digit codes below. FTSE 100 - Real-time 00 Sterling 100	Stock Source: FT Information
	5 1 25 denot Blaco 12 3+7 2 20 3 3 3 4 2 2 20 3 3 3 4 2 2 20 3 3 3 4 2 2 20 3 3 3 4 2 2 2 20 3 3 3 4 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 3 3 3 3 4 2 2 2 3 3 3 3	330 280 Febru Pest 286  83 98 365 15 387 Febru Pest 286  84 38 365 365 15 387 Febru Pest 286  46 98 468 77 88 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5	Engineering Vehicles 10	### 30% honoyada 20% 1 25	33) 25 Wan 25 + 2 7 4 4 2 3 4 3 3 2 3 4 3 3 4 3 4 3 4 3 4 3	25 - 166 68 January 1925 66 07 603 25 - 17 Bah Res 12 6 07 603 25 - 17 Bah Res 12 7 25 - 17 Cospendid 75 75 75 27 7 Cospendid 75 75 75 28 27 27 Cospendid 75 75 75 28 27 27 Cospendid 75 75 75 28 27 27 27 27 27 28 27 27 27 27 28 27 27 27 27 27 28 27 27 27 27 27 28 27 27 27 27 28 27 27 27 27 27 29 20 20 20 27 27 20 20 20 27 27 20 20 20 27 27 20 20 20 27 27 20 20 20 27 27 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20	Market leaders: Top 20 voluments for the property of the prope	1000 Stock Vol'1000 Stock Vol'1000
i	907 594 1480 400 224 325 22 22 22 22 22 22 2	Diversaffied Industrials 3	296 1 209 Genear 256 1 42 13 46 4670 55 1 41 Genear 45 - 1455 67 1 2 2 1 1	6601 6641 3 GROVE 48 Levil 7 23 30 40 15 15 15 15 15 15 15 15 15 15 15 15 15	A CAN The Manual Country of the Cou	15 34, 154, 150, 150, 150, 150, 150, 150, 150, 150	27 155 Rady Bases 585 19 20 40 35 Selected 31 4 82 65 31 Selected 57 68 56 90 76 Selected 57 68 56 90 76 Selected 59 4 49 39 91 76 Selected 94 49 39 92 25 260 Selected 98 4 50 30 30 30 30 30 30 30 30 30 30 30 30 30		5
	25 Montand 67 x 31 22 386 27 32 Permont 30 x 32 386 28 27 32 Permont 30 x 32 386 29 32 Permont 47 37 x 17 33 38 38 38 38 38 38 38 38 38 38 38 38	285 225 March Sys 255 - 20 75 445 255 255 255 255 255 255 255 255 25	April Apri	of my s	avings and tments?	## 25 Lin Scri Br. ## 25 Lin Scri Br. #5 10 20 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10	468 200 38 Females 48) 28 386 386 387 487 488 388 388 388 388 388 388 388 388 388	2016 2016	3370285093日日企业打造内部的交通等级的
	221	20 22 Countilities 21 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2	22 1 3 1 1 1 1 1 2 2 2 2 3 1 3 1 1 1 1 2 3 2 3	TURN TO Trav TURN TO Trav	Tel and Money 1997	## 22 14 Protectifed ## 5 - 4 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2	20	15	766227386万里以初始公路400 756 55
•	## Managem ## ## ## ## ## ## ## ## ## ## ## ## ##	7 27 107 MILL 18	22	201 91, 73 CONTACTOR 201, 14 CONTACTOR 201, 15 C	201 207 The section 2074-45 22 12 22 25 25 25 21 21 21 21 21 21 21 21 21 21 21 21 21	200 200	2 2000 1997 707 Formester 201 1 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2	209 672 22 288 ArLandon 20 38 204 18 18 18 18 18 18 18 18 18 18 18 18 18	2000年2000年1000年1000年100日 - 100日本本の日本の日本の日本の日本の日本の日本の日本の日本の日本の日本の日本の日本の
	30 Agriculus	221 Advance	155 155	300 00	200 200	### 19 10 10 10 10 10 10 10	Support Services 22 22 22 23 23 24 24 24	## P. Sealed P. 266 266 267 266 267 266 267 267 266 267
	## ## ## ## ## ## ## ## ## ## ## ## ##	180 20 Constitut 27 4 89 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25 25	200 44 37 Newhalter 36 1 23 9 20 3 20 3 2 3 2 3 2 3 2 3 2 3 2 3 2 3 2	300 05	523 527 Feed on 1 5 5 5 7 7 7 7 7 7 7 7 7 7 7 7 7 7 7 7	7 272 286) 231 Marchael 29 28 28 287 283 281 Marchael 20 28 287 283 281 Marchael 20 28 28 28 28 28 28 28 28 28 28 28 28 28	469 005 500 SAHddhos 800 5 05 05 05 05 05 05 05 05 05 05 05 05	465 463 80 305 80 305 80 305 80 305 80 305 80 305 80 00 80 305 80 00 80 00 80 80 00 80 00 80 80 00 80 00 80 80 00 80 80 80 00 80 00 80 00 80 80 00 80 00 80 00 80 00 80 00 80

Wyatte

The state of the s

BRIGHTON HTP(NOW This Count Cited Sangariff

Pan Trai Resource Cooling to B. EDPICATION. The Party of the P in Conchant is 40 for the Annual Magnetic Annual Magnetic Magnetic

SELLEN MA

COLOR STATE OF THE SELECTION OF THE SELECTION

حكذا من الماحل

Wyattosaurus enjoys his final roar Even us Lord Wyatt of Weeford unveiled the 21st and final and unveiled the 21st and un as the chairman of the Tote yesterday, along the road in South Kensington, the curator of the Natural History Museum was making space for an important new exhibit. Move over tyrannosaurus, it is time to welcome the Wyattosaurus - the last of the great dinosaurs. The noble Lord did not go quietly, but then no-one expected him to. Having spent two decades telling everyone what a marvellous job he was doing for what was, by the time of his retirement, a six-figure salary, he was hardly like-neur and Desert King, and John

Magnier bought the three highest-priced loss during the first session of Keeneland's July Selected

Irish vet Demi O'Byrne, bought a filly by Gulch for $1,050,000

(£635,000) and two colts by Storm Cat, one for $1,000,000.

sister to stakes winners Al Sabin and Sabina. The $1,000,000

colt by Storm Cat out of Quite

The Gulch filly, who is out of the other for $975,000.

The group, represented by the Yearling Sales in Kentucky.

wards his successor. Peter to follow a path dictated by its Jones, Lord Wyatt generally assumed it had in fact been intended for him, and proceeded to answer. There could be no better illustration of the way in which the state-owned betting organisation has been run under Lord Wyatt, nor of the change of direction which many in racing now hope it will take. Wyatt and retiring have never before been words which sat easily together, and certainly, no-one could accuse him of having been anything but a handsly to miss out on his final on chairman. Sometimes for ond Storm Cat coft is out of the stakes-placed Aly Tigress.

Keeneland sold 91 yearlings in the session for $33,450,000, an average of $367,582, an increase of 22.9 per cent on last

Stud Management purchased 10 lots for $4,060,000 and there was a demand for fillies. The Cheve-

ley Park Stud splashed out

$1,475,000 for two fillies. The daughter of Mr Prospector out of the Group-winning and

Graded Stakes winner Heart Of

Sheikh Mohammed's Darley

year's opening session.

Tabor splashes out

A syndicate headed by Michael Rabor, the owner of Entrepreduced Makinanhonestbuck. The second Storm Cat colt is out of the

Sabin (by Lyphard), is a half-bulk ($950,000) was spent on a Honestly is a half-brother to Joy. Both are expected to be stakes winners Hot Novel and trained by Michael Stoute.

CATTERICK

2.15 Buzz 2.45 My Millie 3.20 Goretski 3.50 Jud-

GOING: Goud to Firm (Good in places - watering).
STALLS: if - outfurie: rest - inside.
DRAW ADVANTAGE: Low for 55 when stalls far side.

It Left-hand course, undusting and charp. Not suitable for the huge-strating house.

Oranse w NW of town on AB136. Darlington station 14m - bas

Oranse w NW of town on AB136. The state station 14m - bas

Oranse ABMSSHON: Club S 11; Tottersulls S7; Course

S2.50 (under 16s free into all enclosures). CAR PARE: Reserved

BLINKERED FEST TIME: Coral Island (4.50). WINNESS IN LAST SEVEN DAYS: Lend & Band (2.15) won at

Firson on Westreeday. LONG-DISTANCE RUNNERS: Gay Abandon (2.16) & Silver Foy (2.16) have been sem 215 miles by K MeAuliffe from Lambourn, Berk-

2.15 NOVICE MEDIAN AUCTION STAKES

(CLASS F) £3,300 added 2YO 7f

C(LASS F) 2.3,500 BORGED 2TO 7T

42 SUZZ (23) (D) C Thumbun 9 4 _______ Dean McKenne 1

21 LEND A HAND (7) M Johnston 9 4 ______ Weenen 1

CZAR WASS P Debru 8 12 ______ L Charnock 12

0600 MR FLAND SWITCH (80) D Michole 8 12 _____ Aus Gramen 1

080 ON THE MAT (12) J (O'Noil 8 12 ______ Aus Gramen 1

080 ON THE MAT (12) J (O'Noil 8 12 ______ France (3 10

00 DOUGES DEBME (12) Mr A Switchin 8 7 ______ S Sanding 7

00 GRY ABARDON (JA) K McAudie 8 7 _____ Figuria 2

00 SOUND DIV WEY COR SANDING 8 7 _____ Figuria 2

O GOOD ON YER (30) S. hettlevel 8.7. NECCA PRINCESS R VANIAGES 7....

£3,300 added 1m 4f

ter Önn

- 12 declared --BETTING: 5-4 Lond A Hand, 13-8 Surz, 6-1 Good Co. Yes; 16-1 Reclaritie, 14-1 bough Dream, 18-1 Western Lord, Say Abandon, 20-1 others

2.45 ST ANNE'S CLAIMING STAKES (CLASS F)

4 SINGLE MAIN (12) Files 4 9 12 Rispole 2
451045 DURBONS PRIST [13] (2) (3) Nirs M Rockey 5 9 8.A. Calbino 5
00020 FOX SPARROW (26) N Tinker 7 9 8 July 10 Nirs 8 8
0050-4 HAYANA HEIGHTS (5) (5) JI Eye 4 9 1 M Calbuder 7
00300 FOR TITLE (3) Mrs. 3 Crac 6 9 1 Mrs. 4 9 1 Mrs. 5 10 Nirs 5 10 Mrs. 5

- 8 declared -BETTING: 5-2 Durgams First, 11-4 My Mills, 4-1 Havens Heights, 6-1 Risky Rosa, 7-1 Petit Floza, 8-1 Fox Sparrow, 18-2 Single Man, 20-1 Lady Six

dy 4.20 Moon Fairy 4.50 Wildmoor opportunity. Indeed, whenever a question was directed toworse, the Tote has been forced toworse, the Tote has been forced troduction to the chairman's figreat deal more. chairman's unshakeable belief in his ability as a navigator. It often seemed the only opinions which mattered to him were his own, and those of whoever was Home Secretary when his contract came up for renewal, a process which continued on the nod even when he was well > forced to retire. The Tote is big business. It wasn't when I was appointed chairman by the Labour Government on 1 May 1976," was

FIRST SHOW

Sandown - 340

Cosmic Prince 9-1 8-1 7-1 9-1 Par To The Stans 9-1 9-1 10-1 8-1

Supercol 33-1 33-1 46-1 33-1 Each-may a quater the colds, places 1 2 3, 4 C - Cool, H - William HB, L - Lacturdes, Y - Total

DETENS: 11-10 Screen, 12-1 Ranney Hope, Johnyro, Skeing Imp. 14-1 Captain Caret, 20-1 Imp Express

3.50 COWSTAND BRIDGE SELLING STAKES

(CLASS G) £2,875 added 6f

9 20 JUDDY ($44 (O'Rely) 3 8.9 ______ O'Relly 3
10 1-0000 MORNING SPAR (Jd) W McFeour 3 8.4 _____ K Sind (5) 2
_____ 10 declared -____ K Sind (5) 2
_____ ETTING: 3-1 Spotted Engle, 7-2 Sens of Priority, 9-2 Juddy, 11-2 Docklands Carriage, 7-1 Sin Cottage, 10-1 Loch Style, 12-1 Sir Tackee, Heavy The Hands, 16-1 Challee, 20 Morning Star

4.20 MEDIAN AUCTION MAIDEN STAKES (CLASS F) £3,300 added 370 fillies 7f

BETTRIG: 18-31 Moon Faky, 5-5 Mystique Air, 8-1 Dalotres, 33-1 others A.50) BECKSIDE HANDICAP (CLASS E) £4,025

dded 3YO 1.m 41

me 8 11 ___ S Senders

C R L T 11-2 11-2 11-2 11-2 51 7-1 8-1 7-1 8-1 8-1 7-1 9-1

10-1 10-1 91 9-1 8-1 8-1 9-1 10-1

14-1 16-1 16-1 16-1 20-1 20-1 16-1 20-1 20-1 20-1 16-1 25-1 33-1 16-1 33-1 25-1

331 331 401 331 331 331 401 331

51 51 51 51 50 521 101 101 52 50 141 141 121 141 51 141 141 161 141 51 161 161 141 51 161 161 141 6 161 161 141 121 beyond the age at which a civil servant would have been nal angual statement, "It was a shambles on the edge of bank- deal of hope pinned to Peter ruptcy. Last year we made record profits."

Jones as he prepares to take over at Tote House on 1 August,

Well, up to a point. Yesterday's accounts do show a record profit, before the Tote's contribution to racing, of £12.8m, a rise of 21 per cent on the previous year. The problem, though, is that it is 21 per cent of what is, given the Tote's monopoly on a form of betting which guarantees they cannot lose, not very much. The return to racing last year was £8.7m. another record, but many be-

Hyperion's TV tips

SANDOWN
2.05: KHAWAFI, who impresse

when making all to win a 1m 2f Goodwood maiden by four lengths from Song Of Freedom, can follow up. Rokeby Bowl may

2.35: HELICON, a creditable three-quarters of a length second to Cap Juluca in a 1m 2f Newbury stakes race, should go well. Lord

Of Men is the obvious danger.

3.10: GOLD SPATS, disappoint ing last time, is fairly treated on his best form. Hornbeam is the

3.45: TUDOR ISLAND, half a length second to Siege Perilou here on his reappearance, will be pose most problems.

and in terms of personality at least, the contrast with his predecessor could hardly be more stark. Softly-spoken, thoughtful, a man who chooses his words with care, his natural style seems to be to manage through consultation rather than dictat.

As a result, there is a great

ing with the current mood.

Still, the honeymoon will not last long. Jones will need to deliver, not least on the Lottery- to the Wyattosaurus.

and thus much more in keeping board. "The ideal time to start it would be in 1998," Jones said, "but it depends on how quickly we can develop the idea and software." Whether the working concept is the fourrace Fourtuner which Lord Wyatt revealed to the apparent surprise of his managers earlier this year remains to be seen.

Jones may have had little chance to air his views yesterday, but it was still possible to sense that the Tote, which perhaps represents racing's best hope for a secure financial future, is about to enter a important new phase of development. Wave goodbyc

Raider lost in France

Romanov, ridden by John Reid, finished third, a short-head and a length behind André Fabre's Kirkwall and Rajpoute, in the £33,670 Group Two Prix Eugene Adam over 10 furlongs at Saint-

Cloud yesterday. Feter Chapple-Hyam's Derby third raced in fourth, close behind Kirkwall, the 13-10 favourite, while Rajpoute set a strong pace. Romanov was about a length behind Kirkwall coming into the straight but, hard though be tried, he could never close the gap. Kirkwall got up on the line. He was ridden by Olivier Peslier.

A Ladbrokes punter in Bolton is keeping faith with the

Aidan O'Brien-trained twoyear-old King Of Kings, who was beaten at the Curragh on Sunday, Ladbrokes yesterday laid the customer a bet of

RICHARD EDMONDSON NAP: Hombeam (Sandown 3.10) NB: Midyan Blue (Sandown 3.40)

E75,000-E500 (E500 at 150-1) on King Of Kings to win the 2,000 Guineas and Derby in 1998. Bishops Court will miss the Stewards' Cup at Goodwood on

2 August. Resuits, page 23 3.30 EAST COAST MAIDEN STAKES (CLASS D)

£4,900 added 3YO 7f

4.00 TUNSTALL STAKES (CLASS C) £73,251 added 3YO fillies 7f

4.30 FILBY BRIDGE RATED HANDICAP (CLASS B) £11,650 added 7f

BETTING: 7-2 Turblewood Ridge, Yorkie George, 4-1 Shock Value, 6-1 | 5.00 | REPPS HANDICAP (CLASS D) £4,900 | added 1m 3f 101yds | 10302 URGENT SWRT 89 A Janua 4 9 13 | 5 Downe 9 | 10305 | BURNING (USA) (329 W Hooges 5 9 11 | M Hills 2 | 22352 | MESHER SEMENTING (12) D Adultion 4 9 75 Wildowsth 6

155022 WHAT A FUS 8 60644 SARBARON 9 546-6 SUIVEZ [11]

BETTING: 3-1 Leading Not using Generation, Serbergh

(USA) (123) (USA) (123) (SS (14) 8 H (16) P Hen (16) (Ms N (16) P dec	Magaulty 7.7	10 4	Fentos ? R 186 8 Mortos 1 D Figgs 3
, 7-1 Blocks	ICAP (CL/ Im (Roun	ASS D)	or's Core,

DONCASTER 7.30 BALLEYS 1. -31210 CAN CAN LADY (19) (3) (35) M Johnston 3 9 12... I we want is 2 -00210 SUMERION BOY (19) (3) P Caker 7 9 7 ... M Day 14 4 -40040 SUALTINCH (4) (5) R Hollinshead 4 9 6 ... L Destin 2 0 05154 FF TERM (17) (6) Mrs. J Ranssian 5 9 3 ... J Festins 2 0 140460 CHILD (18) (6) E Addon 5 9 3 ... J Festins 2 0 140460 CHILD (18) (7) E Addon 5 9 3 ... J Festins 2 0 140460 CHILD (18) (7) E Addon 5 9 3 ... J Festins 2 0 0 140460 CHILD (18) (7) E Addon 5 9 3 ... J Festins 2 0 0 140460 CHILD (18) (7) E ADDON (18) (18) E ADDON (6.30 Alconleigh 7.00 Cross The Border 7.30 Kass Alhewi 8.00 Intikhab 8.30 One Singer 9.00 Kristal

Lett-hand, pear-simped course with 1 mile straight.
Course is & of town off the A638 (M18 Jets 3 & 4). Bus link from Bonesser Central spation. ADMESSION: Châ £14; Grandstand £8; Family Enclosure &3 (under-16s free all enclosures). CAR PARE: Free. VISORED FIRST TIME: Mungo Park (7,00). WINNERS IN LAST SEVEN DAYS: Eristal Brocks (8,00) won nt Folkestone on Wednesday. LONG-DISTANCE KUNNERS: Groom's Gordon (8.00) & Industriable (8.00) have been sent 221 miles by J Dunlop from Artundel.

6.30 GRESLEY STAKES (CLASS C) SACY BETTING: 5-2 Mission, 12-4 Intildes Pearline House, 8-1 Groun's Con-

8.30 EBF VYNER NOVICE STAKES (CLASS D) £4,550 added 270 5f 1128 ONE SINGER (28) (0) M Johnston 9 2 1 Wearest 40 BARRELBO (16) J | O'Neil 8 12 2 A Cultuma 0 JOCOMOBILER (18) Mes | Manselon 9 12 1 Fortune 0 ULIE'S CHUCKLE | Gloer 6 12 N Day

– 7 deciared – 1980: ovene Titanic, 2-1 One Singer, 4-1 Perfect Peach, 12-1 Joci ler, 14-1 Olle's Checkie, 20-1 Barrelbio, 25-1 Suart Prince

5 80-801 906/098E (20) J Ourico 3 8 12 _____ L Dettod 6 00-90 ATMAR (USA) (15) P Walnyn 3 8 3 ____ R Danley 7 5/0311 CASHMINE (2) 15/05 8 2 (500 ____ T Verificates - 7 deathered - 8E778NG: 13-8 Injuritables, 7-2 Mintel Breeze, 11-2 Top, 6-1 Cashmirle 8-1 Atmats. 10-1 Ordelped, 16-1 Exactly

YARMOUTH HYPERION

1.50 Ajaebah 2.25 Royal Rights 2.55 Prima Verde 3.30 Blueygreen 4.00 Meshhed 4.30 Tumbleweed Ridge 5.00 Urgent Swift GOING: Good.

STALLS: Straight course — stands side; round course — inside.

DRAW ADVANTAGE: None.

Left-hand course, level and fair.

Course is N of town on Al49. Yarmouth sustion Lm. ADMISSION: Cabs £12 (CAPS £11); Tenersals £8.60 (OAPs £7.50); Family and course exclosure £4.50 (OAPs £3.50). CAR PARE; £1.

BLINKERED FIRST TIME: Zaresaki (4.30).

WINNERS IN LAST SEVEN DAYS: Greatemation (1.50) won

24 Ayr on Mointhy; Tumbleweed Eddge (4.30) wan at Newmarke ten Timeshaw.

WINNERS AN INC.

24 Apr on Monindry, Tumpleweed Ridge (4.30) won at persumments Timpsday.

LONG-DISTANCE EDNNERS: Elsseygreen (3.30) has been sent 203 miles by P Chapple-Hyam from Manton, Witshire. 1.50 UPTON SELLING STAKES (CLASS G) £3,000 added 1m 2f

— 6 declared — BETTING: 7-4 Soda Pop, 3-1 Shiebell Hiss, 4-1 Guesaffmation, 8-1 Ajea-bab, 8-1 Northern Touck, 10-1 Blacer's Buby 225 EBF ACLE MAIDEN STAKES (CLASS D) £4,600 added 2YO 6F

FRETTON M Tomplers 9 0. Diggs 4
HEADMANTER W Hages 9 0 M Miles
HOYAL BREITS D Loder 9 0 M Control
O STONE OF DESTRAY (SS) B Marken 9 0 M Telebott 8
28 JUSCIELLEY (SS) C Dayer 8 9 M Variety 3
PRINCESS OLIVIA M Ruen 8 9

- S displanet -BETTINE: 11-10 Royal Rights, 4-1 Headbuster, 5-1 Salantie, 8-1 Pitton, 10-1 Princess Offrie, 12-1 Stone Of Destiny, 16-1 Dangine, 20-1 Justibilia 2.55 HORSEY HANDICAP (CLASS D) £4,900 added fiffies & mares 1m

0-0526 SUES RETURN (27) (CD) A Jave 5 10 0 ...
0-11 PRIMA VERDE (18) (D) L Camén 4 10 0 ...
0-10 RAMIA (S2) (RF) R Americon 3 9 2 ...
00:40 OUR WAY (18) (D3) C Bellem 3 9 0 ...
0-33 BLOWING AWAY (28) M Templant 3 9 0 ...
40:256 MISS RWIENA ROSE (13) G Wing 38 10 ...
64-000 BADGER BAY (85 C Ower 4 8 3 ...

3.20 LOW GREEN HANDICAP (CLASS D) £4,900 added 5f 3.20 LOW GREEN HANDICAP (CLASS D) £4,900 added 5f 6.5410 SWAN AT RENALTY (8) (0) C Smgh 4 9 6.... P Feeting (3) 2 B 000010 RANSEY HOPE (26) (0) C Smgh 4 9 5..... J Wester 8 V Pent, 14-1 Zannbay, 20-1 Tribal Mischief

.....F Lynch 2 | Fanning 3

BRIGHTON HYPERION 6.20 High Gain 6.50 Senorita Matikta 7.20 Cape Pigeon 7.50 Rising Dough 8.20 Who's That Man

GMING: Farm (waterer).

ST. LLS: Insule 1957 Par III & Im M - conside.

ST. LLS: Insule 1957 Par III & Im M - conside.

DR.W. ADVANTAGE: Low numbers best over fif & Gl.

Left-hand, U-shaped course, undulating and sharp

SUMMERS E. of them. Follow skippows from now centre. Dephase

SUMMERS II (fast service from Landon, Victora). ADMISSION:
Chib 3 L. I as comparate maker 16. Gree; Tattersalls 56; Silver Ring
34 Inv. 5 I per Cept. CAR PARK: Free

BLINKERRD FIRST TIME: Keen Waters (8.29).

WINNERS IN LAST SEVEN DAYS: Esting Dough (7.50) won at [Jun on Weinesday. Open on Wednesday.

LONG-DISTANCE RUNNERS: Seamus (7.20) has been sent 205

note: bee 100 from Bornstonic, Devroy.

6.20 MEDIAN AUCTION MAIDEN SKY (CLASS F) £3,300 2YO 57 59908 1.1

ASSEAN DAWN R FORMAT 8 11. Damo Orticili 5
GREEN DOLPHAN WG M Turner 8 11. Damo Orticili 5
300 MIGH GAIN (38) P Hosting 8 11. Paul Entirery 3
100 MISS SCOTTER (18) A P Jones 8 11. T Sporities 4
200 SANS RIVALE (28) B Mortan 8 11. B Doyle 6
31 SHANTH (19) (8) P Mortan 8 11. D Hostind 2
32 SANS RIVALE (28) B Mortan 8 11. D Hostind 2
33 SHANTH (19) (8) P Mortan 8 11. D Hostind 2
34 SHANTH (19) (8) P Mortan 8 11. STANDARD 10 Hostind 2
35 SHANTH (19) (8) P Mortan 8 11. STANDARD 10 Hostind 2
36 Georged 37 SHANTH (19) (8) P Mortan 8 11. STANDARD 10 Hostind 2
38 STANDARD 10 Hostind 2 Hosting 10 Hostind 2
38 STANDARD 10 Hosting 10 Host

10 deciated 1 10 m recent Lis 3 7 10 M Adams 4 V 10 deciated 1 1 mm https://doi.org/10.100/mm. 100 mm. 100 mm.

WHITE MAWK SELLING STAKES SKY

(CLASS G) 52,875 added 1m

(CLASS G) 52,875 added 1m

Remine 5-2 Always Grace, 114 Partiests, 3-1 Salto Factors, 7-2 Constitution of Cupe Michigan (21) (CLOS) (

-10 deciared -BETTING: 8-11 Cape Pigeon, 4-1 Without Privada, 3-2 Chople, 10-1 Ju-bine Scholer, 12-1 Scenario, 16-1 Halta Sunskine, Hawaii Storat, 50-1 7.50 SOUTH DOWNS HANDICAP (CLASS D) £4,900 added 1m 4f 1 2131-5 Pitz [23] (D) (BP) Louren 4 10 0... R Franch (S) 6
2 (6-152 CANTON VENTURE (29) (CD) 5 Woods 5 9 9... W Ryan 2
3 (30035 WAREEL (USQ) (LQ) 5 Woods 5 9 9... W Ryan 2
4 5-235 VANAEEL (USQ) (LQ) 5 Woods 5 9 7... M Roberts 7
5 -04621 RESING DOUGH (7) (C) 61 Moore 5 9 1 (Seq. M Wighten 5
6 00-010 MR RESINGABLE (24) (CD) R Alexant 6 8 13... T Quinn 1 B
7 33-107 DANCES (24) 9 Has 3 9 9... D Abeliand 3
8 -7 decired 8 EFTING 3-1 Rising Dough, 7-2 M Repuring, 9-2 Carton Venture, 5-1
Pice, 6-1 Zinzai, 8-1 Wakeel, 10-1 Davorid

8.20 TELSCOMBE HANDICAP (CLASS SET

7.00 APPRENTICE SERIES HANDICAP (CLASS E) £4,500 added 5f

RETTING: 3-1 No Light, 5-2 Appearance Money, 6-1 Verde Lune, 13-2 Kunnari King, 10-2 Alpine Mist, 12-1 others 8.10 NOVICE HURDLE (CLASS E) £2,925 added 2m 4f or mr or mr or mr production of the control of the 9.10 STANDARD OPEN NH FLAT RACE (CLASS H) £1,500 added 2m

ACFEST - SOUTHERWARDLESSPACES (720 to 120 to EFITONC 3-10 My Love, 4-1 Southernest unputch, 5-1 Salts Legisled, 11-2 Gurol's Dresson, 7-1 Legisled, 11-2 Gurol's Dresson, 7-1 Legisled, 18-1 Lump The Lights, 12-1 Bullion, 14-1 Zellion, 16-1 Childy Leaf SOON COME (USA) 5 11, 4... 05-0 BEACON LANE (7) 4 11 1 . JONES CARADOC 4 11 1 ROYAL MENT (81) 4 11 1 _____R Derivoody ALMNYS A PLEASURE 6 10 13 _____B Powell

2.35 Helicon 3.10 Gold Spats

HYPERION 3.40 Tudor Island (nb) 4.10 Commander Charlie 4.40 Faith Alone

3.10 Gold Spats

4.40 Faith Alone

GOING: Good to Farm (Good in places on straight course, watering).

STALLS: Straight course - stands side; reat - inside.

DRAW ADVANTAGE: High for 3: tow for 7 to 1m.

Eligia-hand course. Separate self 3: track.

Course is on A307, 4m 5 of Kingston. Esber statum (service from Landon, Water-loo) adjuins course. ADMISSION: Unb 5:15, Junior Club (17 - 21yrs) 5:13; Grandstand 5:10; Park 5:4. CAR PAREE, 22 in members (Blote Lanc), remainder free.

LEADING TRAINCESS WITH KUNNESS: 8 Hanson - 37 winness from 3:37 remover as success ratio of 12.5% and a loss to a 5:1 level stake of 5:47.41; J B M Goaden - 22 winners, 107 runners, 30.6%, +50.00; M R Stoote - 23 winners, 13:4 runners, 16.5%, -5:0.35;

11. Denilep - 20 winners, 108 runners, 18.5%, -5:20.0.

LEADING JOCKETS: Par Eddery - 55 wins, 255 rides, 21.0%, -5:4.47; L Dettori - 44 winners, 21.4 rides, 20.5%, -5:3.6%; T Quinn - 27 winners, 301 rides, 13.4%, -5:48.91; M Roberts - 36 winners, 174 rides, 14.9%, -5:2.78.

Roberts - 36 winners, 174 rides, 14.9%, -5:2.78.

WINGERS IN LAST SEVEN DATE; None.

LONG-DESTANCE KUNNESS: Fly To The Stars (3.10) has been sent 2:9 wiles by M Johnston from Middlehum, North Yorkshire.

ROKERY BOWL should have won more often than he has, but he does need fairly preces noting as he showed at York five summers ago when he swooped past his for reaks over two furlongs out, but then had fattle more to give when challenged by Mezsen. Interesprey, his prespots nor that year had been in Goodwood's Tote Gold Triptiny when a next second to Pistudsku, who was receiving a pound. He has time redutably several times since and Franko Detroin knows him well, although John Reid was the man on top when Rokely Soult an such to Zeraleska in the Old Newton Cup lest time. The ground is spotone and this must be regarded as a sound chance for lan Bolding's the-year-old despite the optential held by the two three-year-olds and the lightly-raced four-year-old Smart Play, Technicolour is best wetched after his soft-ground win the is by Randow Questu in a Chepstow maken that October, as is theward's four-length Goodwood madel will as the month was a shade fiathering because the opposition lockeys gave him for space.
Still, he is on the upgrade and should be effective over the longer tips. Smart Play, a habbrother to New Certury, has been highly tried since his Thirst maiden win 14 months ago and not too much should be read into his comeback defeat at Salsbury where he may there disshed the besting ground. He has joined Lord Humpighon from Just Cecil. Forza Figlio is one to keep on the right side of and the mp should suit him well. His night in the Hum Cup should him to be in good order. mercery partial, contaid have won more often than he has, but he does need fairly pre

1995: No corresponding too:

FORM GUIDE

LIDED OF MEN looked in good order in a home workout last Finday when, partnered by Fignike Detton, he covered seven furiongs with Decorated Hero. When this classy horse won a Donosster conditions event (Im) 17 days ago, he was running for the first time in 20 months effer fracturing a pelvis and, though he did not impress in the paddock, he travelled well in the race and beat Kola Sunnse and Armah Ayeah by four lengths and the same despite tending to flesh his tail, He won the final time of his four journier stars, culminatering in a Group One success in the Prix De La Salamendre at Longhamp. There are bound to be a few misgavings over him still but the extra two furiongs should bring about imprement. Helicon will be better for his respice-arace effort when second to Cap Julica over 10 furiongs at Newbury and it is worth bearing in mind, despite his subsequent training troubles, that he won the good Newmarket maiden (1m) in September 1995, which featured horses of the calibre of Shearint; and Committal. Helicon was then trained by Henry Cecil, who is represented by Ismarros, the winter of a 10-furiong Windsor make the work they are a substanced a time turn of foot to beat the Stoute, Gosden and Loder representatives. Perhaps he will need a his more expenience, but is marce promises to be well above average. Second to him at Windsor was Silence Religins, who went no to take a 10-furiong Ponserman maden. He may not have beaten much but it was straightforward and he ments this Chance in better grade.

3.10 HONG KONG JOCKEY CLUB TROPHY HANDICAP C4

RED ROBBO has gone up a very fair-looking Bib for his Royal Hurt. Cup victory. This race is a contrasting list in as much as he has a band to negotiate, but non-much should not be read into his first-time-out flop on the round course (100) at York in May because he reportedly lock a shoe that day. Red Robbo stil has the scope to improve. This is his favourse is ground and his No 18 draw is a borus. Fourth in the Hurt Cup was Dennoting longer, a solid rendicepper with Frankle Detton's help and sure to go well. Lonely Leader, fifth at Royal Ascot, put in a both attempt from stall 30 and was bearen title more than two lengths. He had Gold Spatia is short-head behind when second to Autumn Cover in Kempton's Aubilies Handicap in early May and that was another good effort under 10st. Gold Spatia is 9th worse in with Lonely Leader on that spring form. Another Hurt Cup correstant was Boold Words, who was one of the leading fancies but trailed in 25th. He has had a month to freshen up and looked a classy sort when beating Handsome Ridge at Ropon first time up. Perhaps the Fedder Stales (fifth to Folms) eight days later came too soon, but Bold Words can wat one of these big handicaps and the one big worry is his No 1 draw. Fly To The Stars, warrier of the Britannia Stales at Royal Ascot, is rated better than hand-cap class by Mark Johnston and though this is no ordinary handicap, the booking of Pat To The Start, wriver of the Britishnia Stakes at Hoyal Ascot, is raised deter train namina-cap class by Mark Johnston and though this is no arthropy handcap, the booking of Pet Eddery is a pointer. George Duffield comes in for the ride on Cosmic Prince, who won well over the Essom seven last manth but is, according to his trainer, a neurous type. The insishing his could be too much for this free-niner. Kamis Markli rectors Alpussitianats to have a great chance, but a sever could be Henry Wolton, perhaps the pich of the Hen-ry Cacil pair and given a steady build-up to this race. He ran well here first time up in April when dividing Romanov and Korru and is more the finished smole now, having come good at Nottingham last time.

ESTINE: 7-2 Index Island, 9-2 Percy Island, 5-1 Elmoy, 6-1 Equal Science, Flagger Ven-berg, Hazureit, 8-1 Shining Dancer, 10 -1 Midgen Bloe, Silently 1998: No corresponding tons

Secorgia Verdumy is interesting off her current mark, but seems happiest in the soft and BINSEY is a far from fortom hope, despite carrying 10st on his first Flat start for 636 days. He was pulled up at Auteuil 18 days ago, but won the Martell Austree hardle or April, upsetting Malee A Stand and Large Action, and he should have the pace for this test against mainly exposed handicappers, even on the heely ground. Bouchtine Court, who perhaps needed his latest run after spreading a plate in the Chester Cup, helps give Rigg Alechurst a strong heart. Tudor belands should be in his element and is a fresh horse, his only other run this season being over the course and distance last month when second to Siege Perfous. Steeding has not won since 1995 when with tan Baiding, but is shaping well for felf King.

Selections: SMSEY

ANDOLE TRAINE (23) (The Servicinity Partership E Dunitin 9 0 OUISDURCENS (1834) (3) (Bemart Cover Bootstock Teading 150 P Cole PRODURCEN (1844) (3) (Bemart Cover Bootstock Teading 150 P Cole PRODURCEN (1844) (Burnes Id R

20-1 others 1996: jste Of Man 2 9 () T Quinn 11-10 tev (? Cole) drawn (9) 11 ran SAEEDAH, a sister to Buleate and a half-saster to several other winners, including Zenzalabith, should give a good account on her debut. Cetsourcing, who ran into Crasse Member of the property of the Hamilton before a Newmarker fourth to Haami, must be reclaimed with along with Continentee Charles, second to Conacts at Goodwood and sure to appreciate the extra furiong, Raider ran on strongly when fifth to The Clow-Worm in the Kirs Maden 176 at Newmarker and is a sure future writer.

Selection: SAEEDAH

DETTINCE 7-2 Class Chief, 4-1 Willow Date, 5-1 February, 8-1 Miscellen Led, White Emir, 9-1 Hote Rottenss, 10-1 Hell Tone, 12-1 Lard High Admirel, 14-1 Master Of Passion, Taylota, 16-1 Dande Flyer 1998: Mage Mail 3 9 8 Martin Dwyer (5) 14-1 (J Eustace) diawn (10) 12 ran

Figure 1.1 A Martin Dwyer (5) 14-1 U Eustack drawn (10) 12 km

Figure Curible

Whittow DALE is being kept busy, but it is impossible to faut her end this stiff five will sure. She kept on well when that to Plaiet d'Annour over the Epsom ax lest thre and had run home five lengths clear of 13 hads over the Windson six previously when Fields Alone, susbequent cosy whener of a str-furione hendicap in softish ground at Yarmouth, was a one-peeed fifth. Clear Chief holds White Emir on recent courte form benind My Best Veteratine and is threatening to win abon, while Milliander Lad did not get the best of runs in the Lingfield handscap won by Bowden Rose so, days back, Kitculien Lad has plenty of pace and his probable living for the staff five makes him a look a solid each-way candidate.

WORCESTER

6.10 Couchant 6.40 Totally Yours 7.10 Searchilght 7,40 Verde Luna 8.10 Salls Legend 8.40 Hurricane Blake 9.10 Regal Absence

GMNG: the officers beneficially designed to the state of the following running to the state of t here 3.1  Al. Tenternik, 3.5  Al. Louise, 3.5 to the control of CAR PARK: Free Chem of Bring (6.10), Appearance Money 1. (10), Salis Legend (3.10), Websit Legend (4.10), Websit Legend (4.10), Websit Legend (4.10), Control of Co

with the first property in the property of the 6.10 SELLING HANDICAP HERDLE (CLASS G) £2,375 added 2m 4f

271 5: FIVE FLACE (17) 9.20 - R. Source 274 (1) EDWARD SERVICE (17) (3) 10 11 11. I Junios 245 MECARNE BAY (153) 7.11 (1) ... R. Johnson 4.10 4. SALMAN (26) 11 11 0 ... Mr R. Thornton (5)

6.40 NOVICE HURDLE (CLASS E) 52,925 added 2m

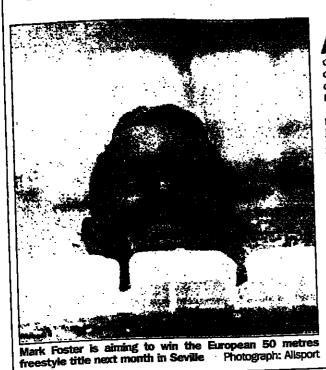

7.10 HANDICAP HURDLE (CLASS E) £2,925 added 2m 4f 7.4-11 SEAGGHURHT (18) (CD) 9.12 D ... W Mornton 2004 SHEETIF (28) (CD) 9.12 D ... W Mornton 2004 SHEETIF (28) (CD) 6.12 D ... C. Liberatifu 3011- PRISHIN BLIFE (SD) (D) 6.11 9... R Damondy 607-51. APACHE PARK (BLS) (CT) (In 4.10.4 ... T Boy 40445 CLEARWINE, MERS (LOT) 7.10.0 ... Geny Lymns 089-05 9800CENT (CEDERS (7) 8.10.0 ... Sarphi 6 declared ... Sarphi 9st 100. BETTING: 13-8 Persion Ellin, 5-4 Searchlight, 5-1 Apache Park, 13-2 Shadif, 10-1 Cilimonal News, 14-1 Innocess George

7.40 NOVICE HANDICAP CHASE (CLASS E) £4,075 added 2m 1 606-23 NO LIGHT [LIS] DI 30 11 10 ... I. Herwey
2 SPOL-V ALPNE 185T (27) (27) 5 11 7 Michael Brognam (2)
3 423-23 VERDE LINA (7) 5 11 4 Michael Brognam (2)
4 04230 FRASET CAREY (28) (3) 5 11 3 ... A Journal
5 3294 GRAND ARPHANES FRISS (7) 7 7 11 2. Brount
6 3603 ALDSAEL (67) (9) 10 11 1 ... V Statlery
7 45476 TOTAL ASSET (108) 7 10 8 ... Any Lycus
8 (351-6 APPEARMENT MONEY (7) (2) 6 10 9A Michael 8
9 5002-9 REMARKI NONEY (7) (2) 6 10 9A Michael 8
10 2229-F THE YORKEL (2) 11 10 6 ... P Hersley (3) 8
11 597-21 JOSENSO (52) 9 10 0 ... B Printin
12 0609- MISTRESS FUDOR (20) 5 10 0 ... T J Microby
13 2/RG2 CARDAN (23) 11 10 0 ... B Powell
14 Allerium weight 10:1 Tue hardings weights Johney 9er 10th, Mistress Tudor 35 10th, Cantan 9er 70.

8.40 HANDICAP CHASE (CLASS F) £3,475 added 2m 7f 110yds

ALWAYS A PLEASURE 6 10 13.... CASTO'S VERDACT 5 10 13.... PARKA'S WEM 6 10 13.... WHILD'S FINEST 5 10 13....

Foster finds new formula in race for Seville conquest Christie and Colin Jackson at their track sessions in Cardiff sport in this country. Surround-fter 12 years of interna-tional swimming, Mark Foster has just worked out how to swim one length front crawl. It is a frustrating paradox of sprinting that the harder you try, the slower you swim.

At an international meet in the south of France last mouth, Foster was amazed to discover he could swim the 50 metres half a second faster simply by relaxing, rather than thrashing it from the start. He will get his final chance to experiment at the National Championships this week at Crystal Palace and finding that extra half a second will be vital if Foster is to win the European Championships in Seville in August.

The five-times world record holder in a short course (25-metre) pool is expecting to add the ropean to his Commonwealth title over the long course 50metre pool. "If the same tactics work this week, I know I can win gold in Seville," Foster said.

James Parrack meets British swimming's bad boy turned golden boy preparing for this week's National Championships

If his swimming has now become a race of two halves, then so, too, has his life. Having successfully separated him-self from the image of the bad boy of British swimming, the 27year-old looks back on his troubled teenage years with ambivalence. A sprinting phenomenon since his early teens, the world's fastest junior was breaking the rules and records with alarming regularity. He was in trouble with everyone and everything until taking a time-out in 1991, returning to compete in the Olympic final in Barcelona the next year.

"It was a long time ago, Foster says. "It was all just part of growing up and showed I had a bit of character. But then I swam in the final of the Olympics after practically no training."
That is the talent of the man.

With the growing-up process finishing at a colossal 6ft 7in, the revised character is the model professional, who now chooses to live life in the fast lanes of international swimming. The bad boy has become the glamour boy of British swimming.

Like Foster, the sport has changed dramatically over the last 10 years and 27 is no longer considered old for a swimmer. The changes are wholly because of money. "In swimming now, you can definitely make a good living," he says, and he intends to carry on doing so beyond the year 2000. "Prize-money is increasing all the time, but you have to win titles as well to attract sponsors."

With two major sponsors, Adidas and Celinet, providing a basic income, the rest is made from appearance and prize-money. Always seeking to maximise the quality of life, his successes have enabled him to enjoy fast cars and expensive clothes, an image envied by most other swimmers. Foster enjoys the benefits of professionalism and sees himself leading the way for others to follow. With Lottery money now, the élite swimmer can make £20,000, which can double or triple with prize-money and sponsorship, Foster said. "I used to get a kick from seeing Adrian Moorhouse driving around in a Porsche. If he had won the Olympics and was driving a Fiesta, no one would bother. When the sport is attractive and exciting, kids will work harder to get to the top."

In his own search to become the best sprinter in the world. Foster joined Linford before the Atlanta Olympics last year. "They would warm up and do one 200 metres flat out. every half an hour. It is 20 seconds of intense work, with a very long rest. The 200 metres on the track is the equivalent of the 50 metres in the pool, and now I train the same way.

"Even if I only swim 30 kilometres a week [most international swimmers will swim twice this distance] it's going to be high quality, mentally and physically. and so I need to have proper rest to be able to keep doing it well. I believe you have got to train at the pace you are going to race at, or else you are just teaching your body to swim slow."

It is a surprise to find Foster training seven days a week at the élite training village at Bath University – the first project to be completed with Lottery money. Swimming is one of its pri-ority sports and the programme

letes are at the centre of a comprehensive, scientific support programme, which is why Fos-ter is there: "I like to be around positive, motivated people all the time, and here I am training with some of the best in the world."

With team-mates like Olympic silver medallist Paul Palmer, it is easy for Foster to remain focused. But despite his confident demeanour, Foster cannot do it on his own and needs the support of a commit-ted coach. Ian Turner is the head coach at Bath and chief coach to the British team, and has the rare ability to keep Foster in line. Lan keeps me very motivated and will give me his attention all the time. If a coach is not going to bother, then why should I?"

It will be a confident Foster who, if he stays relaxed this week, will race to become European champion in Scrille.

THE 126TH OPEN: Ayrshire suits Montgomerie's game but provides a host of painful memories for a former champion

Monty's motto is home rule

A strange thing hap-pens when Colin Montgomerie packs his bags and heads for the Open Championship. No one has proved that an alien spaceship abducts and replaces him with a clone every July but they might as well do for all the use he is. Four missed cuts in five years would not be something to boast about by any professional golfer but when you are regarded, quite rightly, as one of the best players in the world, that record is little short of a gross embarrassment. To describe Monty's record as mediocre would be to run the risk of being charged with gross sycophancy.

Which is extraordinary considering what he does across the Atlantic. Put "US" in front of Open and the Scot is in contention (two seconds and a third); leave the word on its own and the only thing he is in is a mostly by the likes of the mefast car heading away from the dia and the more people mencourse on Friday night. Hot tion it, the worse it gets. So we

So you could say Monty, 34, is under the weight of failed promise this week. Years of being built up as Scotland's brave only to fall on his own claymore are reason enough for a decent show at Royal Troon this week but he is, to risk an outbreak of singing, coming home. If he cannot perform well here then he might feel inclined to give up the Open as a lost cause.

Montgomerie, whose father James is secretary at Royal Troon, grew up alongside the course and his house was about

The Scot is confident he can bury the hoodoo that has dogged his efforts to win the Open, Guy Hodgson reports "Immediately after Conwell done"."

Montgomerie himself seems mystified by his failure at the Open although he agrees he has left his best form behind at the Scottish Open (which used to be played the preceding week) before now. He is not not wholly comfortable when the wind blows, which is the usual condition at a links course, either and there is also a chance that expectation he places on himnullified by his 18 years of play-self at the US Open.

types of conditions.

150 yards from the 18th green, gressional I was disappointed, yes," he said, "but looking at it so if local knowledge has any bearing this week then he will be afterwards I took a very positive at a significant advantage. Furview of the tournament. That's thermore he is playing at what why I've played well since. I didn't lose; Ernie Els won and he describes as an unprecedentedly high level. Britain, Scotland and Troon expect and, all credit to him for that. That was as good as I can play and frankly, they have every right to. if someone beats you all you can do is shake his hand and say

"I would be under more pressure if I wasn't playing well." Montgomerie, whose sole light in a murky Open past is an eighth place at nearby Turnberry three years ago, said. "I feel I'm capable of doing very well here and I've looked forward to it since it was announced the Open was coming here seven years ago.

"I don't feel under any pressure in any shape or form. The word 'pressure' is mentioned it could be two golfers just avoid the word from now

Almost by habit, Montgomerie is at the Open Championship fresh from a good performance in America. He finished second to Ernie Els in the US Open at the Congressional last month but rather than brood over another near miss his form since has been better than satisfactory. A closing-round 62 won him the Irish golf of my 10-year pro career and obviously I'm hopeful Open 10 days ago while his 10th place at Loch Lomond on Satabout performing better than I've done in the past at this toururday did not drain him as nament. I know what I'm doing much as full-blooded conround this golf course. It's just tention would have done. a matter of trying to go out there and prove it. If he does he will fulfil an ambition that has stirred within him since he walked past Royal Troon - which would not let him on the course until he was 16 to play at the the neighbouring course of Portland. "It would be the ultimate sporting thrill," he said. "It's something any child growing up in Ayrshire would look forward to. "I try not to think what it would be like coming up the 18th with a clear lead on Sunday but it would be the best feeling I could ever think about. This, to me, is home. It is where my family are, where my wife is from. This is it as far as major championships are concerned and it will be until it probably comes back here in seven years

Now, if the real Monty can pes or conditions.

"I'm playing possible the best Happy landings: A 747 heading for Prestwick flies over Tiger Woods (bottom left) at Royal Troon yesterday

Price's poignant past

If anyone ought to get the heebie-jeebies entering Royal Troon it is Nick Price. Missing the cut eight years ago hardly endeared himself to the place, but a grislier reminder lurks in his mind, writes Guy Hodgson. In 1982 the Open was for his taking. Driving up Troon's 13th, the par-four Burmah, the field was in his wake and the claret jug was heading for his lips. Four dropped shots later and Tom Watson had taken the fourth of five titles. "I didn't win this Championship, the American said, "I had it given to me." Price, 40, recalled that fall from grace yesterday, safe in the knowledge that the damage done that Sunday was repaired by an Open win at Turnberry three years ago. "I remember bit after that

Needless to say I learnt from that experience. I don't believe I would be the player or person I am now if I'd won so maybe it was a blessing. I think if I'd never won the Open I'd have kicked myself for the rest of my life but seeing as I did it in '94 it puts the second place in a higher position."

The Zimbabwean has won three majors since, including a finish of eagle, birdie, par to overhaul Jesper Parnevik at Turnberry and erase once and for all the image of a choker. He is among the favourites this week, although as most of the leading contenders have arrived in Ayr with good golf dripping out of them that is not necessarily a chie to the destinecessarily a clue to the destination of the title.

was hard to stomach for a little said, "there were a handful of people who really had an opportunity to win. Now there are 15 people who have a realistic chance of winning if they play their good, solid game plus another 40 guys who come into the Guys do not lose tournaments as much as win them. You shoot one or two under on the back nine and they come flooding past you. You've got to shoot three or four under." As for his own chances, he describes them as pretty good now that cortisone injections have helped repair an injured shoulder. "The only thing I would like to have done in the last four or five weeks is to have won a tournament. I've come close but I just haven't had the final punch in my game."

If he finds it, Troon's defences will be open. After all, it owes

Tee-of	f tim	es at	Tre	DON
	0955 and 1 Veide (Fr), L I Senior (ALE)	415 i Van de Roberto (US). P	(13)	5 and 084 . B Langer on (Aus)
morrow) and 1135		25.D Love (US),		5 and 0555

0715 (temenrow) and 1135 (Friday) TS Webster, A Cebr-ect (Arg), D Howell 0725 and 1145 T Purcer USS, FROUGH W Viestner (SA) 0745 and 1205 N Seto Linguist, P McChaley, E Watts (US) 1035 and 1455 A Magee (US), P Curry, J Coopes (Ang.) I IDSS and 1515 A Sandywell,
I G Clark, B McCarvern
1108 and 1525 J Remesy (Pit, V Prisips, D Tapping
1115 and 1535 R Karlsson (Seel, T Gogele (Ger), C Parvy (US)
1225 and 1545 J Kernoham
(US), G Chiel Brid, P Hinton
1136 and 0715 W Bladon, A Crear, P Haughrud (Nor)
1145 and 0715 T Warden
1156 and 0715 D Hart, US), 1267 and 0715 D Hart, US),
1267 and 0715 D Bridge (US)
1205 and 0715 D Bridge
(US), J Lomes, E Be (SA), 1215 and 0715 D Edward (Seel, J Furyl: (US), Y Kanelio, (Jappin)
1225 and 0795 D Clarke, S

(Ispeni)
1225 and 0805 D Clinie. S. Surphy, M Martet (Styl)
1226 and 0815 M Ismee, M Martet (Styl)
1226 and 0815 M Ismee, M K Edward (Swe), C Gyal.
1245 and 0825 C Rocca (In)
1245 and 0825 C Rocca (In)
1245 and 0825 C Rocca (In)
1245 and 0825 R Reculating (Ph.) 1255 and 0835 B Racon (IS)
1255 and 0835 B Racon (IS)
1255 and 0835 B Racon (IS)
1255 and 0835 B Racon (IS) Whethe (US), C Pann (July) 1245 and 0825 C Rocca (To, t. Janzer (JS), M Long (KZ) 1255 and 0835 E Pann (US), I Pamedii (Sye), R Green (Aus)

Fair pla

Football

bort transition in the 唯 (307 ** * * **

ஞிக்க . . . :

and the

Mr.

E C

on the many

Smith's do

ipestrianis:::

GENETE MORE LAND

Reference and the second plans in

A Endanish of

տավիլութ, լ

Amplite Mije ferrie

Place on the 18 comme and the mile is the second material for it will

R. .

very well, but that's about it," he said. "The fact I didn't win "If you look back at my first British Open in 1975," Price Langer praying for a tempest to help steady his hand Montgomerie: "I'm playing the best golf of my career" ing, the Lord Jesus, and we killed grips, techniques and putters. Right now I just play hole by hole and day ernhard Langer does not mind what the weather is like at Royal Troon this week. just as long as it suggests that Armageddon is on the way. He will settle for either screaming winds or thunder-crackling skies.

For when it comes to predictions in extreme weather, even Michael Fish could forecast that Langer would take a hand in a golf tournament. Earlier this season it was the German who captured the Benson and Hedges International when a near tornado attempted to take the St Mellion clubhouse on the same path as Dorothy's house to Munchkinland.

Troon may seem benign during its light zephyr days, but this is a trout tickler of a course where tinesse and course management are paramount. "Someone said that no one murders Troon," Lee Trevino once said. The way I played the Open there they couldn't even arrest me for second degree manslaughter. The vagaries of the Ayrshire gales tions," Langer said. "I don't blame the circumstances for not playing well and I don't talk myself into being miserable. I just accept what I find out there and try to make the best out of it. Sometimes the best is a 63 and sometimes it's an 83. Some of that is natural to me and some of it I have to work on."

The ready image of Langer is the Bavarian automaton, a man who would not react if his puppy disappeared under a lorry wheel. If you ask him why he is so undemonstrative, a crevice smile opens up on his face which renders the question rather absurd. "I have lots of emotions and if you ask my caddie I'm sure he will confirm that," he answered. "Maybe I have a different way of showing it because I'm not an explosive person who reacts immediately, but somebody who keeps something inside. It's good that way

Richard Edmondson meets a popular German hoping to add an Open title to the two Masters Green Jackets in his wardrobe back home because if we were all the same it would be boring.

"Some days I'm more nervous than others and a lot of that depends on how well you're playing and how confident you are. When I'm playing well I feel as though I can hit any shot under any circumstance."

Some of Langer's stoicism can be attributed to the chromosomes. His distant family were wealthy farmers from the Czechoslavakiafringed regions of the Sudetenland, an area quickly swallowed up by Nazi Germany's expansion east-

Langer's father, Erwin, was conscripted and assigned as a courier feeding news to the German lines. He was captured by the Russians in 1945 and did not think much of the restorative qualities of his destina-tion when he learned it was a lovely little place called Siberia. Erwin jumped train one night and fled into the woods before resettling in Anhausen, where Bernhard was born. He has since won 49 Tour events and his two majors have come in the Masters, amid the marbled halls (and marbled greens) of Augusta. For morbid fascination, watching Langer putt has often been like peering at the steaming wreckage of a motorway collision.

His most celebrated putt was a sixfooter at Kiawah Island in the 1991 Ryder Cup. It missed, but there was no better man to miss it. "At first it was something that consumed me but, from a Christian point of view, there was only one perfect human be-missed a putt.

"It was better that I had to take that putt rather than any of the others. I probably got over it better and faster than some might have done." These days, with several attacks of the yips and a full reading of the putting Kama Sutra behind him.

Langer is no longer penitent. "I really don't ponder on it at all," he said. I gave it my best and I actually made a good putt there. It felt like a good stroke, but in the end it was just a misread and the green was not like a billiard table. I didn't miss on

There are still a lot of options left with the putting, you know. Nobody would have thought you could put the way I did for seven or eight years with my hand on the forearm. I might revert to what I did a few years ago or try something else they invent. The important thing is that it works. I might still experiment with different week to arrive now. Blow wind, blow. major left in me by day, but it doesn't mean that the yips won't come back again because I've had them four times already." If the broomhandle can sweep all before it at Troon then Langer believes he will have an early celebration before his 40th birthday next month. "You always wonder if you've won your last tournament, especially when you have a few weeks and months when you're not even close to winning," he said.

0915 and 1235 M O'Meass (US), S Measyarra (Japan), S Luke

"I still hope to be in contention in majors and I played fairly well at the Masters, finishing seventh when nobody was close to Tiger. With a bit better form I could have finished second. I think there is still a major left in me, it's just a question of playing well that given week."

For those who appreciate a good guy among men who would not give you the cuttings from between their spikes there is a fervent wish for that Langer: 'I think there is still a has gone backwards, but rather that Super League in Australia has leaped ahead in spectacular fashion. It is a comforting theory, but no one in Australia

- even Super League's true believers - would seriously claim that their game is in the middle

It might, though, look that way when the likes of the

Canberra Raiders and the Brishane Broncos take the field

this weekend. If crowds in Britain were impressed by

Penrith, Auckland and Hunter,

they can expect to be amazed

by the two most exciting club

Although Wigan and London

will have genuine hopes of surprising them, they will also be hoping that spectators will turn out in greater numbers than they have for the competition

so far to see how good the in London will turn out in force," said their chairman, Bar-ry Maranta. "Union people have got excited about John

Bentley and Alan Tait on the Lions' tour, but they wouldn't stand out in a rughy league team.

"We've got players coming now like Lauric Daley, Bradley Clyde, Allan Langer and Steve Renouf who are a million miles ahead of anything that has ever been seen in rugby union. It would be a tragedy if crowds pointing if London and Wigan

one hesitates to extend the argument to Halifax on their form so far in the tournament

- do not give the Dalcys and Langers a game on British soil.

world - and, hopefully, with the exception of Bradford - the game here is bracing itself for more bad news. At least one club arrived there to a welcome that made them feel at home. War-

From the other side of the didn't turn out to see them." Certainly, it would be disap-

"I hope that rugby followers of a new golden age.

sides in the world.

latest visitors are.

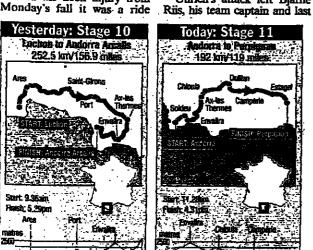

Ullrich produces a tour de force

ROBIN NICHOLL with the Tour de France

Jan Ullrich watched from the Tour de France podium yesterday as the vellow jersey, des-tined for his shoulders, arrived at the summit of the Arcalis mountain. Cedric Vasseur, the Frenchman who last week became the surprise wearer of the leader's colours, relinquished them like a champion on a day

Vasseur crossed the line seven minutes and 44 seconds after Ullrich's triumph 2,340 metres up in the Andorran Pyrenees, having twice fought his way back into a stage that lasted more than seven and three-quarter hours. Chris Boardman spent nearly eight and a half hours in the saddle as he arrived with more than 80 who had suffered over six mountains and 252 kilometres. With his neck injury from when no other rider could live with Ullrich.

through hell for the British cy-clist which plunged him more year's Tour winner, stranded at 3.23 in his wake, but the Dane than one hour and 10 minutes behind the new leader in the overall standings. He finished the day in pain, and exhausted. Vasseur, Boardman's teammate, attacked his challengers on the final climb but was swallowed up as the main contenders opened up. Ullrich responded to the threat of the Frenchman Richard Virenque to storm home over the final 10 kilometres and finish one minute and eight seconds clear of Marco Pantani and Virenque. The German holds a lead of nearly three minutes over Virenque and could be on his way to confirming last year's predic tion by his team manager, Wal-ter Godefroot. After Ullrich had shattered everyone with a 50kph-plus time trial through the vineyards of St Emilion in the Tour to finish second overall, the Belgian manager marked the 23year-old as the 1997 winner. Ullrich's attack left Bjarne was content. "Jan was extraordinary," he said. "When he is in such shape he is the best, but the most important thing is for us to win this Tour. It will be either of us, and there are many stages to come. Whatever, we are going to champion four years ago, is the first German to carry the colours since Klaus-Peter

Thaler in 1978 and only the 10th

since the first success by Kurt

Stoepel in 1932. He is also the same age as the Frenchmen

Jacques Anquetil, Laurent Fignon and Bernard Hinault

when they won their first Tour.

terday became a pilgrimage to pay homage at the memorial to Fabio Casartelli, the Italian rider who died after crashing on the

Col de Portet d'Aspet two years ago. The riders stopped at the monument on the slopes of the mountain to observe a minute's silence as a floral tribute was laid.

The first 45 kilometres yes-

Ullrich, the world amateur win the Tour together.

Ring of the mountains: 1 vironaus 2 Brocherd 160; 3 Ulrich 138; 4 Parseni 100; Consideration Touris: 1 Featina 185h 17mm

British sides braced for the bad news

Dave Hadfield previews the latest round of Super League's world championship

When the Salford coach, Andy Gregory, was asked what he had learned from his trip to Australia, he replied with his characteristic blend of honesty and irreverent wit: "Not to go back."

The resumption of the World Club Championship this weekend is a suitable subject for gallows humour. Salford were merely one of the victims last time around, and how they and other British clubs bounce back over the next couple of weeks will determine whether there is anything to smile about.

Maurice Lindsay, whose off-spring it is, must be obliged to believe that there will be. What the critics forget is that there is still every chance of a British team reaching the final," the Su-per League chief executive said. "If Bradford and Wigan finish top of their group, as I think they will, they will have home draws in the quarter-finals. Those will be massive matches in front of massive crowds and you wouldn't want to bet your house against them both winning.

Teams like London and Wigan, playing at home in the second stage, are both capable of springing surprises. And Bradford are still a fine football team, who will have learnt a lot from their first three matches."

There is no unanimity within the game, however, about the lessons that should be drawn. "Take Andy Farrell. He's devastated," Lindsay said. "He thinks he's let himself, his club and his country down and he's determined to put it right. Other players - even some at the same club - are making excuses for themselves."

Or, as the chief executive of one club - not Wigan - has found, there are players whose attitude is: "Of course they re better. They get paid more than us."

Lindsay has a different, but related, alibi. The gap between the two countries exposed by the first round of WCC matches does not, he believes, demon-Road, although neither team strate that the game in Britain rential rain. It could be an omen.

rington's training pitch in the sunny, beach-side suburb of Cronulla was flooded by tor-

Gregory fined for slur

The Salford coach, Andy Gre- place in their recent league gory, has been fined £1500 - matches against each other. £1000 of it suspended – for calling the referee Robert Connolly "a big-head" and "a poser". writes Dave Hadfield.

Pool 1 in England, Pool 2 in Scotland and Ireland hosting Gregory's outburst, after the Super League defeat by Leeds on 6 July, was said by a Rugby DRAW FOR 1999 RUSEY WORLD CUP-Pool A (To be held in Scotland): South Africa, Europe 3, Europe 4, Repécháge 2. Pool B (To be held in England): New Zestand, Europe 2, Europe 5, Repécháge 1. Pool C (To be held in France): France, Pacific 2, America 2, Africa 1. Pool D (To be held in Wales): Wales, America 1, Pe-cific 3, Asis 1. Pool E (To be held in Ire-tand): Pacific 1, Europe 1, America 3, Europe 6. League hearing to have "caused hurt and injury to the game". Gregory, who admitted the charge, will not have to pay the major part of the fine if he stays out of trouble until the end of July next year. Salford's Western Samoan forward, Lokeni Savelio, has been taken off the transfer list after having a change of heart

Four lower division clubs -Hull KR and Swinton of the First Division plus Batley and Doncaster from the Second have been severely repri-and deciding that he wants to stay at the club.

Batley and Doncaster have also been fined, The Brisbane Broncos hooker, John Plath, will miss his club's World Club Championship matches against Wigan and his old team, London. Plath has been found guilty of a spear tackle in Australia and suspended for two games. The former Brisbane player, Butch Fatnowna, has joined London from Workington Town, for whom he has played for the last two seasons. The full-back or centre has yet to secure a new work permit and is not expected to come into contention for the WCC matches.

Oldham's new Australian, lan Russell, will make his club debut in the Championship game against North Queensland Cowboys at Boundary Park on manded over brawls that took Friday.

Fair play reprieve on the cards

Smith's double act boosts European ambitions

Players who behave on the pitch totting up bookings. Previously, times having to appear before will be rewarded under a new penalty points the velow cards. In TA disciplinary committee whome announced by the Protocology of the Protocology of the Protocology of the points of four points. But the situation regarding that Association yesterday. From with a maximum of four points, seadings off remains unthis sensor, anyone who goes five for the sensors misdefle anounced.

Equestrianism

GENEVIEVE MURPHY

reports from Peterborough

Robert Smith took the top two places in vesterday's Daewoo

Grand Prix qualifier at the East of England Show and could now be on course to fulfil a long-standing ambition by earning a place on the British team for next month's European Cham-

Attractics

GREAT BRITAIN TEAM (World Championships, Althon, 1-10 August MEN: 100m; I Macha Philipsen, 1-10 August MEN: 100m; I Macha Philipsen, 1-10 August MEN: 100m; I Macha Philipsen, 1-10 Edge of Edge o

. .

111

The scheme means players on Players will be banned after just the verge of suspension will be five yellow cards - last season fence. able to delay or even prevent a a player would have to be han being imposed by staying booked at least six times, before

Hansuer and was also second on Orthos, who is owned by the British team manager, Ronnie

With three trials now decided. Michael Whitaker (on Virtual Village Ashley) and Mark

Armstrong (on Primma) share

first place on 18pts, with Smith on Tees Hanauer (15). Since the selectors are committed to in-incorporated the third of four all points in the British squad, anyone jumping it clear might

K Hormes (Ealing, Southell and Maddleseut 27, 9, 1500ne; Holmes, J Perely (Bastol) 23, 0, 5,000ne; P Radicifie (Bedford and Co) 23, 10, Marmitone; S Goldsmin (Earnburg) Woolen Mill) 38, 1; C Huntgs-Road (Hornech) 33, 2; A Mart (Newport) 36, 0, 100m hardises; D Alangeen (Haepoot Harter) 22, 1; A Thorp (Wagan) 24, 5, 400m hardises; S Gonnel (Essex Jusce) 30, 45, 146, humps D Mart (Bromley Ladeet) 29, 38, Long Janus J Mere (Coventry Southe) 26, 5, Triple Jamps D Mart (Bromley Ladeet) 29, 38, Long Janus J Mere (Coventry Southe) 25, 5, 15, M Griffith (Woodsor, Staugh and Direct) 25, 15, M Griffith (Woodsor, Staugh and Direct) 25, 15, Short J Oaleet (Covydon Herries) 39, 78, Diseases S Drew (Survival of Covydon), 18 Janus 19, 18

Selemence most (Selemence, Sp. Mont: Mon's 100m: 1 L Cristie (GB) 10.12sec. High Jump: J Solumeyor (Cuba) 2.34m.

China has pulled out of the Indonesian Open tournament accusing the host na-from of failing to assue team visas on time.

Badminton

third on Orthos (17) and fourth

Massarella.

Smith won this contest, which cluding the top three on over-

In oking struck from the records. ings will now be of equal value. and suspensions will still come in more games.

Steve Double, an FA

International Championships these riders will be eager to re-Team Trials, on Senator Tees tain their places. be in for a great shock if they thought the actual champi-

Armstrong, fourth yester-day, feels his horse can cope with such a challenge. Stanley and Jean Powell's nine-year-old mare Primma has shown consistent form in the trials and at four overseas shows, where she completed each grand prix with small side for a championship trial. Michael Bullman, chairman of selectors, thought that

The Premier League club Manchester Glants have signed the former Birm-ingham Bullets forward, Emiko Etete, from the German club Augsburg.

Yorkshire have released Alex Wharf, the 22-year-old all-rounder, at his own re-quest. Wharf had made only seven first-class appearances following his debut in 1994.

In 1994.

Jason Lewry, Sussex's 26-year-old left-arm swing bowler who has not played this season following an operation on a stress fracture in his back, is hoping Surrey's Ben Holloeke has been named in the England Under-19 squad for this summer's senes against Zimbabwe.

Yesterday's course was on the no more than one error.

Rasketball

Cricket

But there is some bad news for players, because the FA ban after eight bookings, with bave launched a new method of players who are booked 11 own records with good behaviour, Hopefully, it will be easier for the fans to understand."

Manchester United-complained last season that their players were more likely to be tull games without receiving a The points system has been tween one and three games suspended than those at many vellow or red card will have a ditched though and all book depending on the offence - other clubs, because they played

"Under the scheme the players have the option of having a spokesman, said: "This will sim- booking removed by playing plify and streamline the situation within the laws of the game.

onships would be no more de-manding. But with faults well distributed around the course,

Smith felt that Alan Oliver had

Armstrong will be contesting the fourth trial, to be held at the

New Forest and Hampshire

Show on 31 July. Smith and Michael Whitaker will then be jumping at Gijon in Spain, where they can also earn points through good scores in the Na-designed a clever track.

England look set to meet the All Blacks in the group stage of the 1999 World Cup after yester.

This would give the Irish th day's draw for the competition.

Rugby Union

Two European qualifying places are available in Pool B. and England are expected to take one of the spots for the group matches to be played at fwickenham. The All Blacks are the seeded country in the fourstrong pool - one of five in the 20-team tournament - whose schedule was finalised in the draw in Dublin.

England's All Black

test in World Cup

In Pool E. Ireland are likely

This would give the Irish the to meet Australia at Lansdowne has made sure of a seeded ap-chance to avenge their 19-18 defeat by Australia in the 1991

quarter-finals at Lansdowne

The qualifying rounds will be played in November 1998, with

DRAW FOR 1999 RUGBY WORLD CUP:

Carel du Plessis, the Spring

boks coach, has made four changes - all in the pack - for his team to take on the All

Blacks in Saturday's opening

Tri-Nations Championship Test

in Johannesburg. Naka Drotske replaces the injured James Dalton at hooker, while Marius

Hurter is a surprise inclusion ahead of Dawie Theron at Pool 3.

England have played New Zealand in the last two World Curs and lost on both occasions. In 1995, England were defeated 45-29 by the All Blacks in the semi-finals in Cape Town and were beaten 18-12 in the first group game of the 1991 World Cup at Twickenham.

The other groups see the seeded South Africans playing in Pool A at Murrayfield, Five Nations champions France in Pool C on home soil while host nation Wales in Pool D are set to kick off their challenge in front of their own supporters. tighthead prop.

Les Cusworth has signed a five-year con-tract as director of rugby with the Courage League Division Four champl-ons, Worcester.

Orrell have signed two insh internationals; the Garryowen No B, Ben Cronin, and centre Brian Walsh, a 27-year-old instand A player from Cork Constitution.

Mike Golding, in Group 4, was on course to win overall the BT Challenge last night as well as the final leg from Boston to Southampton. Golding has won five of the state of t the six legs bround the world and was comfortably ahead of the man who was

SPORTING DIGEST

Rugby Union

Urnents with the Spanish football fed-eration which state that after 22 July Romario cannot play for any other club, Montante LATE RESULTS: Friendless St. Petrok's Americ 1 Huddersted Ct Washford 1 Dev-ington 3; Duwch O Futtern 1; Bey Wanderson O Servicion 2, LFA President's Cap Frant Bohem-ans 1 Shelbourre 0. Major Langue Scoper New York-New Jersey MetroStars 4 Colorado Reputs 1. Senetor Tees Haneuer (R Smith) deer, 50.55eec; 2 Senetor Ontres (R Smith) deer, 52.26; 3 Summ's Occar (T Smidistel) cleer, 55.27; Standings on beans trible; Le Vintual Village Ashley (M Whitak-er) and Primme (M Armstrong) 18pts; 3 Senetor Parkers (R Smith) 7.2

heland's John Twomey was beaten 15-3 by Sandro Cuorno, of Italy, in the first round of the men's épée competition at the World Championships in Cape Town yesterday. Football Bristol City's out-of-contract striker Kevin Nugers has agreed a two-year deal with Cerdiff. The fee will be determined by a tribunal. The Watford striker Kevin Phillips yes-terday aggred for Sunderland, who were relegated last sesson, in a deal that may be worth more than £500,000. Ray Houghton, the Republic of Ireland mutileder, has joined First Division Reading as player-coach.

Middleshrough have sold at 26,500 sea-son tickets available at the Riverside Sta-dium despite their relegation to the First John Aldridge, manager of Tranmere, is set to sign Ray Wallace from Stoke City for £200,000 today.

Charlie Ermolenko, of the United States, has agreed to join the Elite League Club King's Lynn. The 28-year-old Californian makes his debut for his new club tonight Valencia said yesterday that Romario against Wolverhampton, the team who dropped him earlier this month.

Ferinais
Jana Novotra, the top seed, yesterday pulled out of the Czech Open complaining of chest muscle pains.
CZECH OPEN WOMEN'S CLAY COURT TOURNAMENT (Pregbe) Singles First resort (Cz Rep unless stated): D Chisdicus th M Nakoopkva
6-76-06-11 N Lousandsished (Sen) of S Nemous 3-6-2-6-2: R Bottops It I Metrotarous 6-4-4-5
6-44; R Dragonie filomi tr M Ezptousia (Pol 6-3 4-6-6-44; Rucharous it R Pelisionsus 6-3-6-1
M Menstra (Aut) bit is Studenthous (South 6-0
6-2: J Nugri (Sk) bit O Berghanethhous (Beag)
6-3-6-2: B Schulz-McCartly (Neth) bit R Znoelsous (Slocaly 8-2-6-1: W Mentrels (Ger) bit P der (Sem) 3-6-7-5-6-4: V Mentrels (Ger) bit P

both second into the finish and second overall, Simon Walker, in Toshiba.

TODAY'S FIXTURES

Langrowa 6-4 6-3; R Simpson (Can) bt K Boogert (Neph) 7-5 6-1; C Cretina (Rom) bt A Gera 6-2 0-1 (default); M Daze-Ofina (Arg) bt P Survac (Arg) 6-2 6-2; L Courtos: (Bel) bt J Kanderr (Ger) 6-2 7-6; K Habsudove bt G Leon-Greba (Spi 6-4 6-3 Seg30 NASOVA GRAND TOURSHAMENT (Nagoya, Japan) 10th day (of 15); Misugicato Iwon 6, lost 41 tr Yernato (2-8); Kooryu (4-9) it Harmostima (7-3); Erao (7-3) of Njobushuan (5-5); Sheshima (5-4) or Rebo (5-5); Memouri (5-5) br Oojon (3-7); Assenouse (5-5) th Corpor (6-1); Minotum (5-5) or Garyu (6-4); Minotum (5-5) or Garyu (6-4); Minotum (5-5); Dejma (3-7) br Nobestima (5-6) th Resemble (5-5); Nestmeth (6-5); Nestmeth (6-6); Nestmeth (6-7); Nest 7-6: N Historutions bt G Leon-Green (Spi 6-4 6-3. MERICEDES CUP (Statistizard) Mon's singless, first round: G Blanco (Spi bt H Artio, Inkari 7-5 7-8: F Cheet (Spi bt M Guspalsson (Swel 6-3 1-6 6-1; K Nucera (Stonals bt N Neter (Cerl 1-2 Iret harti; A Portes (Spi bt C Rund (Non' 5-7 6-0 7-6; M Larsson (Swel bt D Elser's IGer' 6-3 6-4; F Melegen (Br) bt A Rodulescu (Ger' 6-1 6-3; J Senchetz (Spi bt M Notnen (Swe) 6-3 7-6. Second round: G Nuerten (Br) bt J Proposalid (Ser) 6-7 6-4 6-4; A Corrette (Sp) bt M Goether (Ger) 7-5 6-1; W Ferriam (SA) bt M Saner (Ger) 3-6 6-0 6-4.

Goeffiner (Ger) 7-5-6-1: W Femeriza (SA) bt M Sanner (Ger) 3-6-6-0-6-4.
LESGE MASON CLASSIC (Meabingtons) Mean's singless, first meands it Caristen (Den) bt C Meant (US) 7-6-6-3: M Marriell (II) bt 1 Lystocat (Croat
7-6-7-6: V Species (US) bt 8 Sement (Fr 2-6-6-1
5-1: N Goother (SA) bt 6 Elbe (Arg) 4-6-6-4-6-4
F Wither (Neth) bt M Manny (Bela) 7-6-7-6: G PozzIID bt 6 Gearm (US) 6-1-7-5: G Solves (Fr) bt 1 House
(JS) 3-6-6-3-6-1: Santh (Aus) bt M Bhupanh
(JS) 3-6-6-3-6-1: Santh (Aus) bt M Bhupanh
(JS) 3-6-6-3-6-1: N Moyon (US) bt 5-Byen
(US) 6-1-6-4: D Namion (SA) bt X Lithert (SA) 6-3
0-8-7-5: D Whatston (US) bt R Lithert (SA) 6-3
0-8-7-5: D Whatston (US) bt R Lithert (SA) 6-3
6-2: A Merimor (Rus) bt R R Lithert (SA) 6-3 6-2: A Merimor (US) bt A Firm (US) 7-6-6-4:
B Shedon (US) bt A Kim (US) 7-6-3: D Scala
(II) bt P Meizinge (US) 6-1-4-6.3: D Flach (US)
bt C Castin (b) 6-2-6-2.

PRIERMA HUMEL, WOMEN'S TOURISHED HE PRIERMA HUMEL, WOMEN'S TOURISHED HE PRIERMA HUMEL HE SERVE HE SERV

RACING RESULTS

BEVERLEY

BEVERLEY

2.00: 1. HIGH SPRITS (T & Durcan) 6-1;
2. Sharp Deed 9-1; 3. Giptly Princeas 9-2; fev. 14 run. 9-2; fev. Star Turn (eth). ½.
1%; (T Easterby, Mation). Totals 27: 90; 22:80, 13.90, 21:80, DF; 26:40.0. CSF: 53:93. The 25:40.0. CSF: 53:93. The 25:40.0. CSF: 53:93. The 25:40.0. CSF: 53:93. The 25:40.0. CSF: 55:53. 30: 1. CAUTION (J Forture) 10-11 fev. 2.
200: 1. CGE.N.K. (B Doyle) 9-1; 2. Hawait 5-2 fax; 3. Three For A Pound 5-1. 8 run. ½.
1%; (M Johnston, Middaham). Total: 21:320; 25:306. SF: 23:00: 1. CAUTION (J Forture) 7-1; 3. Miss Eliminator 12-1. 11 run. 2-1 fax Patsy Culsyth (5th). N. 2½; (T Cathuel, Westmagnan). Total: 28:20; 22:10, 25:20, 23:80. DF: 25:51.0. CSF: 24:90.1 The 23:28:80 (part word)

(1. Capacia, Warngard). The 19.20 (1. Tic. 23.8.80 (part won)
4.00: 1. ARMAN SPART (1 Walarna) 4-1 p. tar; 2. Hightield Fizz 10-1: 3. Batabannon 91. 11 ran. 4-1 p. far Hasta La Vista (Srb.). No.
4. U Byr. Thirsto, Totar: £4.00; £1.60, £3.60, £1.80. Dr.: £26.40. CSF. £40,79. Trcae: £31.458. True £50.60.
4.30: 1. YOUNG BEN (6 Parkin) 33-1; 2.
Recompholato 18-1: 3. Stoolon Kias 6-1; 4. Superfific 5-1: 30 ran. 5-2 isy Ned's Boronzz (Sth.). Nr. 1/1, 27/. U Walarnaght, Matton).
Totar £63.70; £1.080, £4.40, £1.50, £10.50.
DF: £450.80, CSF: £491.41. Tricast:
£3.314.17. Tace £1.564.20 (part won).

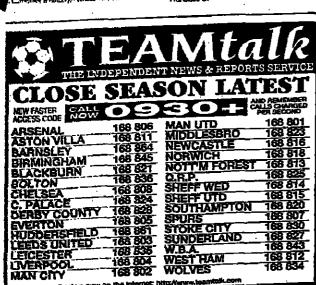

5.00: 1. LETS BE FAIR (E Johnson) evens far; 2. Cambrian Cadet 100-30; 3. Half A Knicker 12-1. 10 nan. 9, 11/... Li Hanson, Wetherby, Toke: £2.20; £1.10, £1.70, £2.10. DF: £3.90, CSF: £4.03. Ter: £11.20. Jackpot: Not won (pool of £5.349.42 carried forward to Sandour raday). Places of: £69.80, Quadpot: £514.10. Place &: £443.04, Place 8: £208.44. BRIGHTON

BRIGHTON

2.15: 1. DISTINCT VINTAGE (R Hughes) 9-4; 2. Mystery Suest 5-1; 3. Stey Mountain 33-1. 8 ren. 2-1 far Linie Fizz (5th). 9. rk. (R Harmon, East Everleigh, Tota: 12.90; 51.10. 52.40. 05: 52.90. 65: 515.05. 2. 45: 1. BETTRON (Dene O'Neil) 100-30; 2. Private Seed: 15-8 fax; 3. Persian Fortame 13-2. 9 ren. Hd. 4. (R Harmon, East Everleigh, Tota: 16.80; 12.50. 61.10. 61.90. DF: 17.10. 05: 52.50. 61.10. 61.90. DF: 17.10. 05: 52.50. fr. 11.30. After a staw-ants' inquisy the piscings remained unableted. 3.15: 1. RAMAR O'NEILLY (G. Duheld) 1-2 fax; 2. Stems 7-1.3 ran. 12. R Wilsoms, Newmaniett. Totas: 11.50. DF: 12.40. 05F: 13.67. NR-Mascandust. Only two finished. 3.45: 1. SOOTY TERN (R Firerch) 9-2: 2. Victory Team 5: 3. Grahmass Choice 12-1. 8 ran. 11-4 fav Night Wink (8th). 1. 7. U Bradley, Chepatow). Totas: 54.40; 51.70. 12.00. 52: 1.50. DF: 17.90. CSF: £24.48. Th-cest: £228.75. Cast. £2:3.75.
4.55: 1. DOUBLE EIGHT (D Holland) 5-2;
2. Cheek To Cheek 5-1: 3. Looking-toracalinhow 6-4 (sv. 5 ran. 2y., 1/4. [B Hals.

Lambourn). Total: £2.40; £1.80, £2.00, DF: £6.30, CSF: £13.54. NP: Snow Carricol. 4.45; 1. BARBASON (Cardy Mons) 4-1. R lay; 2. Stand Tall 9-1; 3. Octavis Hill 10-1. 15 mm. 4-1 g to Mr Cube. 15. Schol. 651 Moore. toy 2. Stanta Tan 9-11 3. Oceans non 10-10 IS non. 4-11 few M Cube. 11. Sh-hit. GEL Moore, Beginon, Totae £4,90; £1.80, £3.70, £3.60, DF: £25.80. CSF. £39.08. Troost: £330,21 Troc. £273-50. After a Stewards' analysis the plac-ing, remained unalismed.

Find us now on the internet http://www.toamtok.com

BASSEDAN

AMERICAN LEAGUE Boston 18 Detrot 4: Battonor 9 Toronto 5: Clovelend 3 New York Yankess 2 (10 Indiga); Nerses Cay 2 Minauleon 1; Handga); Conormol 4 St. Louis 2: Postungs 5 New York Mers 4; Atlanta 10; Polipadelphus 8; House 19 Clarago Outo 7 (15 Innings); Con Angeles 14 Cotorado 12 (10 Innings); San Diego 5 San Francisco 3. con resolutor. Situatio and Francia.

WORKEN: 100m. S hooks, iStatember: Bornell
20, 37. Millionedison (Montro), Sough and Elemi
24, 16. 200m; F. Morre (Burnheim 22, 10, 8)
4-5. 400m; D harve (Burnheim 22, 10, 8)
4-1. 400m; D harve (Burnheim 22, 10, 8)
4-1. 400m; Britania (Burnheim 22, 8)
4-1. 400m; Britania (Burnheim 22, 8)
4-1. 400m;

SUMMER'S Senes against Zimbabwe.
ENGLAND U-19 SQULUD (cos-day series v Zimbabwe, Augustic A Pinterf (Lancs, cost), O Starlo (Middl, S Patient (Essel), D Sales (Northsta), B Holinolate (Surrey), D Neah (Middl, Z Morris (Yoris), B Cheker (Gizen), C Read (Gioucs, wid), R Stalabethan (Yoris), O Read (Gioucs, wid), R Stalabethan (Yoris).

ANN RISK TROPHY (one day): Bristote Gioucs-bershire 222 for 7 (D R Hewton 108). Wores-bershire 137 (K P Sneese 4-37). Bioacestemhire won by 155 fulls.

BOYES STORES CHALLENGE (cose day): Scarborough: Yorishan 300 for (50 overs; A McCash 114, G M Hammton 60, T 8 M de Leede 4-53). Nethertends 218 for 8 (50 overs; K van Noorwijk E2). Yorishire won by E3 nass.

SECOND 12 CHAMPTONSHIP (Rest day of four) Eggestrianism

EAST OF ENGLAND SHOW (Petasbarough): Des-woo Grand Prix qualifier (monrporating in-ternal prix qualifier (monrporating in-TODAY'S

The number of pounds bet at William Hill on Seve Ballesteros winning the Open at Troom, which starts tomorrow. The Spaniard's odds to win the must return from Brazil and play for them next season despite his retuctance to do so. The Spanish club has lodged doc-

Football INTERNATIONAL TOURNAMENT: 3/4th place play-off (8.0); Final (8.15) (at Lansdowne Road). ROSO): FREENDLY MATCHES: Crewe v Botton Ever-tron v Rangers Eveter v QPR (7:30): Gretna v Cartele (7:30): Kettering v Peterborough (7:30): Krigstorian v Barnet (7:30); Newcastle Town v Ppr Vale (7:30): Perzance v Laicea-ter (7:15): Suston Ltd v Fulham (7:30); Yeovid v Barnatey; York v Middlesbrough (7:30).

Cricket
BRITANOC ASSURANCE COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP (first day of four, 11.1); Chettenbare Gloucesterstrire v Derbyshire; Canterbury; Kort v Leicestershire; Old Tratford: Lencashre v Sussex; Rorthampton: Northamptonshire v Seson Trent Bridge: Northamptonshire; Guiddford: Surrey v Hampshire; Searborough: Yorkshire v Durism.
TETLEYS CHALLENGE SERIES (first day of threa, 11.0); Cardiff Glemogan v Austraho.
TOUR MATCH (first day of three, 11.0);
Worcester; Worcestershire v Pakstan A.

Scored XI CHAMPIONSHIP (First day of three, 11.0); South Shields: Durham v Leicestershire; Chelmsford: Essex v Lancisme; Southeaster (C. Middleser v Goucestershire; Wellinghorough School: Northampionshire v Nottinghamshire; Hove: Sussex v Glamorgan; Malesowen; Worgestershire v Derbyshire. SECOND XI CHAMPIONSHIP (First day of Rughy League TOUR MATCH: Ontario y Wales (et Hamilton,

PREMIER LEAGUE: Long Eaton v Hull (7.45).

Leader of the pack yellow jersey, page 23

Black angered by selectors' 'lack of decency'

MIKE ROWBOTTOM

Athletics Correspondent

Britain's selectors yesterday defended their decision to offer the final individual 400 metres place at next month's World Championships to Jamie Baulch rather than the British team captain, Roger Black.

Malcolm Arnold, British athletics' performance director, said the decision to include Baulch instead of the 31-yearold Olympic silver medallist virus infection - had been case I would have said, fair grieved that he had not been given a chance to show his fitness by running in Belgium on Saturday, three days before the selection deadline. The man who was nominated ear-Christie as Britain's team captain was also angry about hav-ing to learn of the decision through the press, rather than receiving a personal call. "I might have gone to Hechwho has been suffering from a tel and run 45.5sec, in which unanimous, and based on form.

Black, however, was ag enough, give the place to Jamie," Black said yesterday.

Timight have ma 44.6 and felt great. But it doesn't matter now. I haven't been given an opportunity because they have closed the door completely.

"Jamie has run OK, but he hasn't broken 45 seconds this lier this year to succeed Linford year, which I did 12 times last year. I don't think I have to prove myself as an athlete and they have not really listened to the medical situation I have had." Black, who will now go to Athens as captain and a member of the relay team, has can-

Baulch finished third in 45.02 behind the two automatic qualifiers, Iwan Thomas and Mark Richardson, in 45.02sec.

"The thing that really upset me is that no one contacted me to tell me about this." Black added. "No one had the decency or the courtesy just to phone me and tell me Sorry Roger, we have made the decision, you're not going to be happy with it, but we just want you to know concentrate on training. He paid the price for not being at the trials, where the 23-year-old no way to treat people and if it's going to happen to myself as Olympic silver medallist and team captain who has been around for 12 years, then it can happen to anyone.

I am very angry - it is just bad man management. It is as if they're saying 'Sorry Roger, we don't respect your illness'." Arnold - who briefly floated the idea that Black could be offered a wild card for Athens before an International Ama-teur Athletic Federation official ruled it out - denied that people, we are terribly sorry. but it does not lessen our regard for Roger Black. He is a great athiete. "If we did not pick Jamie Baulch, what message are wesending out to young athletes who are on the verge of a brilliant career?"

Baulch, who won the world indoor championship silver medal this year and earned a silver with the Olympic relay team, is a highly talented run-ner who will undoubtedly acquit himself well in Athens. But Black, who would not run in should have been given a chance. And the failure to inform him of the decision was particularly shoddy given the amount of time he had dedicated in the last two years to the formation of the British Athletes' Association, the body formed to foster good relations between individual athletes, sponsors and the federation. Baulch was naturally delighted at the news. "I couldn't believe it when I got the letter in the post this morning," he

this was the case. "If we upset Athens unless he knew he could hours. Every time I answered the do himself and the team justice, phone yesterday I was hoping it But this takes all the pressure but then that's athletics."

The team reflects the suc cessful weekend enjoyed by Britain's younger generation a the European Under 23 Cham-pionships. Two of the gold medallists get individual plac - Julian Golding in the 200m and Allison Curbishley at 400m; as does the salver medallist in the high burdles, Diane Allahorcen

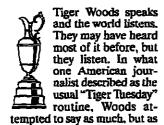

Great Britain team for

THE 126TH OPEN: With all eyes and ears on him, the American is giving little away as he prepares for tomorrow's opening round

Talk is cheap on Tiger Tuesday

ANDY FARRELL

reports from Royal Troon

Among the brief soundbites was what is rapidly becoming his catchphrase. "My expectation is Masters champion said. "That's and take pictures." my goal, to win every tournament. It's the philosophy of my programmed performance. In hastening to downplay a possible rivalry with the only other Major winner under 30, Ernie Els, Wood demolished his earlier thesis. "It is so hard for two or three players to be at the top in every tournament they play together," he said. Where Woods did open up. perhaps as he is away from home, was on the death threats and hate mail he has received. "They have been numerous but that is nothing unusual," he said. When you are playing a sport in which you are not the majority but the minority, of course there is going to be some ani-mosity. That's the way it goes. It was like that for Arthur Ashe and Jackie Robinson, Until we un-

Denselv-packed spurge

6 Bishop at spa resort has

11 Ether may product this redness of skin (8)

bread rolls (4)

10 Spring-lock? (7)

9 Instrument used by opening up in spinney

many opening veins (6)

12 Appealing, like royalty 2

13 Man from Indiana, for 3 example, met new riders in a bad way (12)

Julius Caesar in three

16 A performance of spring (6)

short acts (4,4,4)

19 Doctor incarcerated in derstand and respect everyone for the kind of person they are, not by looking at their pigmenand I was absolutely mobbed," he said. Woods got knocked down and cut under the eye by a pen someone was holding out for an autograph. The response to the 21-year-old phenomenon has been slightly less hectic at Troon. "I have noticed people They understand you are here to play and not sign autographs when he won in 1867, Woods It was the unqualified nature could become the youngest of the statement that belied the winner this century of the championship. "This is probably the biggest tournament to win. You get the best players in the world here, and you play on traditional courses. That's what it's all > when he will play with Bernhard Langer and Steve Elkington.

tation, that's going to be there."
His worst moment to date at a tournament came at the Phoenix Open in January. "The security completely broke down here have been very respectful. Although he cannot match Young Tom Morris, who was 17

For the challenge of playing in the wind. Woods spent last week altering his swing to make it shallower. "My swing plane is better and my ball flight has come down a little," he said. "I should be OK." As on Monday, Woods set off for a practice round at lunchtime, which suits his 1.05pm tee-off tomorrow,

But for the past two days, the wind has been such that the front nine has been into it. rather than downwind, which is

THE INDEPENDENT CROSSWORD

20 One who has spread in 6

Now one is in the soup!

means shelling out (8) DOWN

needs help on track (8) Bloke with little time to Brush with no head?

24 Bounty in calm seas?

25 Betting before final

Bannister, we hear.

hanker after (5)

His computer work

tions shrink (7.7)

might make organisa-

Room for spectators in Towcester racecourse

Mexico (8)

Polish craft (7)

Driving ambition: Under the attentive gaze of spectators, Tiger Woods practices his altered swing at Royal Troon yesterday the prevailing situation. The forecast is for it to switch tomorrow. If it does, Woods may go for the greens at the first three holes with his driver and capitalise on his enormous length. "I might try," he said. "But if the wind is against, I am not going to because it makes no sense." The game plan, un-like at Augusta or indeed in front of the media, will have to be adaptable this week. When he found the rough on the right of the first, a spectator growled: "You'll use turn this

In a playful moment at the place into a pitch and putt."

THEOREGE AGENO

BREGIOUSMENA RIESEMIR ABBE BO A W LAWS INCAMER

Tchaikovsky's sixth vari able, perhaps? Try an-other Russian! (9)

Apparent that hospital

case loses heart (6)

arranged brings divi-

14 Swing music groups on 15 Constellation to north these frequencies? (9)

that has a tail harmful to people picking it up abroad (7) 18 Just left? Appalling! (6)

21 Had an aversion to that bit of a bash at Edghas-

A run comedienne

dends (8,6)

17 Rascals in travels

ton (5)

sixth, Woods tested the wind by . This is a course on which you hitting a wedge shot as high as have to know your lines and he could. The ball landed at his feet. Woods played at St Andrews two years ago, and at Royal Lytham, where his 66 in the second round was his lowest score as an amateur in a pro tournament. Troon is proving a new experience, however. "At the two other courses, I was able to see the golf course in front of me," he said. "Here there are a couple of blind shots. Mark O'Meara and Cookie [John Cook] played here last time, but they didn't really remember where to go.

trust them.'

The course, according to Greg Norman, is the "healthiest" for an Open the Australian has seen. "The greens and the fairways are in perfect shape, he said. Having already played the course twice while he has been in Scotland, Norman has spent the last two days fishing in the Highlands with his children. His countryman, Ian Baker-Finch, will make a decision this morning after a final practice round. The 1991 champion, who has since gone into a long-term slump - at one point he went 16 months without making a cut has been taking anti-inflamma-tories for a shoulder injury. Scotland's Dean Robertson is standing by as the first alternate. Norman said: "Everybody who plays golf hates to see Ian going through this slump, and it is the same with Seve [Ballesteros]. But he wants to get out of it. He's got to climb that mountain all over again and he has the support of every play-

his knee proved inconclusive

Chris Waddle is set to complete his third transfer of the week as Burnley manager by signing Leeds midfielder Mark

Milan have received two offers from English clubs for the

Italy midfielder Roberto Baggio, Adriano Galliani, the vice-president of Milan, said yesterday. Galliani did not name the clubs and said the offers had neither been accepted nor rejected. He added Milan had also received an offer from Serie A side Bologna for Baggio, who has said he will leave Milan before the start of next season.

Derby County had made an offer for Baggio earlier this month, but negotiations between the two sides failed to Sony are to pay £1m for a three-year advertising deal with the Premier League. It will mean Sony Playstation logos at at all matches played in the FA

The deal is in addition to produce an agreement.

Ford for around £250,000.

Monty's motto, Order of play, page 23

Nicklaus keeps his run going

Despite speculation this year that 1997 would end Jack Nicklaus's run of playing consecutive major championships, the Golden Bear flew into Prestwick Airport late on Monday evening, writes Andy Farrell.

Nicklaus, 57, yesterday played a practice round on the course where he made his Open debut in 1962, shooting 80 in the first round and finishing 34th. The three-times winner will be playing in his 36th Open, his 143rd consecutive major as a professional and his 151st in all.

Garage

P

R Paris 哪个位:""

2000円出します。

The rest of the obcu, - to be the transfer of note: All of

WATER CONTRACTOR

Mark Creative the priming.

Backahout (a. 15%)

property of heavy and Egipten, penit latt ...

had by 12 ven . in

हैंबाबी वा १८८११वर्ड ८१५ गृह

Talk Later Line

led brown in the

The price where s

Balan land a sala

e about a Ladent

aging a length a

Colonation of the second

gaf e pape et un sten

the time to de

per a up jud fire

your hand rout.

d States Postna

launcher) a th

Jon Bestelling

What killer Andr

Minim that prince

the lighted Lucians

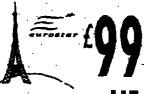

anni Verence Florada politic eca Mala manna and

ded wanted present

Athur Research

Resource of the

DEPARTURES JULY & AUGUST

or 2 nights B&B midweek . Grand Hotel de Paris * Additional nights £13 .

• ! night B&B Fri & Sat £ 1 15

 2 nights B&B midweek £130 *  Novanox

434

Additional nights £30

 ★★★ Amstel Botel Additional nights £29
Heathrow, Gatwick & Manchester

London and regional airport departures available Centrally located hotels with ensuite bathrooms. Exclusive & charming hotel upgrades available

Barcelona, Bruges, Budapest, Dublin, Florence, Lisbon, Istanbul, Madrid,

All prices do NOT include any airport taxes. ALL OFFERS SUBJECT TO AVAILABILITY

Telephone for best prices to:

Nice, Rome, Seville and Venice

ons phone Mon to Thu 09.00 to 18.00 krs, Fridays 09.08 - 14.00 krs

Leeds leave five behind in preparation for sale

David Ginola completed his £2m move to Spurs yesterday.

igning a four-year deal at White

Hart Lane to end an unhappy clubs in England and I've always known that they have a great name in world football. The big challenge for the club and for me this season is to get into the European Cup and a good sea-son for me will be to belp them

Ginola is set to link up with few months with Newcastle. "Tottenham was always my first choice," Ginola said. "They're one of the biggest

Football

CATHERINE RILEY

When Leeds departed for a preseason tour of Sweden yes day, they left behind five first-team players in preparation for an Elland Road clear-out. Ian Rush, Tomas Brolin, Carlton Palmer, Tony Dorigo and Brian Deane were all miss-ing from the 20-man squad, while Tony Yeboah has not returned after the summer break. "There is no point in these players going to Sweden if there is any chance that they could be leaving to join other clubs," George Graham, the Leeds manager, said. "If there is any transfer activity while we are away, they will be around to sort out their future. I want people who are fully committed to will be here in the short term."

his new team-mates today in Norway, where they are currently on a pre-season tour. Danny Murphy has finally completed his delayed move into Europe.

to Liverpool from Crewe. The 20-year-old midfielder had been due to sign last Leeds United, not players who week, but the transfer was put on hold after X-rays on

Celtic foreign problem another foreign arrival to Parkhead as their general manager, Jock Brown, attempts to patch up problems with two of his Continental players. Italian striker Paolo Di Canio says he wants to leave the club new coach, Wim Jansen, declared he was impressed with the a delay in a £2.5m deal.

every club ground and on show Celtic are preparing to welcome former Milan player's attitude. Carling Premiership. Brown, the man charged with keeping Celtic's foreign imports

He also hopes to sign the Swedish striker Henrik Larsson from Feyenoord today, despite Sony's recent £10m sponsorship happy, may now fly to Portugal to meet up with striker lorge of the Champions' League over Cadete, whose absence through illness is causing concern.

the next three years.

Alvin Martin, the former West Ham and England defender, has been named as the new manager of Second Division Southend. More football, page 23 © Published by Newspaper Publishing PLC. (Canada Square, Canary Wharf, London E14 3DL, and printed at Mirror Colour Print, St ool Avenue, Okaham. Back issues available from Historic Newspapers, 01988 840370.